TAFT AND SHERMAN FOR PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENT.

The most superbly generaled Republican National Convention ever held since the Republican party was formed has given to the country this magnificent and winning ticket—for which God be praised! The convention has emerged from a most difficult situation with the success of great achievement, the honor of unassailable fairness and the prospect of a great victory.

The ticket that swept the country in 1908 will carry it again in November, 1912, for it has merited and has won the country's confidence through an administration which has given the Nation four years of the most wonderful prosperity it ever enjoyed.

The Times rejoices in the nomination of Taft and Sherman and will do battle for their election with all the loyal service of which it is capable. And once more it summons every thoroughbred Republican to rally around the Republican standard—the only Republican standard.

Of those opposed to the platform, and indeed to everything else which would promote the nomination of Mr. Taft, 343, obeying the mandate of Col. This was as near to administering the "silence" proposed by "Jimmie" Garfield and "Giffie" Pinchot, that the Roosevelt people came. The delegates who refused to vote because Col. Roosevelt had asked them, constituted majorities in the ten States, as follows:

Nominated last night by the Republican National Convention in Chicago without serious opposition. Both were nominated on the first ballots for their respective places on the ticket. President Taft received 561 votes and Vice-President Sherman received 597 votes. The other votes in each instance were scattered among several candidates who, with the exception of La Follette, had not been presented to the convention.

Running Account.

TAFT AND SHERMAN RENOMINATED AMID CHEERS TO LEAD G. O. P. FOUR MORE YEARS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CONVENTION HALL, CHICAGO, June 22.—With nearly 350 of the Roosevelt delegates declining to vote and hastening away at adjournment time to tender to Col. Theodore Roosevelt the nomination of a new party, the fifteenth Republican National Convention at the end of a long and tumultuous session tonight renominated William Howard Taft of Ohio for President, and James Schoolcraft Sherman of New York, for Vice-President. President Taft received 561 of the 1078 votes in the convention, or 21 more than a majority. Sherman's vote was 597.

The decision of the Roosevelt people to refrain from voting left no other candidate near the President. The announcement of the Taft victory was greeted with mingled cheering and groans and hisses. The convention leaders had decided to give Taft as a running mate his companion on the ticket in 1908.

All others dropped from the race and Mr. Sherman was the only candidate regularly placed before the convention. There were many scattering votes on the roll call that ensued. The convention amid much confusion adjourned sine die.

At no time was there any indication of a walk-out of Roosevelt delegates. They expressed their revolt by silence.

In the confusion just before adjournment, a resolution was adopted giving the National Committee power to declare vacant the seat of any man on the committee refusing to support the nominees of the regular convention of 1912.

A conflict in the Oklahoma delegation over the selection of national committeeman was referred with power to the National Committee.

With the party admittedly facing the greatest crisis in its history, Mr. Taft at 9:25 o'clock tonight was renominated by the convention. The revolt of many of the Roosevelt delegates in the convention was open from the moment the permanent roll containing the names of contested delegates was approved. A "valedictory" statement was read in behalf of Col. Roosevelt asking that his name be not presented and that his delegates sit in mute protest against all further proceedings. A great majority of the Roosevelt delegates in the Illinois, and all in the Missouri and Idaho delegations, declined to follow this advice, but Col. Roosevelt's sway over delegations from California, Kansas, Maine, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and West Virginia was all but absolute. Most of the delegates from these States announced their purpose of helping give Mr. Roosevelt an independent nomination at another hall later in the evening.

The split in the convention occasioned no surprise. It was but a fulfillment of predictions that had been made during the past several days. The closing scenes were marked by counter demonstrations for President Taft and Col. Roosevelt. The first test vote after the announcement of the Roosevelt valedictory came on the adoption of the party platform. The affirmative vote was 666. Roosevelt delegates present not voting numbered 343. There were 53 noes, 36 of them from the La Follette States of Wisconsin and North Dakota. Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin was Defeated Delegates and Ambitious Candidate Hold Consolation Party.

Go to Another Hall and Colonel Gratefully Accepts What He Can Get.

Plans Made for National Convention in August for Formal Action.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 22.—Former President Theodore Roosevelt was nominated for President on an independent ticket tonight after the Republican National Convention, in which he met defeat. Forty followers of Col. Roosevelt gathered in Orchestra Hall, less than a mile from the Coliseum, and pledged their support to the former President.

In accepting the nomination, Col. Roosevelt appealed to the people of all sections, regardless of party affiliations, to stand with the founders of the new party, one of whose cardinal principles, he said, was to be "Thou shalt not steal."

CHANCE TO MAKE SPEECHES.

A speech nominating Col. Roosevelt was made by Comptroller W. A. Prendergast of New York, who was to have presented the colonel's name to the convention. The Hon. William Draper Lewis of the University of Pennsylvania Law School, who was to make one of the seconding speeches, delivered tonight the address which he had prepared for the Republican convention.

The committee consisted of Comptroller W. A. Prendergast of New York, Meyer Lissner of California, former Congressman Richmond Pearson of North Carolina, Frank Knox of Michigan, Matthew Hale of Massachusetts, A. R. Garford of Ohio, David Browning of Kentucky, Everard Bierer, Jr., of Utah, Walter Thompson of Vermont, Judge Oscar R. Hundley of Alabama, Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Colorado, Andrew Rahn of Minnesota, Judge Stevens of Iowa, Judge Lowder of North Dakota, William Allen White of Kansas, John C. Greenway of Arizona, ex-Gov. John Franklin Fort of New Jersey, Col. E. C. Carrington of Maryland, Pearl Wight of Louisiana, Lorenzo Dow of Washington, Walter Clyde Jones of Illinois, Frank Krantz of Oklahoma.

ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH.

In accepting the nomination, Roosevelt said:

"Gentlemen, I thank you for your nomination and in you I recognize the lawfully elected delegates to the Republican convention who represent the overwhelming majority of the voters who took part in the Republican primaries prior to the convention and who represent the wish of the majority of the lawfully elected members of the convention. I accept the nomination subject to but one condition.

"This has now brought a contest which cannot be settled merely along the old party lines. The principles that are at stake are as broad and deep as the foundations of our democracy itself. They are in no sense sectional. They should appeal to all honest citizens, east and west, north and south, whether Republicans or Democrats. I feel that the time has come when not only all men who believe in progressive principles, but all men who believe in those elementary maxims of public and private morality which underlie every form of successful government should join in one movement. Therefore I ask you to go to your several homes to find out the sentiment of the people at home and then again to come together. I suggest by mass convention, to nominate for the Presidency, a progressive candidate on a progressive platform, a candidate and a platform that will enable us to appeal to northerner, southerner, easterner and westerner, Republican and Democrat alike, in the name of our common American citizenship.

"If you wish me to make the fight I will make it even if only one State should support me. The only condition I impose is that you shall be entirely free when you come together to substitute any other man in my place if you deem it better for the movement and in such case I will give him my heartiest support. PARTY PRONOUNCES FOR PURE REPUBLICANISM.

Goes to the People With Positive Reaffirmation of Staunch American Principles Which Has Won Many Victories—Praise for Taft and McKinley Incorporated in Declaration—Venerate Name of Lincoln.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 22.—Following is the full text of the Republican platform:

The Republican party, assembled by its representatives in national convention, declares its unchanging faith in government of the people, by the people, for the people. We renew our allegiance to the principles of the Republican party and our devotion to the cause of Republican institutions established by the fathers.

It is appropriate that we should now recall with a sense of veneration and gratitude, the name of our first great leader, who was nominated in this city, and whose lofty principles and superb devotion to his country are an inspiration to the party he honored—Abraham Lincoln. In the present state of public affairs we should be inspired by his broad statesmanship and by his tolerant spirit toward men.

The Republican party looks back on its record with pride and satisfaction and forward to its new responsibilities with hope and confidence. Its achievements in government constitute the most luminous pages in our history. Our greatest national advance has been made during the years of its ascendency in public affairs. It has been genuinely and always a party of progress; it has never been either stationary or reactionary. It has gone from the fulfillment of one great pledge to the fulfillment of another in response to the public need and to the popular will.

We believe in our self controlled representative democracy which is a government of laws, not of men, and in which order is the prerequisite of progress.

CONSTITUTIONAL GOVERNMENT.

The principles of constitutional government which make provision for orderly and effective expression of the popular will for the protection of civil liberty and the rights of men and interpretation of the law by an untrammeled and independent judiciary have proved themselves capable of sustaining the structure of a government which, after more than a century of development, embraces 100,000,000 of people, scattered over a wide and diverse territory, but bound by common purpose, common ideals and common affection to the Constitution of the United States. Under the Constitution and the principles asserted and vitalized by it, the United States has grown to be one of the great civilized and civilizing powers of the earth.

It offers a home and an opportunity to the ambitious and the industrious from other lands. Resting upon the broad basis of a people's confidence and a people's support, and managed by the people themselves, the government of the United States will meet the problems in the future as satisfactorily as it has solved those of the past.

The Republican party is now, as always, a party of advanced and constructive statesmanship. It is prepared to go forward with the solution of those new questions which social, economic and political development have brought into the forefront of the nation's interest. It will strive, not only in the nation, but in the several States, to enact the necessary legislation to safeguard the public health; to limit effectively the labor of women and children; to protect wage-earners engaged in dangerous occupations; to enact comprehensive and generous workmen's compensation laws in place of the present wasteful and unjust system of employers' liability; and in all possible ways to satisfy the just demand of the people for the study and solution of the complex and constantly-changing problems of social welfare.

RIGHTS OF INDIVIDUAL WORKERS.

In dealing with the questions it is important that the rights of every individual to the freest possible development of his own powers and resources and to the control of his own justly-acquired property, so far as those are compatible with the rights of others, shall not be interfered with or destroyed.

The social and political structure of the United States rests on the civil liberty of the individual; and for the protection of the liberty the people have wisely, in the national and State constitutions, put definite limitations on themselves and on their governmental officers and agencies. To enforce these limitations, to secure the orderly and coherent exercise of governmental power and to protect the rights of even the humblest and least-favored individual are the function of independent courts of justice.

The Republican party reaffirms its intention to uphold at all times, the authority and integrity of the courts, both State and Federal, and it will even insist that their powers to enforce their process and to protect life, liberty and property, shall be preserved inviolate. An orderly method is provided under our system of government by which the people may, when they choose, alter or amend the constitutional provisions which underlie that government. Until these Constitution provisions are so altered or amended, in orderly fashion, it is the duty of the courts to see to it that, when challenged, they are enforced.

That the courts, both Federal and State may bear the heavy burden laid upon them to the complete satisfaction of public opinion, we favor legislation to prevent long delays and the tedious and costly appeals which have so often amounted to a denial of justice in civil cases and to a failure to protect the public at large in criminal cases.

Since the responsibility of the judiciary is so great, the standards of judicial action must be always and everywhere above suspicion and reproach. While we regard the recall of judges as unnecessary and unwise, we favor such action as may be necessary to simplify the process by which any judge who is found to be derelict in his duty, may be removed from office.

Together with peaceful and orderly development at home, the Republican party earnestly favors all measures for the establishment and protection of the peace of the world and for the development of closer relations between the various nations of the earth. It believes most earnestly, in the peaceful settlement of international disputes and in the reference of all justiciable controversies between nations to an international court of justice.

MONOPOLY AND PRIVILEGE.

The Republican party is opposed to special privilege and to monopoly. It placed upon the statute books, the interstate commerce act of 1887 and the important amendments thereto, and the anti-trust act of 1890, and it has consistently and successfully enforced the provisions of these laws. It will take no backward step to permit the re-establishment in any degree of conditions which were intolerable.

Experience makes it plain that the business of the country may be carried on without fear, or without disturbance and at the same time without resort to practices which are abhorrent to the common sense of justice. The Republican party favors the enactment of legislation supplementary to the existing anti-trust act, which will define as criminal offenses those specific acts that uniformly mark attempts to restrain and to monopolize, trade, to the end that those who honestly intend to obey the law may have a guide for their action and that those who aim to violate the law may the more surely be punished. The same certainty should be given to the law prohibiting combinations and monopolies that characterize other provisions of commercial laws in order that no part of the field of business opportunity may be restricted by monopoly or combination; that business success honorably achieved may not be converted into crime and that the right of every man to acquire commodities, and particularly the necessaries of life, in an open market uninfluenced by the manipulation of trust or combination may be preserved.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION.

In the enforcement and administration of Federal laws governing interstate commerce and enterprises impressed with a public use engaged therein, there is much that may be committed to a Federal trade commission, thus placing in the hands of an administrative board many of the functions now necessarily exercised by the courts. This will promote promptness in the administration of the law and avoid delays and technicalities incident to court procedure.

THE TARIFF.

We reaffirm our belief in a protective tariff. The Republican tariff policy has been of the greatest benefit to the country, developing our resources, diversifying our industries and protecting our workmen against competition with cheaper labor abroad, thus establishing for our wage-earners the American standard of living.

The protective tariff is so woven into the fabric of our industrial and agricultural life that to substitute for it a tariff for revenue only would destroy many industries and throw millions of our people out of employment. The products of the farm and the mines should receive the same measure of protection as other products of American labor.

We hold that the import duties should be high enough, while yielding a sufficient revenue to protect adequately American industries and wages. Some of the existing import duties are too high and should be reduced. Readjustment should be made from time to time to conform to changed conditions and to reduce excessive rates, but without injury to American industry. To accomplish this correct information is indispensable. This information can best be obtained by an expert commission, as the large volume of useful facts contained in the recent reports of the tariff board has demonstrated.

The pronounced feature of modern industrial life is its enormous diversification. To apply tariff rates justly to these changing conditions requires closer study and more scientific methods than ever before. The Republican party has shown by its creation of the tariff board its recognization of this situation, and its determination to be equal to it. We condemn the Democratic party for its failure either to provide funds for the continuance of this board or to make some other provision for securing the information requisite for intelligent tariff legislation. We protest against the Democratic method of legislating on these vitally important subjects without careful investigation.

We condemn the Democratic tariff bills passed by the House of Representatives of the Sixty-second Congress as sectional, as injurious to the public credit, and as destroying business enterprise.

COST OF LIVING.

The steadily increasing cost of living has become a matter not only of national, but of world-wide concern. The fact that it is not due to the protective tariff system is evidenced by the existence of similar conditions in countries which have a tariff policy different from our own, as well as by the fact that the cost of living has increased, while rates of duty have remained stationary or been reduced.

The Republican party will support a prompt scientific inquiry into the causes which are operative both in the United States and elsewhere to increase the cost of living. When the exact facts are known it will take the necessary steps to remove any abuses that may be found to exist, in order that the cost of the food, clothing and shelter of the people may in no way be unduly or artificially increased.

BANKING AND CURRENCY.

The Republican party has always stood for a sound currency and for safe banking methods. It is responsible for the resumption of specie payments, and for the establishment of the gold standard. It is committed to the progressive development of our banking and currency system. Our banking arrangements today need further revision to meet the requirements of current conditions. We need measures which will prevent the recurrence of money panics and financial disturbances and which will promote the prosperity of business and the welfare of the laboring people by producing constant employment.

We need better currency facilities for the movement of crops in the West and South. We need banking arrangements under American auspices for the encouragement and better conduct of our foreign trade. In attempting these ends, the independence of individual banks, whether organized under national or State charters, must be carefully protected and our banking and currency system must be safeguarded from any possibility of exploitation by sectional, financial or political interests.

It is of great importance, to the social and economic welfare of this country that its farmers have facilities for borrowing easily and cheaply the money they need to increase the productivity of their land. It is as important that financial machinery be provided to supply the demands of farmers for credit as it is that the banking and currency systems be reformed in the interest of general business.

Therefore, we recommend and urge an authoritative investigation of agricultural credit societies and corporations in other countries, and the passage of State and Federal laws for the establishment and capable supervision of organizations having for their purpose the loaning of funds to farmers.

THE CIVIL SERVICE.

We reaffirm our adherence to the principle of appointment of public officers based on proved fitness and tenure during good behavior and efficiency.

The Republican party stands committed to the maintenance, extension and enforcement of the civil service law, and it favors the passage of legislation empowering the President to extend the competitive service so far as practicable. We favor legislation to make possible the equitable retirement of disabled and superannuated members of the civil service, in order that a higher standard of efficiency may be maintained.

We favor the amendment of the Federal employees' liability law so as to extend its provision to all government employees, as well as to provide a more liberal scale of compensation for injury and death.

CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS.

We favor such additional legislation as may be necessary more effectually to prohibit corporations from contributing funds, directly or indirectly, to campaigns for the nomination or election of the President, Vice-President, Senators and Representatives in Congress.

We heartily approve the act of Congress requiring the fullest publicity in regard to all campaign contributions, whether made in connection with primaries, conventions or elections.

CONSERVATION POLICY.

We rejoice in the success of the distinctive Republican policy of the conservation of our national resources, for their use by the people without waste and without monopoly. We pledge ourselves to a continuance of such a policy.

We favor such fair and reasonable rules and regulations as will not discourage or interfere with actual bona fide homeseekers, prospectors and miners in the acquisition of public lands under existing laws.

PARCELS POST.

In the interest of the general public, and particularly of the agricultural or rural communities, we favor legislation looking to the establishment, under proper regulations, of a parcels post, the postal rates to be graduated under a zone similar in proportion to the length of carriage.

PROTECTION OF CITIZENSHIP.

We approve the action taken by the President and the Congress to secure with Russia, as with other countries, a treaty that will recognize the absolute right of expatriation and that will prevent all discrimination of whatever kind between American citizens, whether native born or alien and regardless of race, religion or previous political allegiance. The right of asylum is a precious possession of the people of the United States and it is not to be surrendered nor restricted.

THE NAVY.

We believe in the maintenance of an adequate navy for the national defense and we condemn the action of the Democratic House of Representatives in refusing to authorize the construction of additional ships.

MERCHANT MARINE.

We believe that one of the country's most urgent needs is a revived merchant marine. There should be American ships, and plenty of them, to make use of the great American interoceanic canal now nearing completion.

FLOOD PREVENTION.

The Mississippi River is the nation's drainage ditch. Its flood waters, gathered from thirty-one States and the Dominion of Canada, constitute an overpowering force which breaks the levees and pours its torrents over many million acres of the richest land in the Union, stopping mails, impeding commerce and causing great loss of life and property. These floods are national in scope and the disasters they produce seriously affect the general welfare. The States unaided cannot cope with this giant problem; hence, we believe the Federal government should assume a fair proportion of the burden of its control so as to prevent the disasters from recurring floods.

RECLAMATION.

We favor the continuance of the policy of the government with regard to the reclamation of arid lands; and for the encouragement of the speedy settlement and improvement of such lands we favor an amendment to the law that will reasonably extend the time within which the cost of any reclamation project may be repaid by the land owners.

RIVERS AND HARBORS.

We favor a liberal and systematic policy for the improvement of our rivers and harbors. Such improvements should be made upon expert information and after a careful comparison of cost and prospective benefits.

ALASKA.

We favor a liberal policy toward Alaska to promote the development of the great resources of that district, with such safeguard as will prevent waste and monopoly.

We favor the opening of the coal lands to development through a law leasing the lands on such terms as will invite development and provide fuel for the navy and the commerce of the Pacific Ocean, while retaining title in the United States to prevent monopoly.

PHILIPPINE POLICY.

The Philippine policy of the Republican party has been and is inspired by the belief that our duty toward the Filipino people is a national obligation which should remain entirely free from partisan politics.

PORTO RICO.

We ratify in all its particulars the platform of 1908 respecting citizenship for the people of Porto Rico.

IMMIGRATION.

We pledge the Republican party to the enactment of appropriate laws to give relief from the constantly growing evil of induced or undesirable immigration which is inimical to the progress and welfare of the people of the United States.

SAFETY AT SEA.

We favor the speedy enactment of laws to provide that seamen shall not be compelled to endure involuntary servitude, and that life and property at sea shall be safeguarded by the ample equipment of vessels with life saving appliances and with full complements of skilled, able bodied seamen to operate them.

REPUBLICAN ACCOMPLISHMENT.

The approaching completion of the Panama Canal, the establishment of a bureau of mines, the institution of postal savings banks, the increased provision made in 1912 for the aged and infirm soldiers and sailors of the republic and for their widows, and the vigorous administration of the laws relating to pure food and drugs, all mark the successful progress of Republican administration and are additional evidence of its effectiveness.

ECONOMY AND EFFICIENCY.

We commend the earnest effort of the Republican administration to secure greater economy and increased efficiency in the conduct of the government business. Extravagant appropriations and the creation of unnecessary offices are an injustice to the taxpayer and a bad example to the citizen.

CIVIC DUTY.

We call upon the people to quicken their interest in public affairs, to condemn and punish lynchings and other forms of lawlessness and to strengthen in all possible ways a respect for law and the observance of it. Indifferent citizenship is an evil from which the law affords no adequate protection and for which legislation can provide no remedy.

ARIZONA AND NEW MEXICO.

We congratulate the people of Arizona and New Mexico upon the admission of those States, thus merging in the Union in final and enduring form the last remaining portion of our continental territory.

REPUBLICAN ADMINISTRATION.

We challenge successful criticism of the sixteen years of Republican administration under Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft. We heartily reaffirm the indorsement of President McKinley contained in the platform of 1900 and of 1904 and that of President Roosevelt, contained in the platforms of 1904 and 1908.

We invite the intelligent judgment of the American people upon the administration of William H. Taft. The country has prospered and been at peace under his Presidency. During the years in which he had the cooperation of a Republican Congress, an unexampled amount of constructive legislation was framed and passed in the interest of the people and in obedience to their wish. That legislation is a record on which any administration might appeal with confidence to the favorable judgment of history.

We appeal to the American electorate upon the record of the Republican party and upon this declaration of its principles and purposes. We are confident that under the leadership of the candidates here to be nominated our appeal will not be in vain; that the Republican party will meet every just expectation of the people whose servant it is; that under its administration and its laws our nation will continue to advance; that peace and prosperity will remain with the people and that glory will be added to the great republic.

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "What ails ye tonight, annyhow?" asked Mr. Hennessy. "What's gone wrong with ye?"

"I was thinkin'," said Mr. Dooley, "iv the bustin' iv wan iv th' histhoric frindships iv th' wurruld. Thim fellows Hogan is always talkin' about whin his frindship f'r me is at th' pint iv explodin' and wreckin' me store, what's their names?—Damon an' Pithius—were niver more close thin Tiddy Resonfelt, who shall be known hereafter in this lease as Tiddy, and 'Willyum Haitch Taft,' who shall be known as Willyum.

"They were that near together ye cudden't siparate them with a saw. Ivry mornin' Willyum found on his desk a bunch iv vi'lets with a card marked, 'Tiddy.' Ivery mornin' Tiddy found on his desk a sprig iv forget-me-nots marked 'Willyum.'

"On Valentine's Day Tiddy wrote a pome commencin': 'Whin e'er I see thy radyant smile,' an' 'Willyum' wrote a pome commincin':

"'Whin up San Jooan's gory hill.'

"'Twas a beautiful frindship in a sordid wurruld, an' I oftin wondhered how long it wud last.

ELECTRIC BUTTON USED.

"They cudden't speak iv each other widout th' tears comin' into their eyes, an' they can't aven now. Whin it come to gettin' th' nomynation f'r Willyum, Tiddy wudden't let annybody handle it but himself. Tiddy set back in Wash'n'ton an' touched an electhric button an' they voted f'r Willyum.

"'Twas the same way up to iliction. 'Lave it to me, Willyum, says Tiddy. 'Ye're too dilicate f'r this coorse wurruk,' he says. Says Willyum: 'I've wrote an answer to Bryan's letter,' says he. 'Read it to me,' says Tiddy. 'This is th' way it starts,' says Willyum.

"'Dear Mr. Bryan—Ye ar're doubtless unaware that undher th' rulin's iv th' Probate Coort f'r th' First Disthrict iv Utah—'

"'Hould on there, Willyum,' says Tiddy. 'That's no kind iv a letther to write to a polthroon an' thraitor like Bill Bryan. He's a nice fellow th' rist iv th' time, d' ye mind, but up to nixt Novimber ye must remember he's a polthroon an' thraitor. Here, give me th' pin.' An' he set down an' wrote: 'Sir: Ye'ers iv th' fifth received an' contints noted. In reply wud say that ye ar're a liar, an' it will give me grate pleasure to kick ye whiniver we meet.'

"'Now,' says he, 'go on fr'm there. Ye shud alwuz begin ye'er compositions wid a plain statemint iv fact,' says he. 'But is this a fact?' says Willyum. 'It is a campaign fact,' says Tiddy.

OPENS AT THE SEAMS.

"But luk at thim now. Soon afther Willym's iliction this here histhoric frindship begun to open at the seams. At th' convinshun today frindship's garland was scatthered all over th' backyard. I don't know what happened, excip' what I see in th' pa-pers. Accoordin' to what I make out fr'm th' pa-pers, th' crool steam roller crusht th' palajum over our liberty, and Tiddy sounded th' retreat iv his gallant band of pathrites. Ye can imagine Willym wavin' his hand and sayin': 'Well, good-bye Tiddy; I invy ye escapin' th' cares n' tumults iv offis an' return' to that little simple red two-story house on Long Island, where ye can be alone. Happy man, comin' in ivry mornin' to write ye'r little piece f'r the pa-apers undher a nice man like Lyman Abbott. They say he's good to th' help. I haven't told ye, but I've subscribed to th' Outlook. I don't care f'r frivolous lithrachoor, but I intind to r-head ivery wurrud ye write an' follow ye'er career. Whin ye get home ye might set down at a typewriter an' wallop out a few suggestions. F'r instance, anything ye might want to say about a postmasther at Eysther Bay wud rayceive due considheration if ye can git together with th' Congressman fr'm ye'er dischrick.'

FRIENDSHIP IS PECOOLIAR.

"So there goes the last proof that I'll iver have that there's such a thing in the wide wurruld as onselfish frindship. If thim old cronies shud meet today they'd speak, to be sure, but what they'd say cudden' be sint through th' mails. Frindship is a pecooliar and sthrange thing, Hinnissy. Ye ought to thry an' fill ye'er cup to the brim with it, but ye mustn' let it slop over. The more ye like a man, the less ye ought to tell him so to his face. If he don't know whin ye do an' whin ye don't, he ain't fit to be out in the wurruld without a garjeen. An whin ye do annything f'r a frind ye mustn't tell him annything about it. If ye give a frind a pair iv shoes ye don't want to call out in a sthree car: 'How do me shoes fit ye? They're a little small f'r a man with a low instep.' On th' other hand, Hinnissy, a wise man is careful not on'y about th' frinds he picks, but about th' frind he shakes. It shows a lack iv sintimint to shake th' frind that give ye th' shoes, while he's able to come back an' replevy thim off ye'er feet. I want to have me frinds on an ekal basis with me. If they want annything they can come an' take it without askin. I'll tur-'rn me back on thim an' pretind to be countin' up th' receipts, though, iv course, I can see in th' lookin' glass how much they're poorin' out."

"Well," said Mr. Hennessy, "polyticks makes sthrange bedfellows."

LIE IN STHRANGE BED.

"It does," said Mr. Dooley. "An' 'tis a sthrange bed they lie in, an' th' longer they're in it togither th' sthranger they become, till it's a race who'll be up first in th' mornin' an' off with the clothes."

"Will Tiddy Rosenfelt be a candidate of a third party?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"Well," said Mr. Dooley, "if he's runnin' away fr'm anny nommynation he's sprained his ankle. But who iver knew him to run fr'm danger?"

Philadelphia Coroner Proposes to Have Jury of Clergymen Serve on Fatalities for Education.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—The Coroner of Philadelphia announced that on Friday of next week he will have a special jury of six prominent clergymen act upon cases of automobile fatalities.

His object in this novel move, he says, is to familiarize the clergymen with the danger to the public on the streets from automobiles. Later, the official expects them to repeat from their pulpits words of warning and advice to motor vehicle drivers and to pedestrians.

Must Be Amusing.

MILADY AFFECTS ECCENTRIC GARB.

LONDON WOMEN TIRE OF FASHIONS THAT ARE ONLY CHIC.

They Wear Skirts With Trouser Effects, Hats Trimmed With Tennis Racquets, and Curate Coats. Dowager Duchess Leaves Queer Will Recalling Old Suit.

BY LADY MANWARING.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

LONDON, June 22.—Funny frocks and cute coats are now the thing. Clothes must be amusing. Hats also must be amusing. Women here have tired of fashions that are merely chic; they want the eccentric. For example: Things now worn by women include braces and skirts with trouser effect. Some of the hats are trimmed with two tennis racquets made of plush, with white stockings, little curate coats and cabmen's hats copied in straw.

In her will, which was probated yesterday, Mary, Dowager Duchess of Sutherland, gave another proof of her eccentricity. She expressed the desire that she be buried in a coffin made of the thinnest wood or of osiers. While she left an estate valued at $2,350,000, only $25,000 goes to her third husband, Sir Albert Kaye Rollit, her head gardener inheriting $10,000—or half as much as the baronet. The bulk of her property goes to her daughter. The peculiar will recalls the celebrated suit which attended her own succession to the estate.

George Granville Leveson-Gower, third Duke of Sutherland, was genuinely in love with his wife, and he made a will in her favor which was hardly fair to his son, the present duke. The result was litigation of a highly interesting kind, which had a sequel of a no less sensational character than the widowed duchess being sentenced for contempt of court by the Lord St. Helier and being sent to Holloway.

The duchess had destroyed a paper which was supposed to have a considerable bearing upon the litigation. There was no doubt about the way the paper was got rid of, for it was burned by the duchess in the presence of the other parties to the suit, at a meeting which the lawyers had arranged for the purpose of th ination of the papers. The action was a highly dram

WIDOW CHARGED WITH MURDER.

ARRESTED ON SUSPICION OF HAVING KILLED HUSBAND.

Prosecuting Attorney in Washington Town Has Woman Placed in Jail Following Death of Banker from Poisoning—Contractor Also Accused of Same Crime.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An information charging Mrs. Anna Christensen with first degree murder in administering poison which caused the death of her husband, Henry E. Christensen, the Pasco banker, on the Spokane train, June 1, was filed with the county clerk at Pasco today by the prosecuting attorney.

Mrs. Christensen was arrested at her home by a deputy sheriff who took her to Walla Walla, where she will be held for trial. She was attired in deep mourning. The prosecutor says she will be refused bail, but the W. Garry, arrested two weeks ago and since held in the Adams County Jail at Ritzville on the same charge, will be admitted to bail. Mrs. Christensen's two small children were left with friends at Pasco.

Garry was regarded as a close friend of both Mr. and Mrs. Christensen. After the funeral, June 3, he accompanied Mrs. Christensen to Spokane and returned with her.

Both men were prominent, Christensen being a member of the City Council and cashier of the bank of Pasco. Garry is a contractor, building Pasco's new City Hall.

Christensen carried $30,000 life insurance, payable to his estate. His will named his wife as administratrix. Garry is reported to have owed Christensen a large amount of money advanced to aid him in the contracting business.

Many believe that Garry and Mrs. Christensen love each other.

FRANKLIN LETTER SOLD.

Epistle From Famous Philosopher to John Paul Jones Brings Five Thousand Dollars in Paris.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

PARIS, June 22.—At a sale of old books and manuscripts today a letter of Benjamin Franklin to John Paul Jones was purchased for $5000. The name of the buyer was not disclosed, but it is understood to be that of a wealthy American.

The letter is dated, but the date has been obliterated by stains. It is relative to a request made by the admiral and expresses Franklin's regret that sufficient ships cannot be placed under Jones's command.

"But," says Franklin, "with your gallantry and your great military genius, I feel sure you will succeed in wresting ships in plenty from the enemy."

REFINED WOMEN SMOKE.

New York Magistrate Avers It Is Common Practice in Many Large Cities of the World.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 2.—"I will take judicial cognizance that it is quite a common custom among many refined women in the larger cities of the world to smoke cigarettes," announced the court here, sitting in the case of Richard W. W. Thorne, a broker, against his divorced wife, an actress, now Mrs. Charles H. Pope. The controversy is over the custody of a small son, Mr. Thorn claiming that the child has been practically abandoned by the mother. One of the reasons urged why Mrs. Pope should not continue in charge of the boy—that she smoked cigarettes—drew forth the opinion of the court.

HIGHBALLS WILL AVIATE.

Prices of Fancy Drinks to Be Raised at Portland During Week of the Elk's Convention.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Great grief has been caused among the bibulously inclined through the announcement today by the Hotel Men's Association and a few leading saloons that the soothing highball will refuse to soothe for less than two bits, and the succulent, high-collared silver fizz and kindred egg drinks will cost 30 cents during Elks' week, starting July 8, with all mixed drinks of the plainer sort in the highball price class. Such is the dictum that has been passed around quietly.

While the price of rooms and the cost of meals are not going to be raised, not so with the vital necessities like cocktails, highballs, frappes, fizzes, punches and other liquid concoctions. Even beer will be boosted to 10 cents and in some of the real swell refreshment palaces no beer will be kept on draught and the bottled beer served in shell glasses will be one bit a throw, the same as whisky, the only drink that is not to be elevated in the financial schedule.

The Elks' commission has the hotels signed up with iron-clad contracts on the bed and food proposition, but there is no way to prevent the liquor dealers from tacking on convention prices for drinks and advantage of the loophole is to be taken.

WORK OUT HEAVY PROFIT OF CHINESE LOTTERIES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON (Cal.) June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the assistance of Col. George C. Edwards, associate professor of mathematics of the State University, Dist.-Atty. E. P. Foltz has ascertained to a nicety just what chances lottery players take. In discussing Prof. Edwards's calculations, Mr. Folz said:

"The Chinese lottery problem is as follows:

"A Chinese lottery ticket has eighty characters upon its face. The purchaser of a ticket marks ten of these characters. When the drawing is held twenty of the eighty characters are drawn. If any less than five of the ten characters marked correspond with any similar number of twenty characters drawn, the purchaser of the ticket wins nothing. If five characters correspond the purchaser of the ticket wins double the amount paid for the ticket; in other words on a 10-cent ticket the winning is 20 cents and so on up to the highest price which is paid in case all the ten characters marked correspond with any ten of the twenty drawn. In such case the purchaser of the ticket is paid 3600 times the amount paid for the ticket, or $360 on a 10-cent ticket.

"According to the solution of the problem by Col. Edwards, 90 per cent. of the drawing will fall entirely outside of the winning combination, and half the 10 per cent. remaining will contain either two or three of the marked characters.

"Reduced to a plain proposition, the purchaser of a lottery ticket, every time he buys a ticket, is betting in a ratio of $9.53 to $3.30 upon a bet which should be absolutely equal.

"In other words, take the example of white and black balls. If fifty white balls and fifty black balls were placed in a sack, it would be an even bet whether a white or black ball would be drawn therefrom. A man who buys a Chinese lottery ticket is betting nearly three to one that a white ball will be drawn. This is an enormous advantage, as will be readily seen by a man familiar with gambling. The Chinese find the game of Fan-Tan a profitable one for the game-keeper, and yet the percentage is very small as compared with the profits of the lottery."

Dairyman in Oregon Who Violated the Laws Is Denied Citizenship by Circuit Judge Kavanaugh.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The petition for citizenship of Melchior Tannler, formerly a dairyman with a ranch near the Oregon slough, was denied with prejudice this forenoon by Circuit Judge Kavanaugh in the naturalization court.

Tannler came up for examination a month ago. Accusations of persistent violations of the dairy laws were made against him by Naturalization Examiner Henry Hazard of Seattle. At that time the dairyman asked for additional time to make a defense and the case was delayed until today when it was shown that Tannler had several times violated the dairy laws and had been convicted.

"This man is plainly unfit for American citizenship," said the court. "Since it is shown he is a violator of the laws his application is denied."

91 Year Old Soldier Enjoys Fine Health

Mr. William Losa Is a Remarkable Man. He is a Veteran of the Mexican and Civil Wars, Has Worked Hard All His Life, Yet at This Advanced Age is Still in Full Enjoyment of all His Faculties.

One of the most wonderful cases on record of healthy and vigorous old age is that of Mr. William Losa, of Harrison, Idaho. He was born in 1821, and is past his 91st birthday, and yet he is able to read and write without the aid of glasses, and is in full enjoyment of all his other faculties.

William Losa, 91 Years Old.

Mr. Losa is a veteran of the Mexican and Civil wars, and recalls many of this country's early struggles along the frontier. He moved to Harrison many years ago, and is well known to practically every one in that part of the country.

Mr. Losa attributes a considerable part of the long length of his life to Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky, which has been consistently used by him whenever he felt the need of a tonic stimulant. In a recent letter, which he wrote without the aid of glasses, he said, in part: "I take pleasure in writing to tell you how much good Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky has done me. I have used this valuable medicine for a great many years, and now, at 91 years of age, am in full enjoyment of all my faculties. I am a Volunteer Veteran of the Mexican and Civil wars, and have lived in Harrison for a long time and am very well known."

When men and women get along in life they need a remedy that will quicken the circulation, bring restful sleep, invigorate the brain and prevent decay. Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky is the best agent to produce these happy results. By improving the digestion and assimilation of the food, it drives nourishment into the system and gives tone and vitality to every organ in the body.

It has been used with remarkable results in the prevention and relief of all throat, lung and stomach troubles and all wasting and diseased conditions. It is invaluable for the overworked; it makes the old feel young, and the young strong and vigorous; recognized as a family medicine and prescribed by physicians everywhere.

The genuine is sold in sealed bottles only by all druggists, grocers and dealers, $1.00 a large bottle. Be sure you get Duffy's and that the seal over the cork is intact. If your dealer cannot supply you, write us and we will tell you how to get it. Medical booklet, containing rare common-sense rules for health and testimonials, also doctor's advise, sent free on request. The Duffy Malt Whisky Co., Rochester, N. Y.

OUTLAWS MURDER MARSHAL.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COKEVILLE (Wyo.) June 22.—With the death of Dan Hansen, Marshal of Cokeville, yesterday, the Whitney brothers, outlaws, added another to their list of murders. Hansen was shot when he went to a spot Thursday night where a local banker had been directed to bring $1500 on penalty of death. The letter was signed by the Whitneys. Bert Dalton, who is in jail, has confessed that he held the horses for the Whitneys.

MRS. SARTORIS ENGAGED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 22.—Announcement was made here yesterday of the engagement of Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris, only daughter of former President Grant, and Frank H. Johns, assistant Postmaster-General in President Cleveland's administration and now secretary of a Chicago bank.

FIGHTING FIRE AT SEA.

Crew on Steamer From Mediterranean Works Desperately to Keep Flames From Kerosene in Cargo.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 22.—A successful five-hour fight to prevent a fire at sea spreading to a large consignment of coal oil in barrels stored near-by is reported by Capt. Rubarich of the steamer Emilia, just in from Mediterranean ports. The fire broke out on Wednesday morning in one of the holds containing cotton waste, vegetable fiber and 200 barrels of coal oil. All hands fought desperately to keep the blaze from reaching the oil, which was stored forty feet aft of where the fire had begun. After many hours of hard work the blaze was extinguished. Most of the cargo in the hold was ruined.

CALIFORNIANS BOUND HOME.

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 22.—[Special Dispatch.] The Californians are flitting homeward. Congressman Stephens has sent his wife and daughter to Los Angeles, and Congressman Needham said good-by yesterday to Mrs. Needham and the children, who go home for the summer.

Lux Orientalis.

LIGHT FROM THE EAST ON THE LIVING ISSUES.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 22.—[Special Dispatch.] The following editorial comments on topics of the hour are printed today in eastern papers:

USURPER BEATEN BACK.

MAKE THE VICTORY COMPLETE.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] The riot is over. The usurper has been beaten back. The Republican National Convention is proceeding in an orderly manner to do its appointed work, with sober thought.

The only danger now is that the pleas of the late followers of the rioter may be given too much attention.

All these olive branches displayed by the late assistants of the usurper—all the talk of "compromise" that comes from those who but recently echoed the rioter's roarings, must be viewed coldly and in the light of the desperate struggle just ended.

Let all the men who have held fast the Republican citadel and thus saved their party and country, remember how their victory was won.

FARCE OF AFFIRMATION.

NO COMPOUNDING FELONY.

[Chicago Tribune:] The convention, as made up upon the basis of the fraudulent decisions of the National Committee, is going through the farce of affirmation.

The receivers of stolen goods are sitting in the jury box and joining in the verdict of not guilty.

In this situation the Roosevelt position is clear. It is a refusal to compound the felony.

Let the mockery of justice and representation go on to its appointed end. There is a court of review, and its session is November 5.

Will the court of the people condone theft or compound the felony? No one believes it, not even the cynical gentlemen who, under pretense of all the forms they abuse are forcing a sham indorsement upon the deluded and repudiated leader of a great party. No one believes that the voters of the Republican party, or the American people, will accept a candidate who is the compliant beneficiary of machine rule. The unfortunate Mr. Taft politically no longer exists. What the fraud packed convention may put at the head of the ticket bearing his name is only an empty mechanism whose ruin is foredoomed.

COME DOWN TO EARTH.

GET FEET ON GROUND.

[New York Herald:] Again we say to the Democrats, get your feet on the ground. Let the cowboys of the West storm and yell; let the wolf catchers swear and rage. But remember that you must elect your candidate in the East, the Middle West and South, and not in the ranting, swashbuckling, woolly West.

LOOK OUT FOR BALDWIN.

HE'S A DANGEROUS RIVAL.

[New York Tribune:] Keep an eye on the legs of Gov. Baldwin. He is going to Baltimore with fourteen votes securely buttoned in his breeches pocket. The man who walks from Middletown to Meriden just as a matter of course on a mid-June afternoon, is a dangerous rival. Though seventy-four, he does not, like Gov. Wilson, feel the need of a Carnegie pension. He is progressive enough in the legs to serve the purposes of one wing of the party and reactionary enough in the head to suit the other. Thus offering in one personality a harmonious combination of all elements, he might easily be the compromise candidate to walk away with the nomination.

FUTILE OBSTINACY.

HATRED IS KEPT ALIVE.

[New York Times:] The opposition which Roosevelt's followers are making to the organization of the Chicago convention is a sheer barren futility. The colonel lacks the manliness to acknowledge that the country has rejected him, that he has been beaten by Mr. Taft. The bitterness, the passions, the hates he has aroused, and the reckless spirit he has breathed into his followers are kept alive and sustained by four days of ceaseless excitement and exhausting labor without having organized the convention for business.

If Roosevelt were a loyal Republican, if his friends and managers were devoted to the interests of the party instead of being wholly committed to his personal fortunes and plans of revenge, destruction and revolution, they would manfully acknowledge the triumph of their opponents, and permit the convention to finish its work.

THE PRESIDENT.

PLACE IN HISTORY ASSURED.

[New York Sun:] It is to Mr. Taft's everlasting credit that he based his campaign for renomination squarely and solidly upon the cause of educational government. He has never wavered in faith or wabbled in bearing. To this unswerving attitude of the President's since the Roosevelt hat went into the ring, is primarily due the Republic's salvation from the third term, the fourth term and the indefinite tenure of personal rule. So that whatever may now happen at Chicago, the high and honorable position of William Howard Taft in history is assured. His place there will be in the list of the country's conservators and benefactors in times of great peril; and this is true whether he is or is not nominated by the convention, and equally so, whether, if nominated, he is or is not elected in November.

CHALLENGING A BOSS.

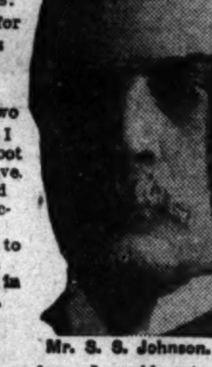
PREPOSTEROUS PRETENSE.

[New York World:] Boss Murphy's pretense that Judge Parker was selected as chairman of the Baltimore convention for the reason that he had once been a candidate for President is preposterous, and everybody knows it. If that consideration is to be pleaded, Mr. Bryan is entitled to the honor, for he has been a candidate three times.

Judge Parker is offensive to a large element of his party. He probably represents a combination opposed to the nomination of a progressive and popular candidate. In protesting against these destructive Tammany tactics, Mr. Bryan exercises the right of a Democrat. He is not setting himself up as a boss. He is challenging a boss and a very offensive one.

TRIED SEVEN DOCTORS

My Life Saved by Pe-ru-na.



Mr. S. S. Johnson.

Mr. S. S. Johnson, Greenville, Ill. writes:

"I was for five years troubled with catarrh. Two years ago I had one foot in the grave. I had tried seven doctors and also went to a catarrh specialist in St. Louis, and took several kinds of medicine a day. I could not walk more than a hundred yards without resting.

"My friends told me to take Peruna, and I did so. I now feel that Peruna has saved my life. It is the best medicine on earth, and I would not be without it."

WIRE TO THE TIMES.] June 22.—Denouncing members of the Credentials Committee as "liars," "gut- and "partisans," the members of that committee answered today the attack made public last night by McCormick of Chicago.

The answer was in form of a statement drawn up by a committee of of Colorado; Estabrook, of New Hampshire; Landstrum, of Malby, of New York and of Wyoming.

RIOTOUS SCENES IN THE FINAL SESSION.

Cheers of Approval and Disapproval so Mingled in the Convention that the Chairman Has Difficulty in Differentiating—An Invitation to See Roosevelt Walk on the Water Closes the Day of Tumult.

BY FREDERICK W. CRONE.

[BY FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 22.—[Special Dispatch.] President Taft was nominated today at the end of a wild and riotous day which produced everything from gun to fist fights. Nearly one-third of the convention, at the behest of Theodore Roosevelt, refused to vote on the nomination. That same portion and its supporters in the galleries, shouted jeers and cat calls at the mention of the President's name. It interrupted the speech of nomination several times. Once a threat was made to clear the galleries if the disturbance did not cease. When Senator Root at another time tried to restore a semblance of order, the galleries turned on him and twitted him that he once served as counsel for the notorious Tweed.

HARDING SPEAKS.

That was the one side of the affair. The other was a fifteen-minute outburst of enthusiasm when Warren G. Harding, in his nominating speech, first mentioned President Taft's name. The fact that the Roosevelt people ostentatiously refused to cheer, remaining in their seats and trying to look bored, did not interfere with the Taft men. They cheered and applauded, shouting and throwing their hats into the air. One man in the front of the convention hall tore off his coat and swung it around his head, meantime carefully keeping on a pair of gloves. State standards were wrenched loose and a parade started around the hall, the marchers yelling: "Four years more for Taft!" As if by magic, there appeared a big red silk banner with the President's picture and the legend: "Our Candidate," on it. Presently that found its way to the platform, and Mrs. John A. Logan, the widow of Gen. Logan, grabbed it from the man who was carrying it, and waved it in time to the cheering. It took Senator Root five minutes to gavel the convention into something remotely resembling quiet, after that incident.

SHERMAN'S NOMINATION.

Vice-President James S. Sherman was nominated for Vice-President. Conventions are supposed to be deliberative bodies. This one, at its concluding session, did most of its deliberating with fists and tongues. There were three separate and distinct fist fights and, sad to relate, "fighting Bill" Flinn was not in any of them. Neither was "Fighting Pat" Dore of Oklahoma, nor "Dynamite Ed" Perry, nor any of the West Virginia huskies who have been following the Roosevelt chariot. The fighters in each case were—and must remain—unknown to fame save as they heightened the interest of a day already well peppered with hot spots.

ROOSEVELT'S DEFI.

The first fight was due indirectly to Henry J. Allen, a Kansas Roosevelt shouter, who was delegated to read Col. Roosevelt's defiance to the convention and his orders to his delegates not to vote. Allen had not been talking two minutes when he mentioned the third-term candidate's name. It was all off. The Roosevelt rooters began a demonstration which was intended to put into the shade any subsequent showing of like nature for President Taft. They hooted and howled and cheered and yelled and waved hats and newspapers in the air. Presently some lively spirits organized a parade around the convention hall. Somebody started to grab an Illinois standard. Quick as a flash another individual hit him in the face and they clinched and went to the floor. On top of them in an instant were about twenty delegates, trying to get in a few good blows, while a dozen bluecoats and some of the assistant sergeants-at-arms labored industriously to untangle the writhing bunch of humanity. They succeeded at length and the Illinois standard, blood-spotted, was restored to its place. The Roosevelt demonstration was still demonstrating, but after the interest in the outcome of the fight had been satisfied and the policemen dispersed to their posts the enthusiasm abated.

OTHER FIGHTS.

Both the other fights were of the same character—a result of the excitement and frayed tempers among the sojourners here. Nobody was hurt, but the routine of business was sadly disabled and the deliberative dignity of a great and solemn occasion took the count.

In fact, the convention was a little short of dignity from the moment it began work. It buckled down to the work of catching up with the Credentials Committee, which was confirming the temporary roll as made up by the National Committee as fast as it could. The convention ratified the committee's work in characteristic fashion. District contests in Mississippi and Tennessee came up first. Senator Root directed a clerk to read the committee's report, to which nobody listened. Then came a vote on the question of acceptance. The Roosevelt men tried to outshout the Taft men; Senator Root smiled and declared the Roosevelt men beaten and the next case was called. It was not very different even with the Washington contests. The machine was working smoothly, so smoothly that when the viva voce votes had seated finally and permanently all the Taft delegates from that State the Roosevelt rooters exhumed a whistle and with that and a simulation of the chugging of an engine, conveyed to the waiting world their notion that the steam roller was in effective operation.

POINT OF ORDER.

A dark-skinned Rooseveltian attracted the attention of Senator Root and made the point of order that the steam roller was exceeding the speed limit.

"The point of order is well taken," declared the presiding officer gravely when quiet had come again. "But it must go fast if we hope to get home Sunday."

Apparently that did not bother the Roosevelt enthusiasts for they began to give way to their musical tendencies. Some religiously inclined intoned "Nearer My God to Thee." Others preferred the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Still others chanted "Goodnight, Ladies," and a fourth contingent inquired assiduously, "Didn't He Ramble, Ramble?" Presently they got tired and business was resumed, the steam roller rolling a little slowly, but very persistently. It had to stop a while until the Credentials Committee report on Texas—the last of the contested States—was received, but once that was before the convention it took up its way again and smashed ponderously on ever-shouting Rooseveltians while the Taft delegates cheered and the galleries hooted and whistled and jeered. One Roosevelt man in the gallery produced a banner with the device, "What Root said about the Penrose machine," and started to wave it. It waved for almost twenty seconds. At the end of that time a burly bluecoat had the banner and the owner was marched into outer Chicago.

PERMANENT ORGANIZATION.

The formality of effecting permanent a organization brougrt a slight lull in affairs, but the interest was renewed when Mr. Allen insisted on reading Col. Roosevelt's declaration that the contested delegates seated were creatures of fraud and corruption. Mr. Allen apparently enjoyed the reception he got, so did the galleries. They took a keen personal interest in the details. They cheered Roosevelt and hissed Taft and the Credentials Committee and the "stolen delegates" made a demonstration on their own account. Meantime the first fight of the day was in progress and some Roosevelt enthusiasts, blind to all but him, were cheering their heads off. So it went for fifteen minutes, at the end of which time Mr. Allen got rid of what he had to say and departed.

FAIRBANKS'S SHARE.

Ex-Vice-President Fairbanks had his share of attention when he came to read the platform. As he advanced to the edge and raised his hand to command attention some irreverent soul murmured in dulcet tones "have a glass of buttermilk Charlie."

Mr. Fairbanks retired temporarily but drank water. There was nothing that could sooth him, so William Jennings Bryan, who had listened without show of displeasure to the proceedings to that point, wandered majestically over the top of several desks and chairs on his way to the nearest exit. Bryan got a cheer—a real one. Mr. Fairbanks got red and swallowed seven words.

THE PLATFORM.

It must be confessed with disappointment and shame that the platform adopted isn't half as long or half as violent as the one presented for consideration by delegates from Wisconsin and North Dakota. That one fairly bristled with sharp jagged phrases about the "money trust," and "corporations" and "corrupt special interests." The devoted delegate who read it had hard going. When about half way through he turned over a couples of pages at a time. Still later he turned over seven at a time which so pleased everybody in the hall that he was applauded.

THE FIRST TEST.

The first test of the Roosevelt mandates came on the roll call for the adoption of the platform—the report of the Committee on Resolutions. California was the first State to announce that its delegates wouldn't vote. Wild cheers sounded, but just as enthusiastic applause a moment later when the two Taft delegates seated by the convention voted on the Taft side. The roll call proceeded slowly for almost every announcement elicited a demonstration—approval and disapproval sounded so much alike that they could not be told apart. One North Carolina man opined loudly as that State was reached that it was not etiquette to "vote a funeral," which pessimism the Taft men resented with cheers.

HARDING'S SPEECH.

It was just 5:55 o'clock p.m. when ex-Gov. Warren G. Harding of Ohio, gray-haired, clad in dark gray and with a gray voice, but a marvelous corkscrew punch in his right arm, which swung freely in sweeping gestures, advanced to the platform resolutely and offered President Taft to the convention. He did not make great headway with his nominating speech between the demonstrations of the Taft men and those of the ex-President's supporters, but he remarked that he was the most good natured Republican in the land and persevered until he made his speech just as he wanted to say it.

It was the beginning of the end of the convention. All further proceedings, including the vote, had lost interest for most of the spectators and many of the delegates in comparison with the call of the dinner table. All else went quickly.

There was just one last flash of light when handbills were passed around reading as follows:

"Teddy will walk on the water—of Lake Michigan—foot of Congress street, 6 p.m. sharp.

"He can do it?—all unbelievers especially invited.

"By Entertainment Committee.

"Bull Moose."

ROOSEVELT'S HAT. STILL IN THE RING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 22.—While Roosevelt was in conference with his advisers, a crowd of several thousand persons gathered in Michigan avenue and cheered until he raised a window.

"My friends," he said, "my hat is in the ring and will be in stronger than ever."

That was all. The crowd shouted for a longer address, but the colonel lowered the window and retired.

SECRETARY MEYER IS ILL.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—[By A. P. Night Wire.] Secretary Meyer, who left Washington a week ago for his home at Hamilton, Mass., has developed typhoid fever. A message to that effect was received today at the Navy Department. When the Secretary left it was said he was suffering from stomach trouble.

SOMETHING DOING IN SAN JACINTO TOWN

Whole population surprised. Entire business district of San Jacinto aflame with flags, pennants and banners announcing the dawn of the new San Jacinto. Decoration takes place at night after closing hours. One feature of the display is an artistically colored banner, five feet wide and over fifty feet long, strung across the main street, bearing the words, "Welcome, San Jacinto Board of Trade." There are hundreds of pennants and flags, fluttering from doorways and windows everywhere.

The recent water discovery and development at the foot of Mt. San Jacinto, near by, has aroused the whole country around. The great beauty and rare fertility of the valley dates back to the Government's first geological survey, but like many other sections of the country in times gone by, the scarcity of water prevented its full development. The new water condition, however, has changed the entire situation. High-class farming in all of its branches is now possible upon every foot of these particularly choice lands.

It is this valley's turn now, and it will be interesting to watch it. If the past few months, with its thrill and flip-flops, are any criterion to go by, San Jacinto will give an account of itself that will not soon be forgotten.

The new resort hotel being erected by Mr. Vosburg, on Central avenue, is going up rapidly. According to contract, it must be completed in one hundred days from date of beginning work.

The new electric light and power system, which circulates through the whole valley, has just been completed. The current will be turned on the first of the coming month.

Mr. Knowlton's foreman says he expects to get two tons of alfalfa per acre at each of the seven cuttings this season from his hundred-acre ranch on Mountain avenue. Two hundred tons per single cutting would mean 1400 tons for the season, or $28,000.00 for the crop, if the present price of $20.00 is maintained. These figures would no doubt make the back East farmer dizzy, but to the California rancher it means only an average production where anything like correct methods are employed.

She Had Consumption, Was Dying; Now Well.

Eckman's Alterative is being used with success in the treatment of Tuberculosis in all parts of the country. Persons who have taken it improved, gained weight, exhausting night sweats stopped, fever diminished, and many recovered. If you are interested to know more about it, we will put you in touch with some who are now well. Read of Mrs. Govert's recovery.

Griffith, Ind.

"Gentlemen:—In 1908, my mother-in-law (Mrs. Anna Govert) was taken sick with Catarrhal Pneumonia, and continually grew worse, requiring a trained nurse. The nurse informed me that she had Tuberculosis and nothing could be done for her. The Rev. Wm. Berg, of St. Michael's Church, at Shereville, Ind., who prepared for her death, recommended that I get some Eckman's Alterative and see if it would not give her some relief. The physician told me that she had Consumption and was beyond all medical aid. So I immediately sent for a bottle. Practically without hope for recovery, I insisted that she try the Alterative, which she did. I am glad to say that she soon began to improve. Now, she frankly says, she owes her life and health to Eckman's Alterative."

(Signed Affidavit) JOS. GRIMMER.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. BORAH DESERTS THIRD-TERMERS.

Idaho Senator Will Support Convention's Nominee.

He Was One of Roosevelt's Most Active Workers.

Refuses to Discuss in Detail His Realignment.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Senator William H. Borah of Idaho, has deserted the standard of Col. Roosevelt. He will support the nominee of the Republican National Convention. Although refusing to discuss the matter in detail, Senator Borah made it known tonight that he will stay on he party reservation.

Next to Senator Dixon of Montana, he was a prominent leader of the Roosevelt forces in the pre-convention battles.

"Will you support the nominee of the convention?" was questioned him.

"Yes," he replied. "But I do not care to discuss the matter," he added hastily.

That many others will leave the ranks of the Roosevelt forces was predicted tonight. Gov. Glasscock of West Virginia, leader of one of the strongest of the Roosevelt delegations, refused to commit himself on this subject.

GIBBON AND THE MAYOR.

Harbor Commission's President Makes Statement Following Public Letter by Chief Executive.

In regard to his controversy with the Mayor as to the manner of disposing of the aqueduct power, President T. E. Gibbon of the Harbor Commission, made the following statement yesterday. It was given out following the publication of a letter from the Mayor in which Mr. Alexander declared that Mr. Gibbon, in a previous letter, made statements which were at variance with the facts concerning the Mayor's views:

GIBBON'S STATEMENT.

A short time before the last city election, I was in Mayor Alexander's office to talk over election matters with him and he said to me: "I want you to do something for me. I wish you would see the electric companies and find out if they will sell their distributing plants at a reasonable price to the city. I don't want to be accused of trying to confiscate their property with a city distributing plant and I am willing to give them a chance to sell to the city if they will do it on fair terms."

He added that he thought it might be to the interest or the city to get the plants already installed if it could be done on terms that would be just. His proposition seemed to me to be based on a desire to act for the best interests of the city and at the same time to show a disposition to be fair to all concerned, and I was glad to undertake to comply with his request.

I mentioned the matter to Mr. Cline of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation and to Mr. Miller of the Edison Electric Company and they agreed to talk the matter over and see what could be done. I did not press the matter actively for some time because I felt that if it was permitted to rest until after the city had sold its electric power bonds and they could see that the city was prepared to go ahead arrgessively in developing and using the aqueduct electric power, the electric companies would probably be inclined to give better terms to the city upon their distributing plants rather than to have the value of these plants practically destroyed by the city's putting in a duplicate distributing system of its own.

After the electric power bonds were sold, I took the matter up more actively and it resulted in the meeting with the representatives of the power companies and the subsequent proceedings as I detailed them in my written report to the mayor which I personally handed to him today.

When I reported to the Mayor Mr. Cline's suggestion about a lease the Mayor said "That sounds good to me" and then requested me to see Mr. Scattergood and talk the matter over with him. This I did as I stated in my report to him.

During the pendency of the matter I made two verbal reports to the Mayor about it and I am positive that in both instances he understood that I referred to the matter which he had requested me to take up with the electric companies, and that my reports to him were rendered with the effort to comply with his request.

The foregoing is the exact truth of the whole matter and Mayor Alexander knows that it is true, unless he is suffering from a most unaccountable lapse of memory, which I am not prepared to credit.

placed before the convention, but Col. Roosevelt's wishes were carried out by his followers and they remained silent during the call of the States for nominations.

Many of the delegates, however, carried out their primary instructions and voted for the colonel.

On the voting for President, the Roosevelt delegates again as a rule remained silent. The detailed vote was:

Taft, 561; Roosevelt, 107; La Follette, 41; Cummins, 17; Hughes, 2; not voting, 8.

GAVEL DROPS.

It was 10:43 when Chairman Root dropped his gavel. The floor was in confusion and the aisles were crowded with delegates.

No sooner had Mr. Root announced the convention was opened than a stentorian voice from the gallery shouted:

"All aboard!"

Chairman Root, when some semblance of quiet had been secured, introduced the Rev. John Wesley Hill of New York, who opened the proceedings with prayer.

THE PRAYER.

Dr. Hill, who is President of the International Peace Forum, spoke as follows:

"O, Thou Who sitteth upon the circle of the heavens, unto Whom all things come in beauty and perfection—we approach Thee, supported by the memories of past mercies, encouraged by the tokens of Thy love, lured by the light of Thy Word, and strengthened by the inspiration of Thy Spirit.

"We thank Thee that unto us Thy glory has been revealed, that upon us Thy knowledge has dawned, while about us are the manifestations of that Providence which is imminent in the affairs of the world!

"We praise Thee for Thy enriching blessings; for the laws which are in league with us and the forces which are our friends; for the wealth of mountains and that more real of the generous soil; for the products of the field and forest and far resounding sea; for home and school and sanctuary; for flag and country; for light and liberty and life; and above all, for the revelation of Thyself in the face of Jesus Christ.

"We rejoice in the great things represented here, today—the Party of freedom and equality, courage and patriotism, progress and prosperity, with its background of triumphant history. We thank Thee for the principles, achievements and leaders of this Party; for Lincoln and Grant, for Garfield, Harrison and McKinley; the heroes and ptriots of vanished years; yes, the patriots of today, who are striving for the maintenance of that Democracy which is the guarantee of human rights and equal justice to all.

"We pray Thy blessing upon this assembly, these delegates upon whom devolve arduous responsibilities. Grant unto them clearness of vision, strength of purpose, and purity of patriotism, that they may neither falter nor fail in the execution of duty.

"Bless, we pray Thee, the President of the United States. We thank Thee for the inspiration of his leadership and the greatness of his achievements.

"Bless the Governor of this State and of all the States. Bless all law makers and magistrates. Bless our entire citizenship. Grant that we may be possessed of a knowledge that shall dispel darkness, and a virtue that shall banish evil. And so may we dwell together in liberty, walk in light, and prove worthy of our high calling!

"We pray for our land and nation. Save us from vice and violence, envy and hatred, restlessness, revolution and ruin.

"Command Thy blessing, we pray Thee, not alone upon our own land, but upon all the nations of the earth; and especially upon the nations that grope in gloom. Bring upon them the beauty of spring and the fruitfulness of summer, and hasten the cloudless dawn of universal peace, when the war drums shall be heard no longer and when the battle flag shall be furled in the parliament of man. And unto Thee will we ascribe the praise and glory forever, Amen."

LAUGHTER.

As Dr. Hill concluded, someone in the gallery yelled:

"Toot, toot!" and there was much laughter.

The first report presented from the Committee on Credentials recommended the seating of the Mississippi Taft delegates-at-large.

When the reading was concluded, the gallery crowd shouted:

"The ayes have it!"

The good nature which prevailed all yesterday afternoon was again evident.

TAFT MEN SEATED.

The Roosevelt people presented a minority report, but made no fight, and the Taft delegates were seated viva voce.

Amid a chorus, "Toot, toot!" and "Choo, choo!" from the galleries, the report on the contest in the Second District of Mississippi was read. The report characterized the Roosevelt contest as a "paper case."

There was no minority report and the vote was taken without delay. Chairman Root announced the seating of the Taft delegates.

The same procedure seated two Taft delegates in the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh Mississippi districts.

As the result of each vote was announced, a chorus of shrieks, whistles, groans and catcalls greeted the statement:

"The ayes have it."

Way up in the rear gallery a spectator with a mechanical whistle blew two short, shrill blasts, as each contest was disposed of. The reports were brought in, read in a riot of disorder, and passed.

The Fourth North Carolina, Third Oklahoma and the Second Tennessee, on which there were no minority reports, went through under the gavel.

WASHINGTON CASES.

The Washington cases came next and the convention sobered down after admonition from Chairman Root.

"Mr. Chairman," said B. H. Howard, a negro delegate from Mississippi, "I make the point of order that the steam roller is exceeding the speed limit."

There was a gale of laughter, renewed when Chairman Root said he was prepared to rule on the point.

"The point of order," he said, "is well taken."

When the laughter had subsided, Senator Root added:

"The justification is that we have some hope of starting home on Sunday."

This statement brought forth a cheer.

In order that an adverse vote might not throw out the entire State delegation, the committee reported the Washington delegates-at-large and each district delegation separately.

Sullivan of Ohio presented a minority report a substitute for the majority, or Taft, report. Watson moved to table the motion.

A conference was held on the platform to arrange for debate on the motion and bedlam broke loose on the floor.

"Toot, toot!" "Choo, choo, choo, toot, toot!"

"What about the speed limit?"

"Sand the track, Watson; you're slipping!"

The crowd began to sing "Nearer My God to Thee" and "John Brown's Body," altering the final lines of the chorus to:

"As we go rolling on."

Hugh T. Halbert of Minnesota spoke when quiet was restored, a limited debate having been decided upon.

W. T. Dovell, a Taft delegate-at-large, spoke for the majority report.

Former Gov. Fort of New Jersey made a point against Dovell's speaking on the ground that he could not vote upon the question of seating himself.

Chairman Root said while Dovell could not vote, he could speak.

The motion to lay on the table was carried by a viva voce vote. A motion to put the Taft delegates on the permanent roll also was carried without a roll call.

This was a distinct surprise. Senator Root hesitated for a long while after saying "the ayes seem to have it," before adding, "The ayes have it."

The proceedings seemed to indicate a complete backdown of the Roosevelt forces.

Then came reports seating Taft delegates from the First, Second and Third districts.

On each vote the gallery crowds joined in the chorus of "Noes."

Root would smile pleasantly and announce "The ayes appear to have it."

As the Washington contests were concluded "Merrily we roll along" and "Rambled" were added to the vocal programme, and there was a lull in the proceedings.

Victor Rosewater, retiring chairman of the Republican National Committee, appeared on the floor where the delegates were making a great fuss over him.

A Texas delegate lifted the former chairman in his arms while the convention cheered.

The California delegates began to shout, "We want Teddy!" and in a moment the Roosevelt delegates throughout the hall joined in the shout.

California endeavored to sing "Merrily we roll along," but the demonstration soon died out.

West Virginia tried to sing, "We want Teddy," but was hushed when Mrs. Flo Jacobson began to sing "Moonlight Bay."

A huge placard was lowered over the balcony railing bearing in big black letters:

"What Root said of the Penrose machine: A corrupt and criminal combination, masquerading under the name of the Republican party."

When the crowd caught sight of it there was a roar, but police suppressed the sign.

JOHNSON DUCKS.

Gov. Johnson of California left the convention hall before the Credentials Committee's report was received.

"I shall not sit in this convention during the nomination for President," he said in a statement, "nor shall I consider myself in any manner bound by its act. As Governor of California, I feel that my duty is plain, and that, as well as my self-respect, demands that I shall no longer remain in the convention. All the California delegation are in thorough accord with me, but I have requested them to remain and carry out the general plan of the Roosevelt delegates.

VIRGINIA.

The committee report for the Fifth Virginia District was then put through and the chairman asked unanimous consent to place on the roll delegates contests against whom had been dismissed by the National Committee and not renewed. This was done.

TEXAS MEN SEATED.

The eight delegates-at-large from Texas and those from the contested districts were then seated, amid much laughter and blowing of whistles. Senator Root tried to be serious during the voting but his face was constantly in a broad grin.

Four Roosevelt delegates from Texas were seated by the committee's report, which finally was adopted as a whole.

PERMANENT ORGANIZATION.

Permanent organization was then effected by the adoption of the organization report confirming the temporary organization. Representative Olmstead of Pennsylvania wielded the gavel.

"My first act as permanent chairman of this convention," said Senator Root, stepping forward amid a burst of cheering, "is to ask unanimous consent that our Republican brother—Henry J. Allen of Kansas—be per-

HARMONY GETS SERIOUS BLOW.

Reaches Vanishing Point at Baltimore Gathering.

Bryan's Views Sustained by Gov. Woodrow Wilson.

Chairman Mack Says Parker Will Deliver Keynote.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BALTIMORE, June 22.—Prospects that the Democratic National Convention would be organized without a fight almost reached the vanishing point tonight with the almost simultaneous issuance of statements by Gov. Wilson of New Jersey sustaining William J. Bryan's contention for a "convention of progressives," and by Chairman Mack of the National Committee that the committee would make Alton B. Parker temporary chairman of the convention.

Col. Bryan will make the fight against the naming of Judge Parker as temporary chairman regardless of the attitude taken by the candidates for Presidential nomination, according to the emphatic statement made today by Dr. P. L. Hall, national committeeman from Mr. Bryan's home State, who has been keeping Col. Bryan informed of the progress of events here.

National Committeeman Hall said the issue as to Judge Parker was more clearly defined than ever and that the fight had to come.

"The replies of the candidates," said Dr. Hall, "will make no difference to Mr. Bryan. He will never let up in his fight and it will be carried to the convention floor."

Dr. Hall said the fight against Mr. Parker on the convention floor might be very close.

Some of the leaders hoped that Mr. Bryan could be persuaded to withdraw from the fight and abide by the decision of the committee in the interest of party harmony. There were reports that there might be a bolt if Judge Parker was finally selected and a party of progressives formed, but none close to Bryan leaders would confirm this, saying it was idle to talk of such moves, especially since the delegates and leaders had not threshed it out in convention.

PLATFORM BUILDERS.

The Democratic national platform builders promise to present to the convention next week a document that will be short and incisive. The number of "teeth" in it, one plank molder said today, will depend upon the outcome of the struggle between the conservative and radical wings of the party. On most of the majority points, however, the leaders seem agreed. Some of them say that differences likely to arise in the Committee on Resolutions when it considers the platform next week will be matters of language rather than of contents.

If William J. Bryan wins his fight to have the keynote of the convention sounded by a progressive chairman, Mr. Bryan probably will be made chairman of the Resolutions Committee.

In view of the Republican situation and the hints that the leaders of a "third ticket" may appeal for support to progressive Democrats, there is little doubt that whatever the complexion of the Baltimore convention, its platform will make sweeping concessions to the radical element in the party.

TARIFF DOMINANT ISSUE.

Senator O'Gorman of New York, who probably will be on the Resolutions Committee, says it is the consensus of opinion that the tariff should be the dominant issue, and that a vigorous tariff plank should be the committee's first care. The next plank in order of importance will relate to business monopolies.

A universal woman suffrage plank arrived here today, and several prominent suffragists already have have been promised a hearing before the committee.

Other planks the committee will consider are as follows:

Declaring for regular increase of the navy, probably the construction of two battleships a year.

Permitting postal employees to organize.

Improvement of rivers and harbors.

Favoring a national public health bureau.

There was talk of a plank declaring in strong terms against a third Presidential term. Col. Roosevelt's determination to run again, it is said, is sure to result in such a plank.

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES.

Figures on how much the Presidential bees are costing their respective possessors are suggested as proper by Perry Belmont, president of the National Publicity Law Association, to the various campaign managers.

He has addressed letters to managers of Republican and Democratic candidates calling their attention to the so-called Henry bill pending in Congress and providing for the publicity of contributions and expenditures before and after nomination for President and Vice-President and inquiring whether they would be willing to comply with the terms of the bill although it is not yet a law.

PARKER WORKS ON SPEECH.

WON'T COMMENT UPON BRYAN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 22.—Alton P. Parker, who has been picked by the Arrangements Committee of the Democratic National Committee for temporary chairman of the Baltimore convention, arrived in New York today from Rochester. He is working on his speech to be delivered in Baltimore and denied himself to visitors. Judge Parker has made no comment on Mr. Bryan's opposition to him as temporary chairman.

ORANGE.

ORANGE, June 22.—A mass meeting of citizens has been called for next Wednesday night to hear the report of the committee appointed to secure the extension of the Pacific Electric from Santa Ana to Orange. An agreement has been entered into with Paul Shoup, vice-president of the railway. To do her share, Orange must raise about $20,000 in cash.

NOMINATION BY LOSERS.

lican party is true to the principles of its founders and is genuinely the party of justice and of progress, I expect to see it come bodily into the new movement, for the convention that has just sat in this city is in no proper sense of the word a convention at all. It does not represent the masses of the Republican party. It was organized in cynical defiance of their wishes and it has served the purpose only of a group of sinister political bosses who have not one shadow of sympathy with the spirit and purpose of the Republican party of fifty years ago, and many of whom have used the party merely as an adjunct to money-making, either for themselves or for the great crooked financial interests which they serve.

"The bosses who first stole enough delegates to enable them to dominate this convention, and then did their will in it, have no kinship of soul or spirit with the men who started the Republican party on its career as an agent of liberty and justice. Imagine for yourselves how Messrs. Barnes and Penrose and Guggenheim would have looked standing under the historic oaks in that Michigan city where the Republican party was born fifty-six years ago! You, my friends, who are here before me, you are the heirs to the spirit of Abraham Lincoln when he refused longer to be bound by the shackles of the past and faced the new issues in the spirit that the times demanded. But we are more fortunate in one respect than our predecessors, for we who now stand for the progressive cause, the progressive movement, have done forever with all sectionalism, and we make our appeals equally to the men who fought under Grant and to the sons of the men who fought under Lee, for the cause we champion is as emphatically the cause of the South as it is the cause of the North.

"I am in this fight for certain principles and the first and most important of these goes back to Sinai and is embodied in the commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal a nomination,' 'Thou shalt neither steal in politics nor in business,' 'Thou shalt not steal from the people the birthright of the people to rule themselves.'

"I hold, in the language of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, that 'Stealing is stealing.' No people is wholly civilized where a distinction is drawn between stealing an office and stealing a purse. No truly honest man should be satisfied with an office to which his title is not as valid as that of the homestead which shelters his family. I do not know whether our countrymen fully realize the gravity of the crisis which we at this moment face. There is no use in holding primaries, no use in holding elections, if we permit a small group of unscrupulous politicians, some of whom are acting in the interests of big crooked business, to exercise the veto power over these primaries and elections by upsetting the results at their own pleasure.

"The convention which today closed its discreditable career here in Chicago represents a negligible minimum of the rank and file of the Republican party. But what it has done and what it has provided for the future offer material for very serious consideration. The old National Committee, chosen by the politicians four years ago, made up a temporary roll, including some ninety fraudulent delegates who had not been elected by the people, and thereby they controlled a majority of the convention. This fraudulent temporary roll in turn chose a fraudulent Credentials Committee, and all the fraudulent delegates voting on one another's case thereby made up the permanent roll which constituted the fraudulent convention.

"Then this fraudulent convention chooses a new and not less fraudulent National Committee. Now, gentlemen, there are those who ask us to stay in the party which has just fraudulently nominated for the Presidency a man who inspired and profited by the fraud; they ask us to submit to this infamy in the present case on the ground that perhaps we may be able to prevent such infamy in the future. They seem to forget that the vicious circle has been completed and that this fraudulent convention has provided in its fraudulently chosen National Committee a means whereby they can hope once again four years hence and with the like impunity to overthrow the will of the majority of the voters at the primaries.

"The National Committee over whose selection and retention in office the voters have no control whatever makes up the fraudulent temporary roll call which controls the national convention. The National Committee thus fraudulently made up names another National Committee and the new National Committee constituted by the same elements that constituted the old one, has already shown by its actions that it can be trusted four years hence to repeat the misbehavior of the old one. The vicious circle must be broken.

"The powerful crooked political bosses have and ought to have no feeling but contempt for the honest men who submit to their violent and unscrupulous dishonesty. If we permit fraud of this kind to triumph we do a shameful thing and show either that we are faint at heart or dull of conscience.

"As for the principles for which I stand, I have set them forth fully in the many speeches I have made during the last four months while making an active contest for the nomination which I won, and out of which I have been cheated by the men who feared to see these principles reduced to action. Fundamentally these principles are, first, that the people have the right to rule themselves and can do so better than any outsider can rule them, and, second, that it is their duty so to rule in a spirit of justice toward every man and every woman within our borders, and to use the government so far as possible as an instrument for obtaining not merely political but industrial justice.

"We do not stand for these principles as mere abstractions any more than we stand for honesty and fair play as mere abstractions. We seek to apply them practically in every relation of life where we have power.

"We stand for honesty and fair play. We practically apply the commandment 'Thou Shalt Not Steal' and we wish to give a square deal to every citizen of this Republic so that he may have a chance to show the stuff there is in him, unhelped by privilege himself and unhampered by privilege for others.

"I hold that we are performing a high duty in inaugurating this movement for the permanent success of practices such as have obtained in the fraudulent convention that has just closed its sittings would mean the downfall of this republic; and we are performing the most patriotic of duties when we set our faces like flint against such wrong."

TAFT AND SHERMAN.

mitted to make a statement. The chair hears no objection."

WILD DEMONSTRATION.

Allen announced that he would read 'a statement just placed in my hands by Col. Theodore Roosevelt."

A wild demonstration on the floor interrupted him. The Roosevelt men from New Jersey, bearing a standard pulled from the floor, started a procession. California, Minnesota, Nebraska, Indiana, West Virginia and Oklahoma joined the line. Pennsylvania, Maine and North Carolina took their places. And in a roar of cheering and whistling the march proceeded until it encountered a squad of police in the rear of the hall. It was twenty-one minutes before order was restored.

ROOSEVELT STATEMENT.

Mr. Allen declared he had no wish to start a demonstration. He asked for quiet and was accorded close attention during the reading of the Roosevelt statement.

The Roosevelt statement follows:

"A clear majority of the delegates honestly elected to this convention were chosen by the people to nominate me. Under the direction, and with the encouragement of Mr. Taft, the majority of the National Committee, by the so-called 'steam roller' methods and with scandalous disregard of every principle of elementary honesty and decency, stole eighty or ninety delegates, putting in the temporary roll call a sufficient number of fraudulent delegates to defeat the legally expressed will of the people and to substitute a dishonest for an honest majority.

"The convention has now declined to purge the roll of the fraudulent delegates placed thereon by the defunct National Committee; and the majority, which thus indorsed fraud, was made a majority only because it included the fraudulent delegates themselves, who all sat as judges on one another's cases. If these fraudulent votes had not thus been cast and counted the convention would have been purged of their presence. This action makes the convention in no proper sense any longer a Republican convention representing the real Republican party. Therefore, I hope the men elected as Roosevelt delegates will now decline to vote on any matter before the convention. I do not release any delegate from his honorable obligation to vote for me if he votes at all; but under the actual conditions I hope that he will not vote at all.

"The convention as now composed has no claim to represent the voters of the Republican party. It represents nothing but successful fraud in over-riding the will of the rank and file of the party. Any man nominated by the convention as now constituted would be merely the beneficiary of this successful fraud; it would be deeply discreditable to any man to accept the convention's nomination under these circumstances; and any man thus accepting it would have no claim to the support of any Republican on party grounds and would have forfeited the right to ask the support of any honest man of any party on moral grounds.

[Signed]

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

GROANS AND HISSES.

When Mr. Allen reached the point where Mr. Roosevelt asked that his followers refrain from voting on any other proposition in the convention, a burst of cheers, groans and hisses interrupted him.

Mr. Allen then proceeded:

"We have reached a point where a majority of the Roosevelt delegations feel that they can no longer share in the responsibility for the acts of this convention.

"When, by using the votes of the delegates whose rights to sit in this convention are challenged, you took a position which places the power of a political committee above the authority of 77,000 majority elected in a legal primary in California, we decided that your steam roller had exceeded the speed limit. Since then we have asked for no roll call.

"We cannot, in justice to ourselves, share the responsibility of a convention which has said to Ohio—the home of President Taft—that a majority of 47,000 voters, obtained in a legal primary election, must stand aside for the political dictum of a national committeeman discarded by that same majority."

The speaker read the roll of States in which, he said, majorities given against Mr. Taft "went down under the mere rulings of a political committee"—Wisconsin, Maine, Maryland, South Dakota, North Dakota, Nebraska, Oregon, Minnesota, Kansas, Oklahoma, West Virginia and North Carolina.

DONE FIGHTING.

"We do not bolt," concluded Allen; "we merely insist that you, not we, are making the record. And we refuse to be bound by it. We have pleaded with you ten days. We have fought with you five days. We fight no more. We plead no longer. We shall sit in protest and the people who sent us here shall judge us."

Allen left the platform in a storm of cheers.

ANOTHER SURPRISE.

Then came a surprise. The expected fight on the report of the Rules Committee did not materialize. Mr. Watson, Taft floor leader, moved to lay it on the table. It was done with a whoop, and the convention proceeded under the rules of 1908, the minority report also being tabled.

Former Vice-President Fairbanks then began the reading of the platform.

CHEERS FOR BRYAN.

Fairbanks was forced to suspend his reading of the platform while volleys of cheering for William Jennings Bryan rattled from the gallery as the Democratic leader made his way from the hall. Bryan planned to leave for Baltimore late this afternoon.

"We have been greatly honored," resumed Fairbanks, "with the presence of some of our friends in political opposition, some of whom now have business in Baltimore."

A clause in the platform referring to President Taft was cheered. In conclusion, Fairbanks moved the adoption of the platform.

Delegate Walter Cowen of Wisconsin offered the La Follette platform as a complete substitute.

Fairbanks moved to lay it on the table, allowing twenty minutes for debate. It was tabled.

"California declines to vote" shouted Meyer Lissner when that State was reached. A storm of applause interrupted the roll call.

When order had been restored, Chairman Root announced:

"The vote of California has been challenged and the roll of the State will be called."

There was silence until Tryon and Meyerfield, the Taft delegates from the Fourth District were reached. Their "eyes" could hardly be heard for a chorus of "boos" and cat calls.

FOR LA FOLLETTE.

Walter L. Houser was given permission to make a statement for La Follette who, he said, whether nominated or not, would accept no platform which did not substantially embody the provisions of his own platform.

The final announcement gave Taft 666 ayes, Roosevelt, a silent strength of 343,53 noes, and 16 absences. Immediately Chairman Root ordered a call of the States for nominations. There was silence until Ohio was reached. A cheer went up when Warren G. Harding rose to nominate Taft. Iowa decided not to nominate Cummins but to vote for him.

HARDING APPEARS.

Harding took the platform, followed by cheers. He was frequently interrupted by applause.

When finally he reached the name of William Howard Taft, floor and galleries burst into life. The scene began that always marks the culmination of a national convention. One Illinois delegate stripped off his coat to have something to wave. Some of the delegations started marching. The bearer of the Taft banner climbed on to the stage, tearing away the railing as his comrades hoisted him up. Waving his scarlet flag from side to side, he led cheers for the President. California, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and the other Roosevelt States sat silent.

GREAT DEMONSTRATION.

The demonstration for the President lasted sixteen minutes.

When Harding resumed there was silence until he named Taft the "greatest progressive of his time." At that a wave of groans swept through the progressive States. A fist fight occurred among a knot of Maine, Oregon, North Dakota and Florida delegates.

Chairman Root appealed to those Roosevelt delegates who had announce their intention to remain mute in the convention to live up to it. John Wanamaker, seconding Taft, spoke of him as a man "tremendously fitted" for the conduct of a great business such as the administration and as one who had held to the courage of his convictions "under the most difficult conditions since the days of Abraham Lincoln."

Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, who followed Wanamaker, after reciting the annals of "sixteen years of peace and prosperity," asked:

"Who was associated with all this work, during those sixteen years?"

"Teddy!" yelled the crowd.

Butler was plainly nonplussed for a moment and interrupted his speech to identify President Taft as the person referred to.

LA FOLLETTE NOMINATED.

Michael Olbrich of Wisconsin then placed Senator La Follette in nomination.

When Olbrich concluded, there was a demonstration for La Follette by the Wisconsin and North Dakota delegates on the floor, and by many in the galleries, several women displaying pictures of the Senator. The enthusiasm continued for upwards of ten minutes. Robert M. Pollock of Fargo, N. D., seconded the La Follette nomination in a brief speech of tribute.

When Massachusetts was reached a roll call was demanded. As the Roosevelt men recorded themselves present and refused to vote, Chairman Root ordered that their alternates be called in their stead.

STORM BREAKS.

This ruling broke the storm. The Roosevelt men sprang to their feet and roared.

"Massachusetts is a law-abiding State and will stand for no such stealing," shouted one of the delegates.

Root advanced to the front of the platform and said:

"If any delegate sent here by the State of Massachusetts refuses to do his duty his alternate may be called on to do it."

Tumult followed and Massachusetts delegates became the focal point of a scene of wild disorder.

Many Roosevelt delegates stood on their chairs and shook their fists at Senator Root who stood unperturbed at the front of the stage.

Cries of "robber," "thief," and "crook" came from the floor and galleries.

Delegate-at-large Fosdick of Massachusetts made a point of order that answering "present" was sufficient for the roll call and did not entitle the alternate to vote.

Chairman Root ruled otherwise.

Fosdick said he would appeal from the decision of the chair. Mr. Root said the appeal would be allowed at the close of the voting. In Massachusetts the alternates of the delegates-at-large, elected at the primaries, were all pledged to Taft.

As the clerk called the roll all of the delegates-at-large answered "present and not voting."

The alternates then were called, but only two answered, voting for Taft.

ROOT'S RULING.

Senator Root ruled that whenever a State vote was challenged the rule of calling the alternates for delegates who refused to vote would be followed. The answer of "present and not voting" was received from the States where there was no challenge and no roll call of the State.

After the disorderly roll call had been completed, the vote was announced, Taft, twenty; not voting, sixteen.

The announced result of the roll call was: Absent, 6; Hughes, 2; Cummins, 17; La Follette, 41; Roosevelt, 107; not voting, 344; Taft, 561. The delegates had kept on voting and realized Taft had won the nomination before an announcement had been made. The Taft delegates stood on chairs and cheered.

Immediately upon the formal announcement by Senator Root of the nomination of President Taft, the roll call for nominations of Vice-President began.

Alabama yielded to New York, and J. Van Vechten Allcott took the platform to renominate Vice-President Sherman.

Allcott's speech did not last three minutes and it was received without enthusiasm. Harry Dougherty, for Ohio, merely moved a second for Sherman's nomination.

When Pennsylvania was reached, C. Tyson Kratz rose and shouted:

"On behalf of Pennsylvania, I nominate Boise Penrose."

There was no second.

There were no other nominations and the call of the roll on the Vice-Presidential nomination began at 9:45 p.m.

The announced result of the roll call was:

Vice-President Sherman, New York, 597.

Gov. Hadley, Missouri, 14.

Senator Borah, Idaho, 21.

Former Senator Beveridge, Indiana, 2.

Charles E. Merriam, Chicago, 20.

Howard Gillette, Chicago, 1.

Not voting, 352.

Absent, 71.

The vote of six delegates from Vermont cast at 10:10 o'clock p.m., gave Sherman one over the 541 necessary to nominate.

NOTIFY THE PRESIDENT.

A resolution appointing Senator Root chairman of the convention to notify the President of his nomination and naming Thomas Devine of Colorado chairman of the committee to notify the Vice-President was adopted while the delegate hurried from the hall. In the closing moments of the convention a resolution was adopted under the gavel giving the National Committee the power to fill all vacancies and empowering the committee to declare vacant the seat of any member who "refuses to support the nominees of this convention."

At 10:30 o'clock Delegate Estabrook of New Hampshire moved that the convention adjourn without delay, and the motion was adopted.

The delegates filed out in silence.

As the last of the delegates left the hall the band played "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow."

United States Attorney in San Francisco Wants Steamship Officials to Stop Smuggling of Opium.

[By Federal (Wireless) Line to The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 22.—[Special Dispatch.] Believing that the Pacific Mail Steamship officers could prevent the importation of contraband opium if the Pacific Mail made effort to do so, United States Dist.-Atty. James McNab announced today that he would question all the company's officers.

"The company could effectively stop the smuggling if it sincerely wanted to," said McNab. "I am going after the mail company and will call every officer and member of the crew before this office and make a thorough investigation. Although the law gives us the right to fine only the captain of a vessel carrying undeclared articles there may be a way of getting at the subordinates."

McNab determined upon this step after the seizure of over $6000 worth of opium on the Pacific Mail Liner Mongolia brought 1000 tins of opium yesterday. It was found that the into port, but of this amount only a small part has been seized. A fine of $1100 was imposed on Capt. H. E. Morton, Master of the Mongolia, to be collected under a civil suit by the government.

I.W.W. AGITATORS ROUTED.

Under the Very Eyes of the Portland Police They Tried to Start Dissension in Crew of Workers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Twenty-five Industrial Workers of the World, under the eyes of Police Sergt. Roberts and four policemen, tried to prevent 100 laborers from being sent out last night to White Salmon, Wash., where they are to be used for construction work on a big power dam by Stone & Webster.

The project is that of the power plant of North Western Electric Company, and Stone & Webster were defeated after a free-for-all fight. The agitators gathered at the North Bank Station at Tenth and Hoyt streets, where the laborers were to leave on a train, and started a demonstration. Their verbal efforts caused five of the laborers to leave the crew. With a cheer at their success, the agitators began pushing and jostling the other workers, and a fight ensued. Police soon appeared and it was stopped when the I.W.W.s were getting the worst of it. The laborers then went to their train. A full force of men is now working on the White Salmon dam again, and the strike is completely broken.

Player Breaks Leg.

Carl Sawyer, shortstop on the Soldiers' Home baseball team, fractured his right leg above the ankle yesterday afternoon while sliding to third base. He was removed in an ambulance to the hospital at the Home and the doctors say it will be several weeks before he recovers the use of the leg. Sawyer walloped out a long drive to right in the fifth inning and tried to stretch it into a three-bagger. He lives at Twenty-sixth street and Central avenue. The Home team defeated the Los Angeles Fire Department's nine, 3 to 1.

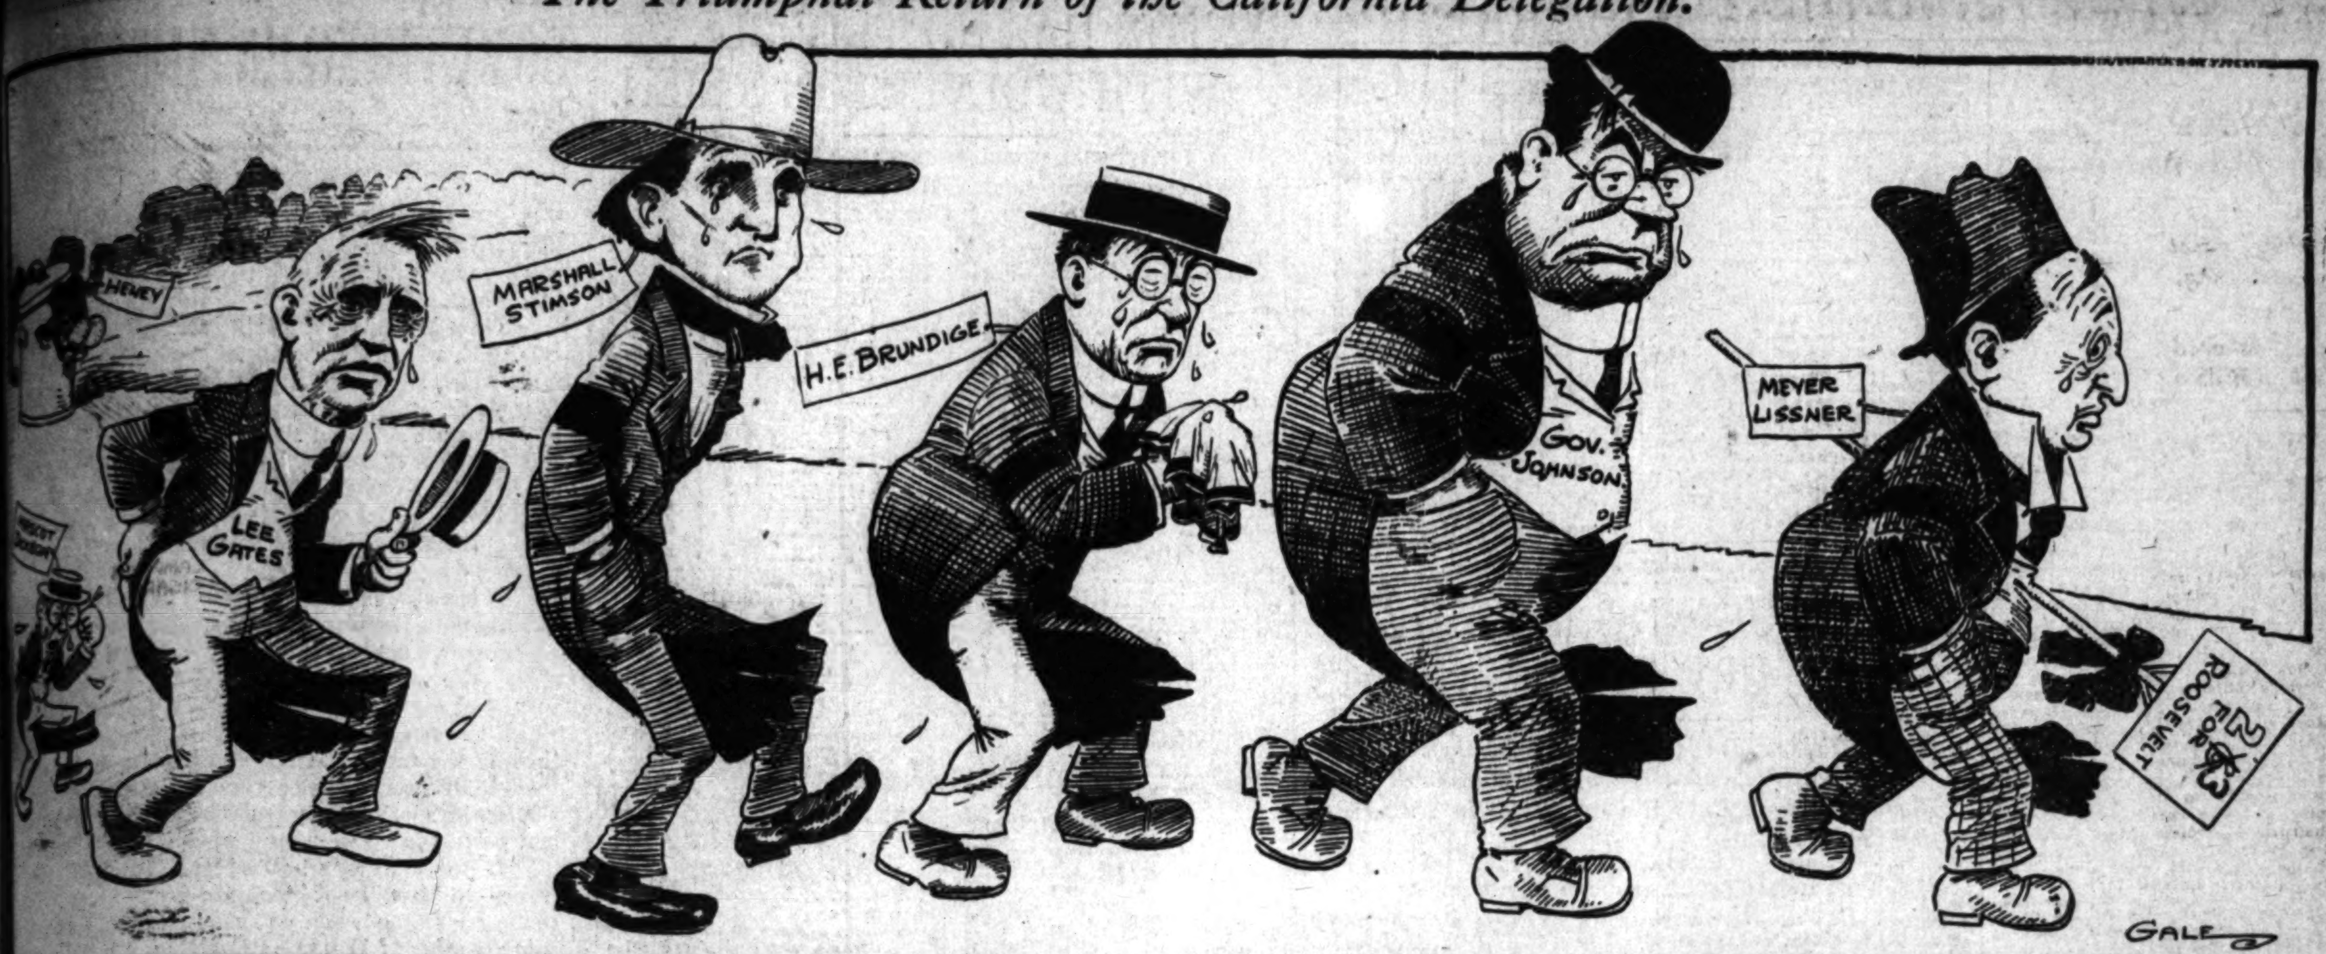
The Triumphal Return of the California Delegation.



Pointed Study of the California Situation.

Hon. Lafayette Young,

Iowa editor and former United States Senator, who said last night the Johnsons, Heneys and others who have not been in the Republican party long may go out, but beyond that there would be no considerable bolt following the result of the Chicago Convention.

Idiotic Antics.

THEY FOOLED THEIR READERS.

SILLY TRICKS OF ROOSEVELT'S ORGANS HEREABOUTS.

"No Hope for Taft," They Said. How the Heathen Raged and Imagined Vain Things as to the Republican National Convention. Made a Hero of Heney.

Now that Taft and Sherman have been renominated by the Republican National Convention and the new Bull Moose party invented by Hiram Johnson and Francis J. Heney is wallowing around in the hollows of the can, a few excerpts from the "Progressive" party newspaper organs in this city published in bold face type before and during the Chicago convention make interesting reading.

On June 3, The Tribune stated that Medill McCormick, the harvester trust magnate, declared that "if the convention tries to seat Taft delegates from Washington I will shoot off the roof of the Coliseum." Like all progressives, McCormick failed to carry out his warlike threat and the roof of the convention hall remains intact.

At "sunrise" the following day the Tribune asserted in defiant tones that "Roosevelt will not tolerate Root as chairman, and further that it is an absolute certainty that Root will not be elected." But Mr. Root served as temporary and permanent chairman.

On June 5 the Bull Moose morning sheet declared that "Root rendered great service to his country as Secretary of State and War, but now is an enemy of the people because he is against Roosevelt." Funny isn't it?

Two days later E. A. Dickson, the morning Bull Moose's correspondent at the front, telegraphed his paper that "Francis J. Heney, the man who convicted Abe Ruef, is on his way to Chicago to help Roosevelt and fight for a square deal and save the Republican party." Dickson failed to mention the fact that Heney is a Democrat.

Dickson came through with a two column screech on June 8 in The Tribune declaring that "Taft is wrecking the Republican party and his henchmen will ruin the party if they can't rule." If he had placed Roosevelt's name in place of Taft's he would have been nearer the truth. The paper scorched Penrose, Crane and leading Republicans for fighting against Roosevelt, but not a word about George W. Perkins, Dan Hanna, "Bill" Flinn and "Dynamite" Ed Perry, the backbone and sinew of the Roosevelt campaign.

The next day the "sunrise" editor declared that "if the National Committee seats all of the Roosevelt delegates he will be nominated by acclamation," which would have been true "if." Dickson came across with a "powerful" article declaring that "even if the National Committee should seat every Taft contestant, the outcome would be one of uncertainty." Apparently the "bolt" bug hadn't been discovered at that time. It clearly shows that the Roosevelt followers would have remained in the convention, "fraud or no fraud," if the dik-dik hunter from Oyster Bay had had enough votes to put him over the line. And then they spout "principle." Huh!

On June 10, Giff Pinchot, who was canned by Taft for insubordination, sent a special dispatch to the Tribune stating that "Roosevelt is absolutely certain of nomination. They may steal all the delegates they have a mind to and then they will lose. Already there is talk of a compromise candidate." Giff wasn't talking bolt then for the simple reason that he thought Roosevelt would be able to "influence" enough Taft delegates to make his nomination certain. "Roosevelt says he isn't going to Chicago unless his services are needed." He went, but he didn't "come back." Sunrise editor says: "Gov. Hiram Johnson called' to the front to fight against loathsome capital and predatory wealth!"

On June 11, Heney said in The Tribune: "I intend to hurl their crooked schemes right into their teeth." Zowie, and a couple of tush tushes! Isn't the "Wild Man from Borneo" the nasty one?

On June 13, the California delegates held an indignation meeting at the Arcade Depot before departing for Waterloo and Meyer Li$$ner sent a naughty little telegram to Chairman Rosewater declaring that he would slap Victor on the wrist thrice if he "didn't cut out the rough stuff." In order to help defray the cost of the trip, leading Goo-Goos passed the hat and collected $19.42. Talk about your loathsome capital, Marmaduke?

About this time the log of the Oxpress looms big on the horizon and claims that Heney "voices the sentiment of the country when he calls national committeemen crooks. "No hope for Taft," flamed a front page Oxpress headline.

On the 11th the twilight edition of the bull moose party bellowed that "Sentiment at Chicago is increasing for T. R. The decision seating Taft men does not affect convention control."

See! No bolt bugs contemplated at this time. Why? because they thought they could win in the convention even if the ""Taft crooked delegates" were seated. Where is your principle, Mr. Alleged Progressive?

The following day the Oxpress devotes two columns to a sturdy defense of F. J. Heney, the man who convicted Abe Ruef. "Heney is not a firebrand," says the twilight editor, "he is a brave and refined gentleman." Get the hook.

The next day the Oxpress announced that the National Committee "gives T. R. eight Missouri delegates," and then scored the committee for not giving T. R. all of the contested delegates. Roosevelt declares that he is a "regular." He didn't say what kind of "regular."

The "sunrise edition burst forth on the 14th declaring that the bosses caught in act, cower and whine before lash uplifted by American people." Wirra wirra and zip wow!

The next morning: "The ringsters dismayed by T. R. coming; Taft crowd in terror." Ain't it awful Clarice?

The 16th: "Dixie delegates switch to T. R. Stampede is on, Taft ranks now in panic, see beginning of the end. Gloom prevails in Taft camp." They didn't object to "fraudulent delegates" when they saw 'em coming their way, hey bo?

Senator Dixon, T. R.'s former campaign manager, declared on the 17th that "Roosevelt will win on the first ballot with forty-two votes to spare."

My, my, Dix old boy, how could you do it?

The Tribune declared on the 18th that the Roosevelt boomers are "wild with enthusiasm and will not surrender." Glad to know what made them "wild" and who dare say they surrendered? They just quit like dogs, that's all.

On the 19th, Senator Dixon says that "whole fight against T. R. will collapse before nomination for President is reached." Gee, but you're a poor guesser, Senator. Tribune declared that "Taft henchmen stole 150 delegates." "Roosevelt sure winner," says Oxpress. Taft defeated beyond a doubt. Taft men look for a third candidate. "Sure, they were looking to T. R. to head the bull moose party!

On the 20th, according to the Oxpress "the California delegates" "threaten to bolt." Well, what do you know about that? Tribune now claims that Taft's henchmen only stole seventy-two votes. How strange!

The Tribune and Oxpress both fighting for new party on the 21st. Flash: "Johnson bolts convention, but nobody follows him." Poor Hiram, you were such a good Democrat, how could you do it?

Twenty-second: T. R. says "his hat is in the ring and will be forever." Thank the Lord, here's hoping he keeps it there. Via direct wire to the Oxpress: Roosevelt absolutely refuses to accept the Republican nomination for President. "Well, who'd a thunk it?"

NOMINATING SPEECH OF WARREN G. HARDING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 22.—Warren G. Harding, of Ohio, placed the name of President Taft for the nomination and in doing so he referred repeatedly to internecine strife that had almost convulsed the convention. He declared that "only once before was the foundation of the nation attacked," making reference to the Civil War.

"You have heard much lately about the people's rule," he said. "Mr. Chairman and Sirs, the people's rule is no new discovery to a sovereign American people. Nor is demagogic employment of the term new to the world's hearing. Through such employment, centuries ago, republics tottered and Republican liberties were lost in the sway of empires."

Mr. Harding referred to the insurgents. He had heard men arrogate to themselves that title, he said, "seemingly forgetting that progression is the first essential to Republican fellowship.

"Progression," he continued, "is not proclamation nor palaver. It is not made of personal pronouns nor perennial pronouncements. It is not the perturbation of a people passion-wrought, nor a promise proposed.

"Progression is everlastingly lifting the standards that marked the end of the world's march yesterday and planting them on new and advanced heights today.

"Tested by such a standard, President Taft is the greatest progressive of the age. Measuring his capacity by the exactions of experience; testing his patriotism by every demand of honesty, courage and justice; knowing his devotion to his country and its people, on behalf of Ohio and 100,000,000 of advancing Americans, I name for re-nomination our great President, William Howard Taft."

BY A TWO-THIRDS VOTE.

sota, Nebraska, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and West Virginia.

SWAN SONG.

Heny J. Allen, of Kansas, was chosen to sing to the convention Col. Roosevelt's swan song. He did it well and strongly indorsed the Colonel's plea to his supporters not to vote on any motion which might thereafter be put.

Col. Roosevelt's extravagant denunciation of the convention and his impassioned plea for support stiffened several delegations. New York voted eighty-five for the platform to five against. Illinois, which had voted as strongly against the President as fifty-one to seven, swung around and voted forty-six for the Taft platform to nine against, with three absent. Idaho came over in a body and so did Missouri. Gains were made in several States and the Taft total, 666, made it so obvious that the President was in full control of the convention and constantly gaining that the Roosevelt people became more ugly than ever.

BRYAN'S VIEW.

Col. Bryan, who threw up his job as a reporter and left for the Democratic convention in Baltimore this afternoon, admitted that he believed success or failure of the Roosevelt third party must depend wholly on the wisdom with which the Democrats choose their Presidential candidate. Mr. Bryan would not indicate what course he regarded as the wisest for the Democrats to pursue, but he indicated that the nomination of a conservative would surely pave the way for the success of the proposed new party. He was cheered by a large section of the galleries and by most of the Roosevelt delegates as he left the Coliseum. And why not? He is almost as radical as Heney and Roosevelt and Johnson and Stubbs, and he stands for something, which is more than can be said for the satellite element of the Roosevelt following.

STRIFE PROMOTER.

Theodore Roosevelt, who cannot bring himself to the realization of the fact that the "overwhelming demand" for his nomination is a myth, the vagary of a disordered brain, neglected not a single opportunity to promote strife and ill-will in the party to which he owes so much. He utilized his last opportunity in the convention when he asked Allen, of Kansas, to read his violent denunciation of the convention because it had failed to nominate him.

This pronouncement, with its recklessness of facts and its extravagance of denunciation, was, by its very bitterness, calculated to gratify while it fomented the passions of his following, composed in large part of men who have neither time nor inclination to sift evidence or to weigh conclusions and who, therefore, greedily accept his assertions with confidence that he is telling them the truth. Few even among those who know Mr. Roosevelt best realize how thoroughly incapable he is of forming an unbiased opinion on any subject, or how infinite is his capacity for deluding himself, but probably never before this convention has there been presented such an example of his propensity to make reckless and wholly unwarranted assertions and of the readiness of his followers blindly to accept his dictum without ever giving the subject a thought for themselves.

The attitude of Col. Roosevelt here has been strikingly suggestive of the version of "America" which has been going the rounds for some days.

It runs like this:

My country, mostly me
Perkins, Bill Flinn and me
For President, take me—
Or go to H——!

MANY WOUNDS.

As a result of the reiteration of Col. Roosevelt's cries of fraud and thieves, no Republican convention ever adjourned leaving so many sores, and with so little prospect that the wounds would be healed. His determination to start a third party, which he can dominate, and which can be made first to serve his ambition, may operate to impress upon the general public more of his real character than they have hitherto dreamed. And, if it does it would doubtless send thousands of Republicans back into the Taft camp, for should they ever discover the truth they would be affected by a revulsion of feeling which would insure Mr. Taft's election.

For the present, it is difficult to make any predictions based on the action of this convention. It will take time to make clear the effects, to show how far Mr. Roosevelt, in the bitterness of his disappointment, has succeeded in poisoning the party which made him.

FINANCED BY PERKINS.

One thing is certain, however, as well as interesting. George W. Perkins assured Col. Roosevelt today that he would finance the third party scheme, and would continue to do so so long as it seemed to him that he could, thereby promote the defeat of President Taft. And Amos Pinchot, actuated, no doubt, by another motive, said he and his brother could be counted on to contribute their share.

The Roosevelt policy is to organize committees in every county in every Republican State, and, by continuing to misrepresent and to slander the National Committee and the national convention, to arouse the resentment of the people and to excite a sympathy for himself which he realizes cannot, by any possibility, affect his election, but which will, he believes, prevent President Taft from being elected, and he feels Mr. Taft should be punished without mercy because he has permitted himself to become an obstacle to the Roosevelt ambition.

Had Mr. Roosevelt cared as much for the insurgent movement as he has all along pretended, he could easily have accomplished the nomination of Gov. Hadley of Missouri for Vice-President today. But even when this was proposed to him, he would have nothing of it. He wanted to be nominated himself, and for the party which was denied his wish, he has nothing but hatred, a hatred so great, that like Samson, he would willingly bring the temple down upon himself in order that his desire for revenge might be satisfied.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] H. Kojima, 28 years old, a Japanese farmer living near Los Angeles, and Miss Agnes Dvorak, 25 years of age, a white woman of Los Angeles, arrived in Vancouver, Wash., last evening, and obtained a marriage license. They were married later by G. Lloyd Davis, justice of peace.

Mixed marriages are more common at Vancouver than in any other city in Washington or on the Pacific Coast, that being the first point at which licenses can be obtained by couples from California and Oregon, where such marriages are forbidden. A bill making them illegal in Washington was killed by the last Legislature. Nearly thirty mixed marriages have taken place at Vancouver in less than two years.

How to be Certain of Curing Constipation

Prejudice is a hard thing to overcome but where health is at stake and the opinion of thousands of reliable people differs from yours, prejudice then becomes your menace and you ought to lay it aside. This is said in the interest of people suffering from chronic constipation, and it is worthy of their attention.

In the opinion of legions of reliable American people the most stubborn constipation imaginable can be cured by a brief use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You may not have heard of it before, but do not doubt its merits on that account, or because it has not been blatantly advertised. It has sold very successfully on word of mouth recommendation. Parents are giving it to their children today who were given it by their parents, and it has been truthfully said that more druggists use it personally in their families than any other laxative.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is mild, gentle, non-griping—not violent, like salts or cathartics. It cures gradually and pleasantly, so that in time nature again does its own work without outside aid. Constipated people owe it to themselves to use this grand bowel specific.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at 50 cents or $1.00 a large bottle (family size,) can have a sample bottle sent to the home free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 405 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

BEAVERS EASY FOR STEWART.

Vernon Heaver Has Little Trouble in Winning.

Koestner Is Hit Hard All Around the Lot.

Tightens Up and Pitches When It Is Too Late.

BY GREY OLIVER.

Vernon, 7; Portland, 3.

McCredie worked Koestner against the Tigers yesterday out at the ball ground and what they did to him was a plenty. Knocked him for no less than eleven swats and seven runs in the first five innings and these proved to be more than enough.

Have to hand it to Stewart again. He held the Beavers to three scattered hits in the first seven innings and then when they fell on him for five in the eighth they got their three runs, but these were some shy of the right number.

Koestner did not have much until after it was too late and the Tigers tore into him early and won the game in the first two innings. They got a pair in the first deal and in the first draw were slipped three more, so the Beavers found themselves against a full hand before the game had gone fifteen minutes.

This condition knocked all the pep out of the proceedings and the game dragged after that. Aside from two fast double plays, there was nothing startling in the fielding line, but the playing was excellent at all times.

Bancroft did some more fancy stuff in handing grounders over to Rapps at first base and all of his three outs and six assists were good ones. Brashear and Litschi were also there and the fans got the worth of the money in watching these two alone, without looking at the others.

Koestner got the first two Tigers out in the first inning and then walked McDonnell, who stole second. A moment later, Brashear walked and Bayless's infield single filled the bases. Litschi cracked a hot single to left and McDonnell and Brashear crossed the plate.

In the second Brown was an easy out at first and Stewart singled to left. Carlisle hit to center and Koestner filled the bases by soaking Kane in the back with the ball. Hap Hogan, coaching at third base, yelled so loudly that the noise rattled Koestner and he walked McDonnell, forcing in Stewart with a run. Brashear's single to left scored Carlisle and put Kane on third and he walked in after the catch of Bayless's sacrifice fly to left. Three easy runs.

Two singles and two outs made another run in the third and a pass, two singles and Kreuger's boot of one of these scored Brashear with the final Vernon run in the fourth. Very little even dangerous after that.

Stewart had the Beavers lashed to the mast until the eighth. The only time they were dangerous was in the fifth, when, with two out, Burch whanged a triple to right center, but he could not score.

In the eighth Koestner beat out an infield single and easily scored on Doane's triple to left center. Lindsay's bouncing hit sent Doane in and a single by Rodgers, Kreuger's fielder's choice, and a scratch hit by Mahoney, scored Lindsay with the third and final run.

Seemed pretty easy and it was. At that, the Beavers had all the luck, for four of their five swats in this inning were on dull bouncing balls that just missed every infielder. Stewart was doing high-class pitching or they would have made something else beside bouncers.

Chance's men did not shake their sox loose because of the demonstration in practice, however, and they were confident they would administer another bitter dose to the locals. Score:

TENNIS ORIGINATED IN MIDDLE AGES.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

LONDON, June 14.—Most people when they speak of "tennis" refer to lawn tennis and not to the far more ancient game which was the forefather of the modern adaptation. Tennis proper is perhaps the oldest of all existing ball games. It is also one of the most difficult games to learn, on account of the number and intricacy of its rules, which, however, when learned make it one of the most interesting.

It has an additional interest, also, owing to its historical associations. Tennis first made its appearance in Europe in the Middle Ages, when it was played in open courts, and in the parks belonging to the feudal castles of France and Italy. The game is mentioned in Arthurian romance, but it was certainly unknown in the time of King Arthur.

The name of tennis is suggested to have sprung from the exclamation "Tenez," which was used by early French players when serving the ball. In France the game is called jeu de paume. It would seem from this that originally the ball was struck with the palm of the hand, only, as in the game of fives. Afterward, the players wore a glove, as they do still in the Basque country. Strings and cross strings were next stretched upon the glove to give a greater impulse to the ball, and from this to the addition of a short handle was an easy transition.

We wish to announce that we are prepared to furnish SINK-DRAINBOARDS and iron sinks combined ready for use, in houses, apartments, hotels and public buildings. All you have to do is put legs under them.

These DRAINBOARDS are made from NEARSTONE, which is an artificial stone made from a formula which has been thoroughly tested during the past four years, and has proved by actual use to be the very best artificial stone on the market for making SINK DRAINBOARDS, and is absolutely SANITARY. IT WILL NOT CRACK NOR WARP.

This artificial stone is now in use in Universities, High Schools, Hotels, Apartments and numerous Homes.

It has always been customary to send out workmen to build these drainboards at the house, which has proved an expensive and unsatisfactory way of doing the business. We manufacture these drainboards at our factory, and carry them in stock in STANDARD sizes, which has never been done on this coast. By making them at the factory in large quantities, we can supply them to the user at less cost and at the same time supply a better article, which we guarantee to be properly made and perfect in every respect when it leaves our factory.

If you want a first-class DRAINBOARD in your home—which will not crack nor warp—or are contemplating building when you may need only one, or a large number of DRAINBOARDS, it will pay you to call at once; see our DRAINBOARDS and get our prices.

WE ARE PREPARED TO PROVE WE HAVE THE BEST ARTICLE ON THE MARKET.

Drainboards made from artificial stone can never be relied upon unless they are made at a factory and thoroughly seasoned before used.

Good "Times" Camp.

FUN FOR BOYS AGAIN ON TAP.

Plans for Summer at Avalon Have Been Completed.

Lads Permitted Independence in Winning Big Treat.

Youngsters Already Prepare for the Rendezvous.

"The most unique and helpful proposition ever made to the public by an American newspaper," is the way a prominent philanthropist characterized the Times Camp at Avalon last summer. This remarkable statement was made after a careful inspection of the establishment and observation of the methods employed.

If a proposition is both unique and helpful, it is bound to be interesting; so the Times Catalina Camp for Boys cannot fail to entertain all who are in any way interested in the welfare of the "youngsters" of Southern California.

The Times Camp is a cleverly conceived democracy of fun. The richest and the poorest boy in Southern California have exactly the same opportunity to win a free vacation on beautiful Santa Catalina Island; and in the Times Camp they are treated with exactly the same consideration. In a community of this kind it only has to be "left to the kids" to adjust this matter of social equality, when once the equality of opportunity is established.

The difference of brain and character are the only differences boys recognize when they are gathered together in free comradeship; and the rules of the game, whereby boys win their way into the Times Camp are such that only those of worthy personality gain the coveted prize. When the ability to work worthily and persistently is the one rule by which contestants for any given honor are judged, it is unlikely that any but the worthy shall cross the goal.

HAVE EQUAL CHANCES.

So, while the vacation at Catalina which The Times offers the boys of Southern California is free, it in no wise savors of charity. Right here is one of its unique characteristics; and the whole tone of the camp is so stimulated by this fact that it is worth especial emphasis. The boys work for their Catalina tickets. The work is light, agreeable and educational, but it is nevertheless work, so that the fellow who gets the ticket enters into his reward with all the manly glow and enthusiasm which accompanies the realization of personal achievement. And as the boys who have already partaken of the bounty of the Times Camp will attest, the reward of the slight service required is generous in the extreme.

In the matter of location, the Times Camp is the most unique boys' camp in the world. The fame of Santa Catalina Island has reached to every corner of the civilized world, and Avalon is known wherever travelers congregate as the very capital of sea sports. And not only are there sea charms, but mountain charms, too—a wonderful combination of natural resources fashioned apparently on purpose to afford boys a perfect vacation.

The Times Camp itself nestles in a lovely wooded canyon among the beautiful soft hills which surround Avalon Bay. From the rear of the camp leads the wonderful trail which climbs to the heights of the island, where the weird sea fog often rolls along the skyline like an avalanche of monstrous snowballs, always threatening to roll down into the canyon, but always melted away by the defending sunshine of the Avalon Valley just before they tumble down the lee walls.

From the front of the encampment leads the broad, tree-bowered roadway to the crescent shore, where the luring sea reflects the light of adventure and mysterious delight in the eager eyes of every boy who faces it.

On one side of the rows of tents lies the exquisite three-acre garden where all the flowers for the big hotel are raised, and on the other side rise precipitately the fascinating range of hills where the famed wild goats bound from crag to crag, like the chamois of the Alps, and hurl their bleating challenges down onto the very heads of The Times boys. Chasing young wild goats and appropriating kids for camp mascots has been developed to a fine art at the Times Camp.

THE DAY IN CAMP.

A day at the Times Camp is strenuous, to say the least. It begins at dawn, if not earlier. At the first peep of day little gray figures begin to steal from between the tent flaps and flit away seaward, carrying over their shoulders weird wands and staves which, in the disillusioning light of day, usually prove to be fishing poles and gaffs. Usually, too, the neutral tints of the figures which are first seen retreating from the tents with ghostly unobtrusiveness, turn to animated monuments of lobster-red and watery blue in the full glare of day—red where sunburned limbs protrude from scant blue bathing suits. For the airy costume of the seat bath is the favorite uniform of The Times boys throughout the Avalon season.

[illegible] adds the favorite vacation sport of the average boy, and the fact that the most famous fishing in the world is to be had in Catalina waters is not overlooked by the youngster when he reaches Avalon. Other sports much in favor at the camp are, as has been mentioned, the [illegible] through the hills; seashell collecting [illegible] under the guidance of the [illegible] or superintendent; free [illegible] glass-bottomed boats [illegible] the same careful supervision; [illegible] games with visiting teams; [illegible] tournaments for valuable prizes, and other athletic stunts arranged from time to time on a large scale. Many of the boys in whom the money-making instinct is highly developed, earn considerable sums caddying on the nearby golf links for a couple of hours each day.

FAMOUS BREAKFAST.

The early risers who "go a-fishin," are pretty sure to be back by breakfast time, for this meal is famous among the lads for its hot cakes and maple syrup, as well as for other dishes, and usually the returning anglers are early enough to have their strings of fish fried by the chef and slipped into their places as they seat

From the rear of the camp leads the wonderful trail which climbs to the heights of the island, where the weird sea fog often rolls over the skyline like an avalanche of monstrous snowballs, always threatening to roll down into the canyon, but always melted away by the defending sunshine of the Avalon Valley just before they tumble down the walls.

From the front of the encampment leads the broad, tree-bowered roadway to the crescent shore, where the [illegible] sea reflects the light of adventure and mysterious delight in the eager eyes of every boy who faces it. On one side of the rows of tents lies the exquisite three-acre garden where all the flowers for the big hotel are raised, and on the other side rises precipitately the fascinating range of hills where the famed wild goats bound from crag to crag, like the chamois of the Alps, and hurl their bleating challenges down onto the very heads of The Times boys. Chasing young wild goats and appropriating kids for camp mascots has been developed to a fine art at the Times Camp.

THE DAY IN CAMP.

A day at the Times Camp is strenuous, to say the least. It begins at dawn, or earlier. At the first peep of day little gray figures begin to steal from between the tent flaps and [illegible] seaward, carrying over their shoulders weird wands and staves which in the disillusioning light of day prove to be fishing poles and [illegible]. Usually, too, the neutral tints of the figures which are first seen rebounding from the tents with ghostly [illegible] turn to animated [illegible] of lobster-red and watery blue in the full glare of day—red where sunburned limbs protrude from scant blue bathing suits. For the airy costume of the seat bath is the favorite uniform of The Times boys throughout the Avalon season.

[illegible] holds the favorite [illegible] sport of the average boy, and [illegible] the most famous fishing [illegible] world is to be had in Catalina waters is not overlooked by the [illegible] when he reaches Avalon. Other sports much in favor at the camp, as has been mentioned, the [illegible] jaunts through the hills; [illegible] seashell collecting [illegible] the guidance of the superintendent; free [illegible] glass-bottomed boats [illegible] careful supervision; [illegible] with visiting teams; [illegible] tournaments for valuable [illegible], and other athletic stunts [illegible] from time to time on a [illegible]. Many of the boys in [illegible] the money-making instinct is [illegible] developed, earn considerable [illegible] by caddying on the nearby golf [illegible] for a couple of hours each day.

FAMOUS BREAKFAST.

The lucky ones who "go a-fishin," [illegible] to be back by breakfast. [illegible] meal is famous [illegible] for its hot cakes and [illegible] syrup, as well as for other [illegible], and usually the returning [illegible] are early enough to have their [illegible] of fish fried by the chef and [illegible] into their places as they seat themselves at the table. That is certainly "going some," isn't it?

Can you, dear parent (taking for granted that you still cherish memories of your own youth) imagine any greater triumph for a boy than to sit down before a whole tableful of envious companions and devour the trophies of his angling prowess? This is a thriller, sure enough, and such fine triumphs are to be witnessed at 7 o'clock any morning in The Times camp during the summer.

Last summer some wag in Avalon reported that the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Fish was about to attempt to put a quietus on the boy anglers of The Times camp on the charge that the fish in Avalon Bay were not allowed enough sleep. To puncture the liquid rooftree of the fish family with leaden sinkers at 4 a.m., regularly, without once allowing more than one still hour to pass undisturbed, was claimed to be more than the finny folk could stand, and that said action, unremitting and unrelenting, constituted cruelty!

Poor kids, some of them took the threat seriously, and were afraid that they would have to give up fishing. And what's the use of living, anyway, if you can't fish?

THAT SWELL DINNER!

At noon a sumptuous dinner is served in camp, and at 6 p.m., a delicious supper, of which ice cream is often an appreciated item, is spread before the ravenous bunch. After dark the boys gather in the big music tent and listen to phonograph, pianola and singing until bed time. A trained matron is in the camp day and night to attend to the welfare of every boy.

The encampment is arranged with military precision, two smart rows of sleeping tents forming a main street, with the immense mess table stretching down the center under a substantial awning. The headquarters, commissary, kitchen and other departments are arranged in their appropriate places.

All drinking water is brought from the mainland in bottles. The boys are never served local island water.

The wonderful order which is kept among all these boys of varying temperaments has been remarked upon by all outsiders who are familiar with the camp. The lads are restrained as little as possible, and are put on their honor to refrain from obtruding on their neighbors in Avalon; and they live up to these requirements in fine style.

COMING AND GOING.

Every fourth day, when the new contingents arrive to displace the old, there is a lively scene in camp; for at the mid-day meal, both parties sit together at the long table and the good-natured banter which flies about is enough to make one's head swim. On arrival, the newcomers are first refreshed with all the iced lemonade they can drink, dipped from a huge crock at the head of the table. Later they are assigned to their respective tents and instructed in keeping them in order. Every effort is made to arrange the boys in such groups as they may themselves prefer, both as to sleeping and table accommodations, and teams from the same town or vicinity are not broken up when it can be avoided.

To see the "kids," especially the new arrivals, fresh from the sea voyage, devour one of the sumptuous camp dinners, is a sight to drive a chronic dyspeptic insane with jealousy. Boys are "some eaters" under almost any circumstances; but "grub" always tastes doubly good in the big outdoors, with the sea breeze wafting up through the pungent eucalyptus trees. No matter how much a boy may eat at home, he'll go that record one better in camp.

The young guests are not expected to do any of the work of the camp. A few boys who wish to prolong their stay at Avalon are allowed to do so in return for serving at the table and helping about camp; but this is entirely voluntary on their part. A trained chef with a corps of assistants is in charge of the culinary department, and the matron attends to the sleeping quarters. The smaller boys are given special attention by the matron.

Let it be impressed upon parents that this outing is altogether free, safe and delightful for any boy who has spirit enough to comply with the preliminary requirements. The Times Camp is not a "newsboys'" camp. It is open to bright boys of all classes.

The greatest good that can be done to any boy, physically and morally, is to encourage in him his natural bent for outdoor sport. Deny that desire and you stunt his body, his mind and his soul. The boy has a primitive instinct for appreciation of the big things of outdoors. Let him chum with Nature and he is pretty safe from wrongdoing.

The Times Camp offers a particularly helpful form of vacation, because it is a self-earned vacation. To the boy in The Times Camp, his presence there represents not only the fun of the moment, but stands for a personal achievement. The earning of his outing gives him an added self-respect.

He will stand on his own merits in The Times Camp. Nobody has a "pull" there. This, alone, is a big experience for a boy. Indeed, it is an essential experience for every American boy.

The outdoor life, sleeping and eating in the open air, is wonderfully beneficial. The climate of Catalina is so mild and even that the most delicate can live outdoors there the year round.

The boy, while he, as has been explained, is not required to do any camp work, is expected to keep his quarters in order, his belongings in place, and his person neat. This instruction in camp routine makes a lasting impression on him and is most useful to him in subsequent camping experiences.

A savings bank is conducted by the superintendent. The boys are induced to deposit with him any money they may have, and when they want small sums for spending, they go to him and draw. Of course, the boy's money is his own and he can do as he chooses with it; but a boy is not nearly so careless with his change when he has to report to a superior before spending it, as when it is rattling around loose and "careless like" in his jeans; and thus the youths are given valuable hints on the principle of economy.

Visitors are welcomed to the camp, and every day through the summer distinguished people from all parts of the United States register at the headquarters. Often notable persons are asked to address the boys at meal time on interesting subjects, and in this way they are brought into contact with helpful personalities.

The close comradeship which the boys enjoy is a most helpful experience. Often boys have arrived at the camp, timid and on the verge of unhappiness because of lack of experience in mingling with other boys, only to blossom out into real leaders before their time in camp was up.

Thousands of well-to-do persons every year pay their way from all parts of the world to Catalina for the privilege of participating in the same lovely surroundings and splendid sports which the boys of Southern California who win Times Camp vacations enjoy free of all charge. This is surely a wonderful opportunity.

BOND ELECTION IS TO BE HELD.

VENICE MUST VOTE AGAIN TO SECURE NEW SCHOOLS.

Error in Printing Advertisement Invalidated First Election, Which Was Overwhelmingly in Favor of Additional Buildings—Policeman Has His Nose Broken.

VENICE, June 22.—The first issue of bonds for the building of schools in Venice having been defeated because of a misprint in the advertisement of the bond election, the Venice board of school trustees will call an election next Tuesday for the submission to the people of the question of whether Venice shall have $100,000 worth of additional school buildings and equipment.

The first amount was $60,000, but the attendance at the local schools has so increased that four buildings, instead of three, will be needed. It is thought that the increased amount will also provide needed equipment for the High School.

President W. M. Kendall of the school board today was of the opinion that bungalows would be leased at the beginning of the September term for the accommodation of the pupils who could not be seated at the grammar school building. It is expected that more than 800 will apply for admission into the grammar school. This is 100 more than can comfortably be accommodated. As the first school bonds passed by a comfortable majority, it is thought the voters will also readily sanction the coming issue.

BROKE HIS NOSE.

C. E. O'Dell broke Patrolman Jake Berkline's nose this afternoon, after the officer had inquired regarding a child that O'Dell was wheeling along the cement walk. O'Dell was lodged in jail on the charge of resisting an officer and Berline sought a doctor.

Mrs. James Caldwell, a cousin of O'Dell, requested him to perambulate the baby while she shopped. He complied, but went from Venice to Pier avenue with the infant, distressing the mother, who thought that her baby was stolen. She complained to Patrolman Berkline, who found the baby with O'Dell. O'Dell resented Berline's talk about stealing a baby, and the men came to blows.

James Thompson and Frank Williams, Los Angeles liquor men, yesterday assuaged the grief of a small boy whose dog they had run over by giving him a shining double eagle. The men in an auto were proceeding along Trolleyway at a fair rate of speed, and the boy's purp ran out to bite the tires of the machine. Towser came to a sudden end when the tires caught up to him and annihilated him. Asked what the dog was worth, the owner said he was "worth a pile to him," and Thompson and Williams made up a purse of $20 for the boy.

[Office of The Times, 22 S. Fair Oaks avenue.]

PASADENA, June 22.—Dr. Henry S. Pritchett of New York, president of the Carnegie Foundation, arrived in Pasadena with his family last night. He has been staying in Santa Barbara for several months.

He laughed at a letter that appeared in the New York Times of the 17th inst., signed by Dickinson S. Miller, a professor at Columbia University, accusing the trustees of the Foundation with making political capital of Gov. Woodrow Wilson's application for a Carnegie teacher's pension by refusing it and then making the matter public. He said last night that he preferred to write his own words in commenting upon the letter, and gave out the following statement:

"To reply to the numerous misstatements of fact in Prof. Miller's letter would require a long statement such as it was not possible to make. Briefly stated, the action of the Executive Committee was entirely in accordance with the instructions of the trustees. This action was taken in the most friendly spirit toward President Wilson. Instead of concealing from President Wilson the opinions of the committee, the first thing I did on receiving his letter of application was to go to Princeton and talk the whole matter over with him. The Executive Committee were all his friends and were most regretful that they did not feel themselves authorized under the rules to comply with his request. They had absolutely nothing to do with the publication of the matter. The attempt to make political capital of this incident is most unfair both to Gov. Wilson and to the Foundation. The Foundation on account of the limitations of its funds, is unfortunately compelled to refuse many more applications for pensions than it can grant and for this reason such grants are confined to college teachers who are past the age of 65 or who, after thirty-five years of service, have broken down in health. President Wilson's application differel in no respect from numerous similar ones which have been refused. The fact that he is a candidate for a great office has made the opportunity to give it a political significance which it absolutely lacked."

Dr. Pritchett is one of the trustees of the Carnegie solar observatory on Mt. Wilson, and only a few days ago concluded an inspection of the observatory. He spent several days on the mountain.

"It is expected that the new 100-inch reflecting lens will be done within a year now," he said. "Of course, we do not know whether it will be satisfactory. We were told that it was impossible to manufacture so large a piece of glass perfectly, but one was made for us and we are now polishing it.

"This will make the largest telescope in the world, and will open up a new field of observation. With the great streak of light which it will give, things will undoubtedly be seen that have not been seen before.

"The magnetism of the sun and its relation to the magnetism of the earth is the line of observation to which greatest attention is being given on Mt. Wilson. This is a new field of work and it may lead to much. Prof. George E. Hale is doing wonderful work there."

MAYOR WRITES LETTER.

In a letter to J. B. Coulston, president of the Water Committee of One Hundred, Mayor Thum yesterday again declared the intention of himself and members of the Council to acquire the plants and systems of the Pasadena Lake Vineyard Land and Water Company, the Pasadena Land and Water Company, and the North Pasadena Land and Water Company, in case the proposed bond issue carries at the coming election.

"The city has made to each of the companies," writes the Mayor, in part, "definite written offers to purchase their respective properties at the prices specified, conditioned upon the bonds carrying. I am advised that these offers will be legally binding upon the city. I know that the desire of every member of the Council, as well as that of myself, is to acquire the properties of these companies."

South Pasadena.

PLAN GREAT WHITE WAY TO CONNECT THREE CITIES.

SOUTH PASADENA, June 22.—To link Pasadena, South Pasadena and Alhambra to Los Angeles by means of great festooned ribbons of light is a plan which was given much impetus at the meeting of the Inter-City Commission last evening in the City Hall of South Pasadena. Two weeks ago a committee was appointed to investigate the most practicable routes for a series of "lighted ways" from Los Angeles to the three cities in this section, and in their report they outlined two distinct sytems, converging at each end. Most of this work would fall under the jurisdiction of the cities, and a part in the county, but the general result would be the unification of the four adjacent cities by means of a brilliantly lighted roadway, which would be a joy to automobilists and a spectacle for tourists.

In order that the interest which has been aroused in the work already should not be allowed to wane, but should be used as a lever for the immediate procuring of results, three committees were appointed to carry on the missionary work in their respective cities, and to meet jointly and explain the advantages of the project to property owners and Chambers of Commerce along the routes which have been recommended. These committees were as follows: Pasadena—T. P. Lukens, Arthur Noble and C. W. Rhodes; Alhambra—J. B. Sexton, G. W. Cameron and Robert Jordan; South Pasadena—John D. Reavis, D. C. Gates and H. Hawgood.

So much interest has been shown in this "lighted way" plan wherever it has been broached that it is believed that the initiative of the Inter-City Commission will result in the establishment of the electric boulevards at an early date. The plan is to have the roadway lined with either cement or iron ornamental posts, which will be a handsome decoration to the districts through which they run, and which would be absolutely permanent as well as attractive.

As to the point of commencement in Los Angeles, two alternatives present themselves—either to commence at the Plaza, by way of East Main street, across Downey avenue to Pasadena avenue; or to North Broadway at the tunnel, out Buena Vista street to Downey avenue, thence to Pasadena avenue, and its extension on the west bank of the Arroyo Seco to a point opposite Colorado street in Pasadena, to Fair Oaks avenue. Also a branch starting in Garvanza, crossing the new Arroyo Seco bridge through South Pasadena to the easterly city limits.

Starting from either point in Los Angeles out to Huntington drive, on either side to Sierra Vista station, thence along Huntington Drive to Alhambra Road, and on the south side of electric railway in the city of Alhambra to Garfield avenue, thence north to the crossing of the Monrovia branch of the electric railway at or near La Senda station, thence by routes hereinafter determined to be most feasible.

Another matter discussed by the Inter-City Commission last evening was introduced by the president, John D. Reavis, in the form of a suggestion that there should be a State law for automobiles, requiring a fee graduated according to the horse power of the engine. The proceeds of this tax, it was shown, would go a long way toward providing the State with money for maintenance of its highways. In this connection it was stated that the Automobile Club of Southern California has pending before the Legislature a bill for this purpose, the principle being that the greatest damage to the roads comes from the heaviest vehicles, and therefore they should pay the highest rate of taxation. A committee consisting of R. G. Field of Alhambra, together with City Attorney Carr of Pasadena, Carson of South Pasadena and Pitzer of Alhambra, should co-operate with any organizations working for such legislation.

Long Beach.

COURT PIQUED ABOUT A JURY.

Mayor of Long Beach May Be in Contempt.

Misunderstanding of Law Causes Queer Mixup.

Druggist May Fight Because of Heavy Sentence.

LONG BEACH, June 22.—If police judge Hart maintains his present attitude, he will on Tuesday next when the case of F. L. Holmes for violation of the liquor ordinance is called for trial, cite Mayor I. S. Hatch, Patrolman E. Remelt and ex-Sergeant Gallemore, to show cause why they should not be adjudged in contempt of court.

According to records of the police court Patrolman Remelt several weeks ago was instructed by Judge Hart to summon a venire of fifty men to try the case of Holmes. This week the judge began to make inquiry as to the progress being made by the officer, who had made no return on the venire and found that Remelt after finishing his work had turned his list over to Sergeant Gallemore, instead of the court and Gallemore in turn had surrendered the names to Mayor Hatch, for what reason is not given.

The Mayor when interrogated admitted that he had the list and to prevent others from learning what jurors had been summoned had intended to hold the list until the morning of the trial and then surrender it to the judge. Judge Hart is angry over the circumstance which will compel him to dismiss the venire summoned and order another, causing a delay of perhaps a week in the trial.

SEVERE SENTENCE.

Joseph Foulke, who was recently found guilty of violating the liquor ordinance of the city appeared before Judge Hart this morning and was fined $500 or 100 days in jail.

The severity of the sentence was due to the fact that Foulke, who is a druggist was arrested on a similar charge two weeks before, and pleading a misunderstanding of the ordinance as it applied to druggists was let off with a fine of $100, and an admonition to be careful of his actions in future. Foulke's attorney immediately after sentence gave notice of appeal to the Superior Court where he will attack the constitutionality of the city ordinance.

Champion, who has been out of the game for several months because of an injury received while hunting, is anxious to get back into the air and has a number of dates which he could sign up for at once if he had a machine.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The latter says this is his last meeting in Long Beach as he is going to Europe next month for an indefinite stay.

CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY.

Azusa Woman Who Has Witnessed the Development of Southern California Observes a Birthday.

AZUSA, June 22.—"Her eye was not dimmed, neither was her natural force abated," might have been said of Mrs. M. A. Fuller, as on June 18, with her children and grandchildren gathered about her, she celebrated the eightieth anniversary of her birthday.

Her maiden name was Mary A. Moorwood, and she was born and reared in Maryland. In 1854 she was married, and a year later moved to Mount Pleasant, Iowa, where she lived for thirty years. In 1883 Mr. Fuller bought 200 acres of land where now stand the town of Glendora. Later this was bought by G. D. Whitcomb, who laid out the town. In 1885 Mr. Fuller came to Azusa, buying a ranch on Citrus avenue, and there the family have lived ever since.

Mrs. Fuller is thus one of the pioneer residents of the valley, and many are the interesting stories that she can tell of the olden times. When she came here the nearest railroad was ten miles away, the nearest post-office, five miles, and ice could not be obtained nearer than Pomona. Laundry had to be taken to San Gabriel, there were no fruits or vegetables, and the whole country to the San Gabriel River was covered with cactus and sage-brush. The ladies of the family thought nothing of driving to Los Angeles and back the same day to shop or visit; now the two-year-old daughter of the third generation scorns a horse and cries for the automobile.

At that time it was thought that oranges would not grow in the foothill regions, and both here and at Glendora their ground was set out to grapes and castor beans. Mrs. Fuller has seen every orange orchard in this whole region set out and come to maturity.

Staid Azusa can hardly realize that there was ever a big boom here, but it is a fact that in 1887 men stood in line all day and all night in order to buy lots in what was at that time supposed to be destined to be the chief town of the valley. The Fuller house was the largest in the region, the only one with two stories, and it had to serve the purpose of hotel to many of the land-seekers. One night when every other available space had been filled, a board was placed over the bath-tub for a man. The next time he presented himself he was told there was absolutely no room for him. "I will sleep in the bath-tub again," he said. "No," was the reply, "that is already taken."

The birthday celebration was a delightful affair. All of the six children were present; O. B., Charles, and Purl Fuller, and Mrs. Mary Zucker, of Los Angeles, Mrs. Arthur Meade Brown of Azusa, and Mrs. H. Conrad Gierwirth of Cambridge, Mass., who crossed the continent in order that the family circle might be unbroken on this occasion. Mrs. Fuller received many handsome gifts from relatives and friends.

COVINA, June 22.—The erection of a $12,000 grammar school building at Baldwin Park, a part of the Covina Union High School district, is to begin immediately, the contract being let on Thursday to Anderson & Murdock of Los Angeles. The building is to stand just south of the Pacific Electric tracks, on Maine avenue. The trustees, who will supervise the erection of the building, are W. R. Johnson, W. A. Horton and W. G. Colwell, assisted by a committee made up of Baldwin Park citizens.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The Covina Irrigating Company will be represented by Supt. J. R. Elliott, and the Columbia Land and Water Company by President John H. Coolman.

HAY FEVER So many patients have applied to Drs. Shores & Shores for treatment lately who have not known what their trouble was, that Drs. Shores have decided to explain the symptoms, effects and treatment of Hay Fever, that all may tell it at a glance.

In the beginning of an attack of Hay Fever the patient experiences a sense of uneasiness about the nasal passages, with a slight disposition to sneeze. Gradually these symptoms increase, and often there is intense itching of the nasal passage, with a profuse watery discharge, which necessitates the constant use of a handkerchief. In aggravated cases the discharge drips continually from the nose, later the mucous membrane becomes so congested that the secretions present a grayish color. The inflamed mucous membrane naturally causes more or less stenosis, or narrowing or closing of the nasal passages, which adds greatly to the discomfort of the sufferer, oftimes the nasal passages are entirely closed up.

If the patient lies on the side, the nasal passage which is uppermost becomes open, while the fluids collects in the parts below; or if the patient lies on his back and the flow passes to the rear portion, causing a complete stoppage of the nasal passages. The fluids which escape from the nose are often irritating around the opening of the nose and lip and very frequently give rise to irritation around the nose and lip, and sometimes even result in eczema. The eyes become congested and the lips red and itching. If the disease is allowed to run, an attack of asthma often sets in. The asthmatic symptoms are usually confined to the night time, although the waking hours are often characterized by shortness of breathing, which the patient describes as wheezing.

Hay Fever is a treacherous disease and yields quickly to this wonderful treatment. Every sufferer from this insiduous and deceptive disease should consult Drs. Shores & Shores at once. RIGHT NOW is the favorable season for quick cures.

SAN BERNARDINO, June 22.—That Mrs. Walter Scott, wife of the former "Death Valley mystery," is bordering on a nervous breakdown is the statement of attending physicians at the County Hospital. Mrs. Scott was brought in from Barstow for "observation."

She appears to talk rationally, but the evidence of her highly nervous condition is manifest. She seems to have been brought to her present state through intense worry over Scotty's predicament. She talks only of him, and the possibilities of his having to go to prison.

RANCHERS INDIGNANT.

Ranchers in Reche Canyon are up in arms at the change of route of the road. They claim that in order to convenience a homesteader who has a wedged-shape strip of land, that the road is actually taken around two sides of this strip, instead of traversing across the lower boundary, as originally was the case for fifty years or more. In order to force the public to travel the wedge it is claimed that this longer route has been heavily oiled, and the original short cut allowed to grow deep with sand and boulders.

FRESNO, June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Clothed in a pair of overalls and a jumper and wearing a slouch hat, Mrs. Gussie Dyke, aged 18, and her husband Chris Ryke, aged 23, were arrested early this morning on vagrancy charges.

That the "boy" companion was a girl was not discovered by the officers until the couple parted at the jail. The girl wife threw her arms about her husband's neck and kissed him and then the deception was discovered. Dyke and the girl eloped from Flagstaff, Ariz., in April and being unable to tramp as a girl she bobbed her hair at Needles and traveled as her husband's companion. The couple had seven cents when they arrived here. J. B. Hambleton, a rancher, came to their rescue this afternoon and promised the young couple work and they were taken away [illegible]. The little wife had the appearance of a young country lad and would pass inspection except for her walk and talk.

WOMAN PLACED IN JAIL.

Olinda Woman Spills Ten Thousand Gallons of Water from Tank Belonging to a Neighbor.

SANTA ANA, June 22.—Mrs. H. F. Lyon of Olinda was put in jail today on a charge of having destroyed property of Jerome Brothers, her neighbors, in that she took a hammer and broke the connection of a 10,000-gallon water tank and let the water out. The woman was formerly supplied at her home with water from the tank, but because she left the faucet open continually the service was discontinued. She became angry at the pumpers, and her attack upon the water pipe resulted.

BAD CHECK MAN.

Sheriff Ruddock today received a telegram from Bisbee, Ariz., saying that Joseph Dierksen, wanted here for passing a $50 no-fund check upon County Auditor C. D. Lester, had been arrested there for Sheriff Hammel of Los Angeles, who wants the man for a similar charge. The Orange county officers have arrested Edward Conliff, aged 20, a nephew of Dierksen, as a witness. Conliff admits seeing Dierksen pass several bogus checks, but had nothing to do with the transactions. He says Dierksen, who passed five bad checks at Anaheim, two at San Bernardino and several in Los Angeles, expected to go to Lower California.

TO SUPPORT MARTIN.

The Chamber of Commerce has passed a resolution indorsing a proposal to form a stock company locally to back Glenn L. Martin, the aviator, in his aeronautical enterprises, with the expectation of having his aeroplane factory located here. Martin can get plenty of financial backing here to work out his ideas in the making of aeroplanes, provided he will quit flying. Martin is now on his way to Boston to enter an aviation meet.

NEWS BRIEFS.

Judge West has taken under advisement the petition of W. J. Cole, a taxpayer of Stanton, asking for the disincorporation of the town to Stanton, formed thirteen months ago. Cole's action is against the Board of Supervisors, and alleges that the proceedings for the formation of the town were illegal in several particulars. Attorney H. C. Head, for the town, argued that the errors pointed out were al minor errors, and cut no figure in the legality of the proceedings.

MISSION CROSS TO BE RESTORED.

VENTURA WOMEN WILL RENEW AN OLD LANDMARK.

Original Cross Which Had Stood for Over One Hundred Years Fell in Eighteen Hundred and Seventy-four, and Restoration Will Be Marked by Imposing Ceremonies.

VENTURA, June 22.—The restoration of the old mission cross on the hill back of the Mission Church will be an event of more than passing note, according to the plans maturing for raising anddedication.

The original cross fell in 1874. It had stood for over one hundred years and was of hewed trunks of trees secured from Santa Paula Canyon, at the base of Topa-Topa Mountain, where the early mission feathers secured all the timbers for their structures. The present cross will be of hewed timbers from the same source. Two huge pine trees were secured and these brought to this city and hewed into shape. The tallest or upright piece is a foot square and will rise twenty-three feet above the surface. The cross is now on the hill at the site of the old cross.

It is proposed by the ladies of the E.C.O. Club of this city, who have the matter in hand, and who defrayed the expenses for the cross and its erection, to have the raising and dedication on September 9, Admission Day, and to make it a noteworthy event by having many people of note here from all section of the State. It is also proposed, after the cross is up, to have it lighted at night with a string of incandescents, and to keep these burning all night and for all time. The cross will be a distinctive figure, as it will sit on the top of the hill at least 1000 feet above the sea.

Seven lodges of the Fraternal Brotherhood of this county today participated in a big picnic at Foster Park, near this city. Over 1500 people were in attendance, and the gathering ended with a moonlight dance in the evening.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CELEBRATION.

Upland Organizations Will Combine for a Picnic With All the Frills Usually Accompanying.

UPLAND, June 22.—The annual picnic of the Sunday-schools of Upland is scheduled to be held at Urbita Springs, near San Bernardino June 25, and indications are that members of the schools as well as a good many of their older friends, will be out in force. A special train over the Santa Fe has been engaged.

DIES FROM CANCER.

After a long and painful illness from cancer, Mrs. Iva Goodban passed away at her home in this city yesterady. Deceased was one of Upland's most highly respected women, and was prominent in church and W.C.T.U. circles. She leaves a husband and nine surviving children. Mrs. Goodban came from Fairfield, Iowa, to Upland, some ten years ago, and has resided here since, to the time of her death.

TRUSTEE RESIGNS.

The resignation of J. P. Wedel from the city Board of Trustees some time ago, caused a vacancy necessitating the appointment of a substitutefl Thomas W. Nisbet, of East Thirteenth street, one of the most competent and highly respected men of the city, was named for the position, but after due deliberation, he decided he would be unable, owing to press of other work, to accept.

STREET WORK.

The preliminary work looking to the asphalt paving of Second avenue, this city, must all be gone through with again, owing to the fact that the grade of that street was established a good many years ago, and was done by resolution, rather than by ordinance. This discrepancy was discovered by the attorney for the contracting firm which secured the work. The error will be rectified at once, and this is reported the only street in the city in this class.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The fire which destroyed the small grocery store of Atwood & Plum at Twenty-fourth street and Euclid avenue, entailed a loss of some $1800 on stock, with insurance of $700. The Messrs. Atwood and Plum have decided not to re-embark in business, though it is said the store will be rebuilt, this time a double building of great convenience to residents of that district, will doubtless be continued, by new owners.

Plans have been accepted for the enlarging of the First Methodist Church, this city, and work is to begin on the building at once. For several years the audience-room, as well as Sunday-school quarters, have been inadequate to the needs of the congregation.

Plans were being considered for removing the First Church of the Nazarene from its location on the corner of Second avenue and Ninth street to a location further out in the residence section. It is said, however, that a clause in the deed to the lot has been found which precludes this removal, on the penalty that the lot will revert to the donor. The church site has grown very valuable, of later years, and a handsome offer had been made for the site where the building stands, if same could be removed.

Work on the Silcox-Clark building, on North Second avenue, is being rapidly pushed to completion, and a great difference is made thereby in that section of the principal business street.

PROMISING WELLS SUNK.

Soldiers' Home Water Supply Is Greatly Augmented by Sinking Two Holes of Much Promise.

SOLDIERS' HOME (Cal.) June 22.—Water in promising quantity has resulted as the boring of two wells just completed under contract at this place. The later of the two, commenced flowing at a trifle over 100 feet. A third well is just being began under the same contract. Should that prove equally promising, it is calculated that between 250,000 and 300,000 gallons will be added to the Home's water supply for domestic and other uses.

POSTMASTER QUITS.

Col. T. J. Thorp, the recently-appointed postmaster at this place, finding that the close application to desk duties involved in the work of that office threatened his eyesight—from an operation for which he had, only a few months before, recovered—decided that resignation was preferable to loss of vision. His former cashier in that office, Capt. H. C. Hollenbeck, has been appointed postmaster.

Work on remodeling the postoffice building, which was commenced under Col. Thorp, will, when completed, comprise much-needed working room with modern equipment, and greater convenience to veterans having business in that place.

WATER RATES ARE SETTLED.

Riverside Council Comes to a Conclusion Which Pleases Alfalfa Men But Disturbs the Fruit Growers.

RIVERSIDE June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After a lengthy debate on the last day on which the odinance must be intoduced to conform to the law, the City Council today settled the vexatious question of fixing irrigating and domestic water rates for the ensuing year by adopting the old schedule of rates of last year.

This was satisfactory to alfalfa raisers, but many orange growers fought against the acre rates, as against the inch rate, claiming such is discriminatory in favor of alfalfa growers and against the various fruit producers. The domestic rates cut little figure in the controversy which has been waged for several months, because the city will take over the domestic system.

CITY OF CANVAS CASTLES.

Camp Bonita A-Bustle With Rod and Reel Men and Recreationists—Trout Limits are Caught.

CAMP BONITA, June 22.—This is the open season of the camper's canvas Castle and San Gabriel Canyon is dotted with the white duck habitations of the lover of the mountains. The season was formally opened this week and the camp is a-bustle with recreationists.

Camp Bonita is rejuvenated this year and its genial host, Henry Willard, well known in Los Angeles, piloted a party of friends up here to his roost a few days ago. They came with ravenous appetites and agog for fishing and tramping trips. Camp Bonita is about eighteen miles up the canyon from Azusa, and the stage crosses the San Gabriel River sixty-four times. The ride is a sure cure for melancholia, insomnia and hypochondria. It is also recommended for any other complaint that seems to need an airing.

The news has been spread about that limit strings of trout are a possibility for knowing anglers and has resulted in an influx of the followers of Isaac Walton. C. Parrot reeled in the limit on two occasions this week and others are running him a close second. One 12-inch fighter made a toothsome repast for a hungry party of campers.

The community of Camp Bonita is excited over the discovery of deer tracks. Evidences have been found of several of the fleet-footed creatures who came close to the canvas colony to drink at the river. As a result rifles are already being groomed against that time when the season shall open.

Among those who arrived at Camp Bonita this week are the following Angelenos: G. H. Crowder, B. Foley, Mrs. Charlotte M. Eddy and Dorothy and Betty Eddy, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Willard, William H. Wachtel, T. E. Imes, C. W. Dickens, S. R. Bennett, R. M. Crackter, S. de B. Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Trogdan and Miss Pearl Trogdan, H. E. Wilson, Fred Swanson, and Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Woods.

The population of Camp Bonita will be considerably augmented this week by a number of other Angelenos who have announced their intention of coming here for a rest.

Banner used by the New York State Department of Health, Traveling Exhibit and shown at the International Congress on Tuberculosis

Designed under the direction of Herbert D. Pease, M.D., by C. W. [illegible]

These cartoons led the Superintendent of the Public Schools of Los Angeles to break his promise to have the Souvenir Programs, furnished by the Los Angeles Society for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, distributed through the schools, after having caused the Society to spend several hundred dollars for this literature. The Souvenir Programs also contain brief descriptions of the Edison Health Dramas and the tuberculosis literature that was furnished the public school teachers last fall. This literature is a reproduction of the prize essay, written by Dr. George H. Kress and granted a medal by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Dr. George E. Malsbary, the Secretary of the Los Angeles Society for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, states that these cartoons have been widely used in the educational propaganda that has formed so important a part of the movement that has for its object the extinction of tuberculosis. They were used as a banner by the New York State Department of Health, and also freely used as literature, and were exhibited at the International Congress on Tuberculosis, where they received honorable mention because of their pedagogic value.

LETTERS TO "THE TIMES."

Parents' Neglect.

LOS ANGELES, June 21.—[To the Editor of The Times:] When I read in your paper of so many fatal accidents, such as the one of the joy riders of Thursday morning, when two young girls, children, almost, from Whittier, were injured, I wonder where the parents or the guardians of them are, and what are they about, to allow them out at that time of night, in such company?

Such accidents are very frequent. It would be well for the District Attorney to use the taxpayers' money to punish the parents who neglect and allow their children to run at large, with no restrictions at all. It would do more to eliminate the ruination of so many young girls, more than it does to spread their names before the public and leave an everlasting stigma.

If the city official found cattle or horses running at large with no one to look after them, what would he do? Condemn the poor stock? No indeed; he would search the city for the owners and prosecute them. Are not our girls and boys as worthy of protection as our cattle and horses?

AGAINST DEATH PENALTY.

Workers of the Abolition of Capital Punishment League met yesterday and determined to push the campaign to secure 15,000 names in this city to petitions calling for a referendum vote at the fall election on the death penalty as a punishment. An Executive Committee comprising Misses Eunice McMullin and Vera Hileman and R. E. Blight was appointed. V. W. Lothrop, president of the State League, will leave for the North today. A mass-meeting is to be held soon.

"UNCLE'S" LIFE ROUND OF EASE.

WIFE OBJECTS TO PRESENCE OF ALLEGED "NIECE."

Seeks Divorce and Equal Division of Fortune, Which She Says Her Nest-egg Started—Attorneys Hustle to Forestall Flight of Defendant to Europe.

Charles Victor Hall the wealthy mining and oil man, whose adventures with two young women a year ago brought him into a romantic prominence, was sued for divorce yesterday by Mrs. Josephine S. Hall.

Mrs. Hall names Maria Sentan in her complaint. She says they are now in Tampa. Word received by Mrs. Hall's attorneys, Williams, Goudge & Chandler, that Hall has announced his intention of leaving Tampa and going to Europe, made it necessary to act quickly in serving him with notice of the divorce suit.

Hall is about 65 and is credited with an income of about $35,000 a year. Since he left his wife a year ago, the latter states in her complaint, he has spent the whole of his income, above the $500 a month which he allows her, upon himself "in personal gratification and amusements, in expenses of travel and a luxurious life."

Because it was believed that Hall was about to dispose of his large holdings, Attorney Goudge obtained yesterday from Presiding Judge Willis of the Superior Court a restraining order returnable July 8 in Department Six. This order applies also to the Industrial Oil Company, which Hall practically controls.

Mrs. Hall claims one-half as her separate property in money, business ventures, mining lands and mining claims. She alleges that Hall carried on his business with her money, to which he contributed nothing at the time of their marriage in 1878, and that by their joint efforts, he accumulated a fortune of $750,000. She asks $500 a month alimony pending the divorce suit, and $500 to defray the expenses of the suit on account of counsel fees.

The escapade which brought Hall into the limelight a year ago was his accompanying two young women on a tour which terminated in Europe. The young women, one of whom was a matron and the other a nurse from a hospital in this city, stayed at Shepard's Inn, Santa Barbara, where, it is alleged, Hall said one was his niece and the other her maid. From Santa Barbara the party made the tour of the Grand Canyon and were heard from in the East.

Hall was alleged to have lavished gifts on his "niece," showering jewels and spending money freely. When the break-up occurred in Europe, Hall seems to have disappeared until he was located at Tampa. Maria Sentan, named by Mrs. Hall, is a Belgian girl of considerable beauty and charming figure, and she is alleged to be much devoted to her "uncle."

The Halls have a delightful home at No. 226 Andrews boulevard. They have three grown children who are the comfort of their mother. Their early married life was apparently all that could be desired. Mrs. Hall had several thousand dollars which formed the nest egg for the fortune Hall afterward reared, she says. Hall became interested in real estate and later when the oil stampede occurred be made investments which brought in heavy returns. Money came fast and Hall did not spend it slowly. His connection with the Industrial Oil Company, in which he owns 4,000,000 shares, and his holdings in the La Habra and Fullerton oil fields bring him a good income.

DIME FOR A DOLLAR.

Easy Money for Fortune Teller While Italian Learns that Prophecies Don't Always Come True.

An excited-looking Italian rushed into Lieut. Spellman's office at the Central Police Station yesterday afternoon and volubly poured forth a tale of woe in which he described himself as being the victim of a Main-street fortune-teller.

"I beena the big cheat, getta the ax in the neck," said the Italian.

"What happened?" asked the lieutenant.

"Wella," explained the Italian, his arms working like an electric fan, "I goa in one of these fortune-tella shops and the womans saya there that I runna acrossa money today if I putta the dollar acrossa the palm. I give up one dolla. Then I go out in the street and see where I get the money that she talk about. Then what you think?"

Words evidently failed the Italian at this moment, and he only looked the "deepa disgust" that he felt.

"Talk it out easily like; get it off your system," advised Spellman.

"I spenda the dolla and in the street I finda this," shouted the excited foreigner. Then he held up something clutched between his thumb and index finger.

It was a lone dime, 10 cents, one-tenth of a dollar.

Carefully it was explained to the complainant that he had no redress against the fortune-teller and that he would have to charge 90 cents up to profit and loss.

NAVY MEN THE GUESTS.

Chamber of Commerce Committee Entertains Officers of Cruiser Maryland and Oregon Naval Militia.

The officers of the cruiser Maryland and of the Oregon naval militia were guests yesterday afternoon of the Chamber of Commerce, first at a luncheon at the Athletic Club, and later in a sightseeing trip about the city.

The Maryland arrived at Venice Friday night bringing 175 officers and men of the Oregon naval militia. The men were at once given shore liberty until 6 o'clock last night, and all the concessions of Venice were thrown open to them. The Maryland will sail this morning for Santa Barbara.

About twenty naval and naval militia officers were present at the luncheon which was tendered on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce by its Committee on Naval and Military Affairs, Maj. Andrew J. Copp, Jr., chairman. The Maryland was represented by Capt. J. M. Elliott, Surgeon E. A. Vickery, Ensign F. C. Sherman, Ensign M. Hodson, Ensign H. B. McCleary.

The following officers of the Oregon Naval Militia were present; Capt. E. M. Simpson, Lieut. W. H. Rober, Paymaster, A. J. Capron, Surgeon, L. J. Wolf, Ensign J. A. Beckwith, Ensign L. L. Spooner, Ensign B. B. Montague, Chaplain Richard Oleson, Ensign G. E. Gallier and Ensign C. E. Melvin. W. E. Mahoney of the Portland Oregonian was with the party.

The Chamber of Commerce was represented by Vice-President Arthur W. Kinney, Gen. Wankowski, Gen. Last, Gen. Prescott, Maj. Copp, and Capt. Randolph H. Miner.

Vice-President Kinney presided and extended the welcome of the city to the visitors. Capt. Ellicott, who is one of the most eloquent talkers in the naval service, responded. After expressing appreciation of the hospitality extended here and elsewhere in California, he concluded with an eloquent and stirring eulogy of the United States navy.

Other speakers were Paymaster Capron, Capt. Simpson, Gen. Wankowski and Capt. Miner.

After the luncheon the visitors were given their choice of entertainments for the afternoon—automobile rides, the baseball game or the privileges of the club. Most of them elected to take the automobile ride.

MORE CARS TO BEACH.

Santa Monica Air Line Schedule Changed to Accommodate Residents of Southern Part of City.

Beginning next Tuesday the Pacific Electric company will run the Santa Monica air line cars, which now terminate at the Palms, through to the beaches. The cars will split at Ivy Junction, one going to Venice over the short line and the other to Santa Monica. According to the new arrangement cars will leave the Pacific Electric depot every thirty minutes for Venice and Santa Monica. This will be an addition to the regular beach schedule.

The new schedule has been arranged largely for the benefit of residents of the University district, who now have to come downtown and take the Sixteenth-street line. They can now take the Santa Monica air line cars and go straight through to the beach towns.

Wear Toric Lenses

Some of their advantages over flat lenses are: First—Clearer Vision. Second—Wider Range of Vision. Third—Greater Comfort. Fourth — Improved Appearance. They give clearer vision because the focus is distributed over the entire surface of the lens. Wider range of vision is due to their fitting more closely to the eyes, which increases their light-gathering capacity.

MATZENE PHOTO.

Laurette Taylor,

In two tremendously impressive character studies from Hartley Manners's forthcoming play, "Barbaraza." Miss Taylor is here seen as the beautiful daughter of a fugitive murdered Greek mother; and, in the lower picture, as that mother. The character of the mother occupies her attention only in the first act of the play. As exhibiting the triumphs of make-up and the inward details of fine characterization these pictures may well stand as examples.

BROADWAY ORPHEUM, GIANT BABY, JUST ONE YEAR OLD.

THE Orpheum this week celebrates the opening a year ago of its new theater in Broadway. On June 26, 1911, Monday night, the new theater, undoubtedly the finest vaudeville house in America, was dedicated, with in attendance probably the most representative audience a theater in Los Angeles ever housed. The seats and boxes had been sold at auction bringing a premium of more than $3300, which enriched the coffers of the Associated Charities, and society in general had rallied to the dedication in the best of garb and in numbers that tested the capacity of the playhouse. Much in the way of social function had been made of auction, sale, and opening night, and its brilliancy was so great that hardly anything since has risen to compete with it. There is every prospect, however, that the coming anniversary week will rival it, especially Wednesday night, June 26, the actual "year after."

It has been a brilliant year to look back upon, this first in the new Broadway temple of Thespis—brilliant theatrically, and delightful in Manners on Manner.

PROFIT HERE; PROPHET THERE.

Author of "Peg" Talks England and the States.

"Punch Play" Artificial and Passing, He Says.

Bernard Shaw Embroiled for "Titanic" Slurs.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

It is a matter of general acceptance that what we have at home can't amount to much; so, when in search of dramatic greatness, we fall to wondering what the playwrights in Gath, Gotham and Geewhilliken are doing, quite unmindful of the fact that one of the highest-powered play-smithy typwriters that Geewhilliken, Gotham and Gath ever knew, now runs seven or eight hours every day on the desk of one J. Hartley Manners, a dweller in West Seventh street.

Mr. Manners's "Peg o' My Heart" has proven conclusively that he knows what the public wants. But he proved as much before, in a very large way, with "Zira," and "The House Next Door."

Just at present Mr. Manners is using all his expletives on Jeffrey Farnol's "Money Moon," which he is turning from a novel into four acts, for the exploitation of one Richard Bennett, and the accommodation and profit of one Oliver Morosco.

"The Money Moon" will be born at the Burbank, even as Mr. Manners's tragedy, "Barbaraza," is there slated for the light, if "Peg o' My Heart" can ever be choked off.

Nominally, Mr. Manners is English; really, he is Irish. Therefore the bright emerald humor that makes "Peg's" scenes so verdant.

In person, Mr. Manners is a delicate trifle; one would expect to engage him in a satin-lined conversation on the Victorian poets; in reality, prize fights are his favorite lingual divertisement, and he can quote you record and pedigree from the dark ages behind John L. Sullivan to the possibilities ahead of Rivers and Wolgast.

If you are ever fortunate enough to get into conversation with this man Manners, you will find him more fascinating than his plays. You may not agree with everything he says—I don't—but you must at least credit him with a colossal range of experience, the widest of imaginations, and a true Irishman's facility for commenting familiarly upon every phase of human endeavor.

If I set down my Manners conversations, I would issue them in volumes. Manners is the sort of chap you ask for a match and leave bearing a new outlook on life.

The last time I ran into Mr. Manners—Thursday evening, in front of the Burbank Theater—we tumbled into the back seat of one of the Morosco motors and discussed the drama in England as compared to the drama in America.

"In England," said the playwright, "the public tries to keep up with its dramatists, who lead; in America the dramatists scramble to keep up with the public.

"Men like Pinero write entirely independent of the trend of the hour. They do not wish to know the trend of the hour—the surface current, as it were. They plunge deep into the undertow of human verities. They produce plays.

"The English dramatist and the American dramatist have two different ends in view—ends poles apart, which sound alike.

"The Englishman would be a prophet; the American would have profit.

"The commercial success of a play, in America, is its sole judgment. If Mr. Cohan writes a potboiler that succeeds, while Mr. Galsworthy has a flight of inspiration which does not fill the house—Mr. Cohan is therefore the great dramatist.

"Mind you, I'm not attacking anything. I believe that all things work together for the good of them that love the Lord, and sometimes for them that don't; but you asked me for differences; I'm giving them to you.

"We will take Mr. Pinero again. Mr. Pinero writes to please himself, even as the American writes to please his manager. Mr. Pinero never hurries a play. He is usually occupied by one piece for a year or two. When it is finished he asks himself: 'Does this suit me?' If it does, that is all he asks. If it does not, no amount of popular clap-trap allows him to justify the work as an artistic product.

"Just so England's actor-managers have more perfect ensembles.

"Here in America commercial managers stage plays in accordance with their commercial ideas—ideas not in accordance with the constantly uprising canons of art, but ideas which they believe will be in accordance with the general popular notion in the front of the house. The audience must not have anything shoved at it which it will not recognize. Play to your audience's taste—invariably.

"I will now attack the present-day holy-of-holies in the manufacture of plays—the 'punch-drama.'

"I believe that the 'play with the punch, purely as such, has had its day.

"It has been effectually killed, and one of its slaughterers was M. Henri Bernstein.

"In his last play, 'The Attack,' which Charles Frohman will present to America via the talents of John Mason this fall, Bernstein has himself abandoned the 'punch' as the central thing of his piece. His theme now is the immortal one, the logical outcome of certain actions and the juxtaposition of certain characters. His last act has no punch at all, but is the exploitation of two human beings. The slam-bang in his play ends with act two. Will American audiences accept this as true Bernstein? That remains to be seen.

"The 'punch-play' in its essence, as utilized by the crafty and the commercial, was simply ridiculous. An author with a poverty-stricken imagination, chancing upon one strong situation, invariably built his play to and from that situation. It was a study in finding accessory incidents.

"'I have a scene in which a little woman beats her big husband,' said the mechanical but aggressive playsmith; 'how shall I work up to that situation and lead away from it?' And there you were, and some very screamy plays have resulted from premises no more artificial.

"I believe that the coming play will be the play of human incident and human character. Strength is the essence of the drama, and the strong scene must stand as long as the drama stands, but our artificial practice of making one incident serve for the whole tale is too false to long endure. The audiences in general have already seen enough of it."

Mr. Manners has little faith in Shaw, whom he regards as a sham and a humbug.

"Have you heard the latest about Shaw?" he asked, during a lull in our conversation.

I hadn't.

"George Bernard has been banned from the London clubs—most of them, I believe," said Mr. Manners. "Cause, his remark upon the Titanic disaster.

"He said, very lightly and carelessly, that there were no heroes and no heroic actions upon that vessel, and he did not see why papers and public deemed it necessary to make such a fuss over the incident.

"London immediately decided, and justly, that a man who would use such an international catastrophe for purposes of flatulent personal advertising was too much of a charlatan to be longer tolerated.

"Shaw is the modern quack among dramatists and dramatic writers.

"He affects the role of satirist to save himself.

"Having no intimate personal inspirations, possessing no certainty nor great humanity, he follows in every instance.

"Then he laughs—at himself, first.

"He laughs at himself to keep other people from laughing at him. Without his self-derision Shaw would be a shattered clay idol.

"Personally, I have no faith in the realists.

"Genius, the genius that is destined to be immortal, is always imaginative.

"I'll venture a prophecy; future ages will call George Meredith—not Thackeray or Dickens—the great novelist of the Victorian era."

IN THE BIG PLAY-WORLD

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

"What's the plot of your new play, 'Broadway Jones'?" queried a friend of George M. Cohan, the other day.

"A young man from the country comes to New York and then goes home again," replied Mr. Cohan.

"Gee! Can you string such a little thread into a regular play?"

"Sure!" said Cohan; "you see, the young man from the country is looking for a situation. He doesn't find it. I do. Hence the play."

There will be but one company of "Kismet." The original will go on the road this fall. Cities seeing the production will see the number one show or none at all.

Jimmie Montgomery is at work adapting, turning "The Woman Hater" into a play for Al Woods.

Zeigfeld's "Follies of 1912" will be produced in August.

L. R. Stockwell died in the University of California Hospital June 7. He came to California thirty-two years ago, and had made many appearances in Los Angeles, the last at the Burbank Theater five or six years since.

George Edwardes will produce in London "The Marriage Market," a play of Victor Jacobi. The scene is laid in California.

Charles Klein's "Third Degree" is being played in London under the title, "Find the Woman."

Lechmere Worrall is the name of the newest dramatic author idolized in the English capital. Leibler & Company have requested a play from him for America.

Billy Reeves is playing in vaudeville with an act containing a deal of ingenious mechanical scenery. The name of the act is "A Lesson in Temperance."

Good old Tom Nawn has a new vaudeville act, called "The College Coach."

May Yohe's alleged attempt at suicide two or three weeks ago brought her exactly what she baited for—an engagement in vaudeville.

Fred Niblo and Joesphine Cohan have taken "The Fortune Hunter" and "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" to Australia.

Marcelline, clown at the New York Hippodrome for seven years, is coming West in vaudeville this fall.

Frank Healy, formerly a light opera manager here, and more recently with "Doc" Leahy in his management of the Tetrazzini tours, is the new manager of the San Francisco symphony orchestra. Henry Hadley is the conductor, and concerts will be given in the Cort Theater.

H. H. Frazee will produce, at the Cort Theater in Chicago, "Fine Feathers," a new play by Eugene Walter.

Klaw & Erlanger have decided to save Lehar's "Eva" until the election, and will then produce it in Chicago.

David Belasco is about to start a school for "the stage education of actors."

This is not a dramatic school, and will not receive the ordinary dramatic student.

It is intended to educate and enlighten the younger men and women in Belasco's own companies.

John Cort has purchased another farce, for fall production. It is called "The Richest Man in the World," is in three acts, and is by Arthur Gillespie and Collin Davis.

"Jingaboo," an adaptation of Leo Dietrichstein's "Before and After," is on the market, for sale to any enterprising manager. John Cort discarded it because he had too much else. The authors are Vincent Bryan and Arthur Pryor.

Mary Hall, an ex-Burbank leading woman, has sailed for Europe, and will spend the summer in Russia.

Edgar Selwyn's new play is to be called "Partners." It is being written at Mr. Selwyn's summer home near New York. Harris & Selwyn will produce it.

Lillian Albertson is recovering from a severe operation necessitated by a sudden and alarming illness which recently attacked the former Los Angeles player.

George Broadhurst, in court in New York, "guessed" at his royalties.

He said he kept no books, but believed that "The Man of the Hour" had brought him, to date, between $200,000 and a quarter of a million.

Eleanor Gordon, formerly Belasco leading woman and wife of Howard Morton, a Los Angeles newspaper man, has sailed for London, where she will enact August Kahn's one-act comedy, "Light Housekeeping," in vaudeville. Miss Gordon has been in "Kismet" for a year.

Julian Eltinge is spending $20,000 for new gowns, for his fall western tour in "The Fascinating Widow."

The Week.

"GREAT NAME" AT THE BELASCO.

WILL SERVE AS CONCLUDING PIECE FOR STONE.

Fischer Starts One a Week With "The Chaperones" Today—Orpheum's Anniversary to Be Celebrated Tomorrow—"Peg o' My Heart" and "Girl in Train."

The special engagement of Lewis S. Stone at the Belasco will end with this week's production of "The Great Name." In New York and other important cities of the East, Henry Kolker played "The Great Name" with much success. The play is of German origin—its authors are Victor Leon and Leo Feld. The American version is the work of James Clarence Harvey. In the Belasco presentation Harry Mestayer will be seen in his original role—a young librettist to a writer of popular operettas. "The Great Name" has to do with the trials and triumphs of a coterie of musicians and the play has much of a humorous and pathetic character that cannot fail to arouse an uncommon degree of interest.

Mr. Stone will have the original Kolker part, that of a successful composer of light operas, a musician who has been denied a diploma by his conservatory. It is a singularly sympathetic part, dramatically strong at moments, and always uncommonly interesting—interesting inasmuch as this successful, but uninspired composer finds the brightest student of his class a failure in financial matters, practically unknown save as a violinist of ordinary repute, with his every hope centered upon a symphony that no director or publisher will look at because it lacks a great composer's name to attract the public. To this symphony the genius of the operetta lends his name with the result that the obscure musician reaps the success that for years has been denied him.

The cast for "The Great Name" will require the entire numerical strength of the Belasco company. Muriel Starr will have the part of the secretary to the successful waltz king. In the East, in the original Kolker production, Harry Mestayer won much critical praise for the excellence of his portrayal of the part of Lang, the librettist. It is a role that is admirably suited to Mestayer, and his local admirers may look for an especially good bit of character work from this gifted young player.

"The Great Name" should have also a particularly strong appeal to music lovers for in the last act will be heard a symphony composed especially for the play by Theodore Bendix.

Fischer's Lyceum.

"The Chaperones," one of the liveliest and best of all standard musical comedies, will be the offering at "Pop" Fischer's Lyceum, beginning with the matinee today. In it are splendid parts for May Boley—the role in which she starred on the road and first made her big name—Bob Lett, Jane Urban, Madison Smith, Texas Guinan and the rest, and the cast, as booked on the programme, looks ideal. The show itself concerns the Amalgamated Order of Professional Chaperones, and their leader, played by May Boley; a love plot wherein Texas Guinan figures large; a "girl detecative," played by Jane Urban, who has aspirations of moment and a love for the drama that is always cropping out a la Lady Gwendolyn—the part that made Eva Tanguay famous, by the way—the pork-packer of Cincinnati, Adam Hogg, which will give Bob Lett another chance to shine; O'Shaughnessy, the Tammany contractor abroad, which will put Cawthorne back into an Irish role, in which line he is so clever; the Italian proprietor of a "busted" opera company, which, while a new role for Madison Smith, will find a fine interpretation at his hands; Violet, the heroine, being assigned to Texas Guinan; and the rest cast is agreeable roles throughout.

Especially clever work is called forth from the chorus in this play, and Fischer's famous chorus is revelling in the delightful songs and the many spirited dances.

The score abounds with these good songs, among the best being "High C," "Talk," "Love in a Palace," "The Little Maid Who Couldn't Say No," "Egypt Land," "Billy's Very Good to Me," and so on. Scenically the show will be one of most the sumptuous Fischer has yet put on.

It begins the policy of a new one every week, so it is highly probable that the old sold out sign will have constant work to do. There will be the bargain matinee as usual on Wednesday.

Orpheum.

Anniversary week—the Orpheum's first annual celebration of the inauguration of its present splendid theater—begins tomorrow—the actual date of the opening having been June 26 of last year. As might be expected, for this special occasion—the first big commemorative occasion in the new theater—a special bill of unusual excellence and variety has been booked, and every number on it is representative, worthy of particular attention and ranking with the very best in vaudeville. The aim has been to make the programme a thoroughly representative one, taking in all phases of the amusement purveyed by the Orpheum circuit, and very nearly this has been attained, as a glance at the following list of eight acts—five of them new and for next week only—will disclose.

John Tiller's London Ballet, consisting of the twelve Sunshine girls, the six Eton boys, and a staff of principals, twenty-two in all, in a fanciful divertissement, "On the Wall." Arranged especially by Martin Beck through John Tiller, the great London ballet master, from whose school this is the first troupe to invade America—and through affiliation with the Palace, London, where the Tiller acts perform.

Lietzel Sisters—perhaps the most daring and certainly the most beautiful aerialists now before the public. German girls with all the finish of the art, who do startlingly daring work on the trapeze, the rings, etc.

The five Sullys in "The Information Bureau." This is the nearest to a play in the programme, though it is merely a loosely constructed vehicle for the fun-making abilities of this celebrated troupe.

Reba and Inez Kaufman—Clever sisters, who sing and dance amazingly well. They have a novel entrance, a number of new stunts, and some character changes worth while.

Fred Hamill and Charles Abbate—Known as "the singer and the violinist," this merely hints at their work. Hamill has a fine voice, which he knows how to use, and Abbate is a violinist of excellence.

Camille Ober—the French chanteuse whose pyrotechnical vocal work is a source of amaze to all.

The Saytons—who do a spectacular contortion act known as "In the Land of Crocodile."

The Paulhan team—with their sporty and interesting basketball on bicycles.

Besides, there will be the same remarkable musical programme that was played a year ago, with the addition of a march composed by A. F. Frankenstein in honor of the occasion, and the world's news in motions views.

Burbank.

Local theater-goers have showed such a strong desire to see Laurette Taylor and the Burbank stock company in Hartley Manner's successful comedy, "Peg O' My Heart," that the popular Burbank has hardly known a vacant seat since the first performance, a month ago. The attendance continues at the high water mark and the advance sale of seats is of such large proportions as to warrant another week—the fifth—of the Manner's play.

John Cort, the famous New York manager, saw the performance of "Peg O' My Heart" Monday night, and immediately closed a deal, whereby the piece will be used to open the new Cort Theater in New York next September. It was made a part of the agreement that Laurette Taylor is to appear in the same role in which she is seen at the Burbank Theater, that Henry Stanford shall play his original role, and that the Burbank production, intact, shall be taken to New York for this important opening. Manager Cort is enthusiastic over "Peg O' My Heart" and prophesies a sweeping success for it on Broadway.

Mr. Manners's newest play, "Barbaraza," is in readiness to follow "Peg" and in this newer play Miss Taylor will find opportunities for emotional action that will reveal this brilliant young actress in a new light. Forrest Stanley will return to the Burbank stage in "Barbaraza."

Majestic.

With two weeks to their credit, Kolb and Dill will tonight enter upon their third and positively last week in "The Girl In the Train," the Viennese musical play which has smashed all previous Kolb and Dill records for attendance.

"The Girl In the Train" sparkles with fascinating music, delightful waltz numbers, and an abundance of real fun, and as it has already proved, is the very best sort of hot weather entertainment.

In this piece these two popular German comedians have shown themselves in entirely different parts than they have ever been seen in heretofore, while the production itself is the best they have ever offered local theater-goers.

Kolb and Dill will next be seen in their brand new edition of "The Politicians," which many theater-goers and critics aver is, for a typical Kolb and Dill production, their greatest success. Since the piece was last seen here, it has been entirely rewritten, the suffragette question introduced and both the comedians and the chorus alike been given better opportunities than ever before.

Pantages.

Next week's special feature at Pantages will be Frederick V. Bowers, the singing comedian, well known in connection with such musical shows as "The Ham Tree," "My Cinderella Girl" and "College Days," and who was recently featured with "The Sweetest Girl in Paris." Bowers is not alone a singer and comedian, but enjoys an enviable success as a song writer and composer. Among the popular songs to his credit are "Because," "Always" and "When I Think of You," and he has now added to the list a great descriptive comic, "O, You Circus Day," which will be heard here for the first time when the composer sings it next week at the Pantages.

The second special attraction will be the Bittner family of three in "The Waif," a production in which "Bill" Bittner, his frau, and Margaret Bittner have scored a decided success. The Bittners appear in the characters of an aged country couple who are rendered childless by the elopement of their daughter, and who find in the child adopted from an orphanage their own grand-daughter.

The third of the trio of unusual acts is furnished by Jessie Keller, the "Venus on Wheels." Venus dances, sings and does remarkable wheeling tricks, displaying a perfection of figure that is universally admitted to fully justify her stage name. With her apears Tommy Weir, who helps more than a little, especially in the vocal section of their repertoire.

New club tricks are the specialty of "The Juggling Normans," five in number, who hurl the painted cudgels at each other from every conceivable angle.

Arthur Donn and Harry O'Neal are old friends who apear in a talking and singing comedy which they have tagged "The Captain and the Kidder." Their conversational comicalities combined with their personal popularity, will make them a strong feature of the show.

Jewell and Jordan are specialists in bird whistling and in imitations of musical instruments.

Empress.

Six dashing, beautiful, young bicycle belles will pedal their way into the hearts of local vaudeville lovers this week when the new Sullivan & Considine bill of seven acts comes to the Empress Theater tomorrow afternoon, headed by the famous Bessie Valdere Troupe of Girl Cyclists.

This, however, is not the only feature, for there will also be seen the Five Musical MacLarens and the new one-act dramatic sensation, "Bill Jenks, Crook," both of which are well-known as headline acts throughout the vaudeville world.

The Bessie Valdere Troupe offers an effective, spectacular and beautiful cycling act, a chorus "on wheels," and their work is to them as easy as that of an ordinary dancing chorus.

The Five Musical MacLarens, all in kilts, will be heard in songs, seen in dances and play various instruments.

In "Bill Jenks, Crook" local audiences will find a sketch full of the comedy and pathos of the underworld.

Full of the characters of the underworld, dealing principally with crooks and the detective department, it is one of those "deep purple" type of plays which has recently held such a fascination for American audiences. The sketch will be capably presented by a big company, headed by William S. Gill and Grace Hopkins, both of whom appeared in the piece when it was first given in New York, only a few months ago.

George Yoeman, a monologist, who, last season scored a genuine laughing hit at the Empress Theater with his "cafeteria talk," will again be seen, and Ethel Whitesides and her three pickaninnies will dish up a palatable morsel of southern melody and dialogue, together with a number of clever dancing numbers, which should prove exceedingly popular with local audiences.

Completing the new bill will be Henry & Lizell, known as "the ginger kids," in the liveliest kind of songs and dances and acrobatic work, the always interesting news pictures and the new comedy motion pictures.

Olympic.

Monte Carter and his new company of supporting principals and choristers at the Olympic Theater will present a new bill tomorrow afternoon, entitled "Izzy in the Alps."

The plot, such as there is of it, deals with the travels of a Yiddish tourist through Switzerland, where complications of a ludicrous variety arise in swift succession.

Carter and his associates will be here but three days, when they will exchange stages with the Edwin T. Emery Musical Comedy Company from the Starland Theater at Frazer's pier, in Ocean Park. The latter organization, which is composed chiefly of the members of the old Olympic company, will give the first performance of their return engagement here on Thursday afternoon next, when they will present a new Emery comedy concoction, entitled "Mlle. Tamale." This is a special matinee that has been arranged for the benefit of the sufferers from the recent big floods in the Mississippi Valley, and is the direct result of the proffered use of the Olympic Theater and acting company to Mayor George Alexander by Manager Louis B. Jacobs. The former has delegated a special committee to co-operate with the theater management in directing the benefit and the worthiness of the cause is sufficient to establish the belief that the Olympic seating capacity will be put to a severe test.

Producer Emery is arranging several feature song numbers for the occasion and the real piece de resistance of the entertainment will be the classic dancer Mlle. Harriz, in a new and novel terpsichorean offering.

Adolphus.

Beginning Monday at the Adolphus Theater Jules Mendel and the Twentieth Century Girls will be seen in the musical comedy and burlesque, "The Jailbirds." It will be the first time this laughable success has ever been seen in this city. Jules Mendel and Al Franks will be seen in the title roles, those of the Jailbirds, while Walter Spencer, as a man around town, has a part well suited to his original style of performing. Hazel Douglas and Francis White, both are well-cast, and from the start of the overture to the drop of the final curtain there is not a dull moment. Rose Mendel will have a fine opportunity to display some more of her comedy.

"The Jailbirds" is the story of two unfortunate Dutchmen, who are mistaken for escaped convicts, and are thrown into what Mendel mournfully described as "The Bobby Hatch."

The forty Twentieth Century Girls are all ready to popularize themselves with new songs and dances. Sixteen musical numbers are interspersed throughout the piece.

Colonial.

Mrs. Happy Harrison and Mule Dynamite, will be the feature attraction at the Colonial Theater, commencing with next Monday's matinee. This little mule has made more people laugh than any other animal on the vaudeville stage today. Another act that will also hold honor position is the team of Sampson and Sampson, known as the "Roman Gladiators," in heavy lifting and hand balancing.

The International Duo, singers par excellence, will render the latest popular and operatic selections, while "Avery," blackface comedian, will entertain with a new line of song and talk, mingled with a little dancing.

A special feature will be the appearance of Edo Gambold, the "Juggling Kook," and his Komedy Lunch Kounter.

Booth Tarkington's latest play, "The Man on Horseback," will be exploited by James K. Hackett. First production in San Francisco next mont

Santa Barbara News.

The announcement that Mr. and Mrs. J. Langdon Erving and Mrs. Philip Kearney, former Californians who have been residing for many years in New York, may decide to locate permanently in Santa Barbara has created much interest in social circles, both in this city and in San Francisco, where Mrs. Erving and Mrs. Kearney, as the Rutherford sisters, before their marriage, were well known. Within a very few days the two sisters have purchased the interest of their brother, Alexander H. Rutherford, in a 100-acre tract near Santa Barbara. They are residing for the present in cottages at Montecito.

There is much local interest in the news from New York last Wednesday of the marriage of Marjorie Ide, daughter of Henry C. Ide, United States Minister to Spain, to Shane Leslie, son of Col. and Mrs. John Leslie of London. Miss Ide, and her sister, who is now Mrs. Bourke Cochran, passed a year or more in Santa Barbara and Montecito following their return from Manila, where their father was stationed during the first years following the American occupation. Much of the courtship of Bourke Cochran and Annie Ide was conducted under a romantic Montecito setting. It was to Annie Ide, it might be mentioned, to whom Robert Louis Stevenson deeded his birthday, because she was born "out of all reason, upon Christmas Day, and is therefore out of all justice denied the consolation, and profit of a proper birthday." In the same unique document, Stevenson classed Annie's father as "about as white a land commissioner as I require," and proceeded to transfer to the daughter all his rights and privileges to the thirteenth day of November, as her birthday. It was at her present home, "The Cedars," Port Washington, L. I., that her sister, Marjorie, became the bride of Shane Leslie, last week. Among many priceless gifts was a silver centerpiece from President and Mrs. Taft.

Local society has been not a little stirred by the report from London of the marriage of Mrs. Louise W. Timson, formerly of Montecito, to Baron Alexandre Vladimir de Stecheiberg. Mrs. Timson has had a stormy matrimonial experience, having been divorced by Timson, who resides in Paris, and having been the storm center of litigation here a couple of years ago, resulting indirectly from a broken engagement with W. A. Brownell of Montecito. Mrs. Timson, until recently, owned the beautiful "Everdene" residence in Montecito. She left here shortly after the termination of the Brownell suits.

Bride-Elect Complimented.

Miss Ramona Boone, who will become the bride of Richard W. Blackburn next Tuesday evening, was the honoree at a hearts party and miscellaneous shower given yesterday by Mrs. Edmund W. Gale, Jr., at her home, No. 208 North Grand avenue. Red hearts and red sweet peas were used to enliven the living-room, while the dining-room, where refreshments were served and the shower presented all the appointments were in pink. The electrolier over the table was covered with pink tulle, from which was suspended a white dove. A glass basket filled with pink sweet peas, surrounded by smaller glass baskets joined with glass chains, formed the centerpiece for the table. Broad pink satin ribbons crossed the center of the table, ending in large bows on each end and in the four spaces in the center were cut-glass candlesticks with pink shades which shed a soft glow over the table as daylight was excluded. Dainty cards marked covers for Miss Boone, Mrs. B. F. Boone, Miss Jewell Boone, Mrs. M. E. Griffith, Miss Frances Griffith, Miss Jennie Griffith, Mrs. Charles Ramsey, Miss Gilman, Miss Agnes Gilman, Miss Ina Cook, Miss Brundage, Mrs. Fred Cook, Mrs. Harry Garvin, Mrs. George Binder Miss Ruth Binder, Miss Mitchell, Mrs. Harry Anderson, Mrs. A. Hoppe and Miss Hill.

From Wellesley.

Miss Gladys Lindsey of West Adams street, Miss Beatrice Burnham, Hartman Apartments, and Miss Barbara Stephens, who graduated from Wellesley, have returned home accompanied by Mrs. W. D. Stephens, No. 1108 West Twenty-seventh street.

Wednesday Wedding.

Miss Jessie Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Harris of No. 812 Bryan street, became the bride of Ralph Frederick Beegan Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Rev. Russell F. Thropp of the First Christian Church officiating. The bride, who was unattended, wore an embroidered crepe lingerie gown and carried white sweet peas and lilies-of-the-valley. Her only ornament was a pearl and sapphire pendant, the gift of the groom. In the living-room, where the service was said, Maman Cochet roses were used in artistic profusion and pink sweet pease enlivened the reception and dining-rooms. Mr. and Mrs. Beegan will pass their honeymoon in and about San Diego.

Surprise Party.

Mrs. L. S. Buck of No. 297 East Forty-third street was pleasantly surprised Monday afternoon when a party of friends gathered at her home in celebration of her birthday anniversary. The hours were enjoyed with games and music. Covers were laid for eighteen.

Luncheon and Theater.

Members of the Qui Vive Club entertained Thursday with a luncheon at Hotel Lankershim followed by a matinee party at the Belasco Theater. Miss Pearl Weisbrod, whose engagement to Mr. Hoag of San Francisco was announced recently, was the honoree. The table glowed with sweet peas and hand-decorated cards bore the names of Miss Leta Apablasa, Miss Florence Wickersham, Miss Laura Apablasa, Miss Albertina Kirby, Miss Clairbelle Kindlen, Miss Conchita Apablasa, Miss Margaret Rimpau, Miss Molly McDonald, Miss Clara Allen and Mrs. Mabel Heisman.

Miss Bauman a Bride.

At the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Grace B. Caress, No. 1615 Golden Gate avenue, Miss Reba Bauman and Gwynne W. Ellis were married Friday evening, the service having been read by Rev. John Leusinger of the Bethang Presbyterian Church in the presence of the immediate family only. The bride was beautiful in a gown of white satin, with an overdress of real lace. She carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. The rooms were decorated with Shasta daisies and greenery. After a wedding dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis began a tour of Southern California.

Mr. Ellis, a graduate of Kansas University, is a civil engineer of Kansas City.

Quiet Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Camila Lopez and Harold Darrah Palmer was quietly solemnized Wednesday evening in the presence of immediate relatives only.

Rose Luncheon.

Miss Laura McEwen was the guest of honor at a rose luncheon given Wedneday by Mr. Heber H. Balderston at her home on Adam street. The living-rooms were artistically decked with peach blossoms and potted plants. A large rustic basket graced the center of the dining-table. This was filled with Cecil Brunner roses which fell in a shower effect. Small dolls holding silk rose petals bearing the guests' names marked covers for Mrs. Eugene Lewis, Mrs. Oscar Kinne, Mrs. Elmer Riggle, Mrs. Harry Coat, Mrs. William E. Bush, Mrs. Alex Gleason, Mrs. William Weier, Mrs. C. R. McEwen, Mrs. John A. Mathis, Mrs. Knowlton Bradley, Mrs. Charles G. Willis and Mrs. Elmer Biles.

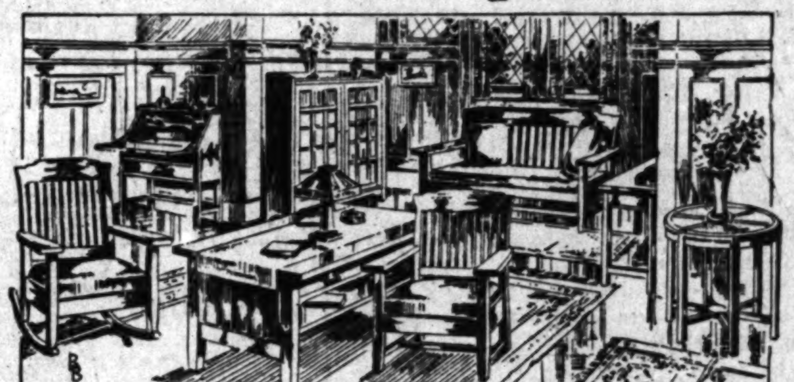
Burmont Furniture -- Dignified -- Refined!

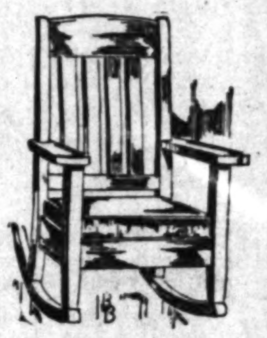


—in the illustration above, we show a setting of the famous "Burmont" quality furniture. Burmont furniture is an adaptation to mahogany of the English arts and crafts movement. The outline and general treatment of this furniture has been softened in order to more perfectly harmonize with the softness and tone of mahogany. The more severe treatment suitable to oak, has been replaced, in Burmont products, by a slightly softer treatment more suitable to mahogany.

—the mahogany used in the manufacture of Burmont furniture is entirely Cuban mahogany, it being of finer texture, color and great strength. It is most beautiful furniture—in wood, in finish, in design and in its substantial construction.

—it is appropriately named in honor of Lord Burmont, who befriended this general movement, in its infancy, in England.

—We most cordially invite you to visit Barker Bros. this week and enjoy the beauties of Burmont furniture. We show an extensive display, as will be noted in the illustration above, which our artist sketched from pieces on our floors. Note the special offering here given. It is indeed a very extraordinary value.



—note carefully this rocker as illustrated here; it is the genuine English Burmont design; of solid mahogany, richly finished; high back style; loose cushion seat, covered with genuine Spanish leather; a straight line, refined pattern, delightfully comfortable, easily worth $22.00; special, this week, at $16.50

Glendale.

AN unusually pleasing affair this week was the six-o'clock dinner given by the Senior girls of the Glendale High School in honor of the Trustees of the school, their wives and the Principal and Vice-Principal, Mr. G. U. Moyse and H. L. Howe and their wives, the affair being held in the girls' lunch room, which was prettily decorated in yellow and white, candles being the only lights used. Dainty place cards were painted by Miss Lois Graham. The girls who cooked and served were Misses Lois Graham, Helen Tupper, Virginia Allen, Della Echols, Blanche Tarr, Ethel Tarr and Elsie Thede. An elaborate menu was served.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY HELPS

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Mrs. G.: Powder covers up but does not correct complexion faults. Use this simple lotion and your skin will assume its former youthful clearness and take on a charming tint: Dissolve 4 ounces spurmax in ½ pint witch hazel (or hot water) and pour in 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. Using the spurmax lotion in place of powder overcomes the shiny, oily appearance and gives to a coarse, lifeless skin an exquisite fineness and healthy look. Even in hottest weather it is only necessary to apply the spurmax lotion once a day, because perspiration does not spot it, and then, too, it is invisible when on.

Madge W.: I never advise the electric needle for superfluous growths, because delatone paste does the work quicker, more thoroughly and is devoid of pain. Mix some powdered delatone with water, then apply to objectionable hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This leaves the skin smooth and firm.

A. B.: Cutting the eyelashes is dangerous. I would advise applying pyroxin to lash-roots with thumb and forefinger, as this makes them grow long, curly and silky. Your straggly eyebrows can be made to come in thick and beautiful by putting pyroxin on with finger-end. Use caution and don't get pyroxin where no hair is wanted.

V. M.: Soap was never intended for shampooing, because the "free" alkali it contains raises havoc with the scalp and hair-roots. Use canthrox and you will find your dull, streaky, brittle hair will grow bright and even in color and be of a soft, silken texture. A teaspoonful canthrox dissolved in a cup hot water is ample for a delightful shampoo. This creates a wealth of rich, penetrating lather that thoroughly rids the hair and scalp of dust, dandruff and excess oil; and after rinsing, the hair dries quickly and takes on its former rich color and gloss.

Mrs. M. W.: Your blotchy, pimply skin proves that the blood is in a very unhealthy state and demands prompt action. Get ½ pint alcohol and in this put ¼ cupful sugar, 1 ounce kardene and hot water to make a quart. A tablespoonful before each meal is the proper dose. This soon cleanses the blood of impurities and clears the skin of pimples, blotches and sallowness, as well as builds you up and gives you complete health and full strength. For a face lotion, see answer to "Mrs. G."

P. A.: You will find my quinzoin hair and scalp tonic very invigorating for lifeless, itching scalps. To prepare, mix together ½ pint each alcohol and water, then add 1 ounce quinzoin. Rubbing a little at a time well into the scalp banishes dandruff and puts it in a healthy, pliant condition. Continued using restores the former gloss and rich color to the hair, as well as induces a luxuriant growth—all your own.

Lillian R.: You can safely recommend my crystos eye-tonic to your friends, for it is quite harmless and has a wonderfully soothing and strengthening effect on sore, aching or weak eyes. Here is the recipe: Dissolve 1 ounce crystos in a pint cold, pure water. Two or three drops should be put in the eyes each day. Thousands of my readers have used this simple eye-tonic to bring back the sparkle to dull eyes and very frequently people have been able to discard glasses after using it for a time.

P. X.: The fat around your abdomen will soon disappear once parnotis is used. This will also banish your double chin. To make, dissolve 4 ounces parnotis in 1½ pints hot water, and when it cools take a tablespoonful before each meal. Continue treatment until your weight is where you want it, and when you stop the treatment you need have no fear of the fat returning. This method does away with dieting or violent exercise and is the only safe way of which I know to actually reduce weight.

Dorris: Greasy creams do more harm than good, because of their tendency to clog pores. This causes the skin to assume a leaden color and grow oily, and encourages blackheads, blotches and skin pimples. You will find this plain almozoin cream-jelly just the thing for complexion upsets and a permanent aid to real beauty: Stir 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine in ½ pint cold water, then add 1 ounce almozoin. When this is dissolved apply freely to face, neck and arms daily and it will cleanse the skin of impurities and give to it a charm and tint such as every healthy, well-groomed woman has. Use this every morning and your skin will be free from freckles and the sun and wind will not tan it.

One of the fairest victims of Cupid's arts was Miss Mabel Ross, who on Tuesday evening became the bride of J. Douglas Wilson. At the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Ross of Orange Grove avenue, with groups of admiring relatives and friends as witnesses, the pretty maid repeated the solemn vows which made her wife. Dr. W. A. Hunter of the Calvary Presbyterian Church performed the marriage ceremony and Miss Florence Patterson played the wedding music. Miss Nellie Ross, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor, and Misses Beatrice and Mildred Ross were attending bridesmaids. A large reception followed the ceremony. Beverley Hills.

THE Woman's Club of Hollywood gave its annual luncheon Wednesday at the Beverly Hills Hotel. A special car brought the ladies to the hotel without change. The dining tables were appropriately decorated with the club colors, for the occasion. At 1 o'clock about one hundred members and friends enjoyed a delicious lunch. The officers for the ensuing year were installed: President, Mrs. Cassius Smith; vice-president, Mrs. B. U. Harper; recording secretary, Mrs. J. F. Redhead; corresponding secretary, Mrs. George H. The table centerpiece consisted of larkspur and Shasta daisies. The guests included Mrs. James R. Newberry, Mrs. Jaccard, Mrs. S. Derrin, Mrs. James Merll, Mrs. M. Hudson, Miss A. Hudson and Miss B. Hudson.

San Jacinto.

THE Y.M.C.A. boys of Long Beach gave a splendid entertainment in the High School assembly hall on Thursday evening. The boys, fifty strong, have been camped in Indian Canyon for the past two weeks, and on Thursday fifty more boys came to take their places and the following day the first contingent returned to Long Beach.

Two weddings occurred in San Jacinto this week. On Sunday Henry Faucher and Miss Nellie Cook were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Cook. After a brief wedding trip the couple will return to San Jacinto to reside. Rev. J. J. Post performed the ceremony. On Wednesday Ima Malone and Ernest Kimmell were united in marriage, Rev. A. K. Wright, formerly of this place, officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Kimmell will live at Glendale.

The regular meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held Friday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Sanders, Mrs. G. B. Edingfield having charge of the meeting. This was the last meeting of the Union for the summer.

IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Castelar-street School.

Shoe-making and mending are to be introduced at Castelar-street Vacation School, being the first department of this sort to be established in the public schools. Mr. Cripe will have charge of the work and will teach the pupils to cobble for their families.

The Hollywood eighth graders visited Castelar on Wednesday, with a view to studying the sociological problem presented by the care of so many nationalities, with their varying customs, religions and languages. A pretty little incident in connection with the visit was the girls' promise to send the dolls they are relinquishing as they enter the High School to these little ones, who were enthusiastically making doll-clothes—without any dolls!

The upper-grade girls entertained the teachers at luncheon, on Wednesday, the viands being prepared and served by the pupils, and in most cases having been grown by them. There were salads and potatoes and beans grown in the school gardens, and the table decorations were the school-garden coreopsis.

U.S.C. Medical Graduates.

Superintendent Francis addressed the graduating class of the U.S.C. Medical College, Thursday morning. His speech was characterized by the usual inspirational qualities for which Mr. Francis's public addresses are famous and was full of sound advice, practical common sense, and helpful suggestion.

Judge McCormack at San Pedro.

On Friday evening, Judge Paul McCormack delivered an address at the High School auditorium on "The Live Citizen."

Preceding the address, Miss Ella Ludwig, principal of the San Pedro Evening School, entertained Judge and Mrs. McCormack at dinner, with other guests present as follows: The faculties of San Pedro High and Evening Schools, all officers of the social center, and the following from Los Angeles: James Francis, Mrs. J. H. Francis, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Lickley, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Daniels, Dr. and Mrs. Grant Karr, Miss Nora Sterry, and Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Pinnell.

At the close of the dinner, Mr. Lickley presented the first graduate of the San Pedro Evening School, Miss Jessie Weaver, with a diploma for the literary course.

Fifty-fourth-Avenue School Exhibit.

The exhibit of school work at Avenue 54 was comprehensive, and included all the regular work of the school. The manual work gave a clear idea of growth in facility and artistic grasp. The wood sloyd exhibit consisted of massive oak chairs and tables, which were correct in design and careful in workmanship.

The fireless cookers made in this department were the chief attraction to mothers, while to small boys the most fascinating objects were two automobile coasters.

There was a small but most interesting exhibit of clay tiles and copper watch fobs from the metal and clay department.

The sewing exhibit was very attractive and showed complete sets of dressmaking and millinery models, displaying taste and originality in the youthful designers.

The garden exhibit was especially attractive, showing the various sorts of vegetables and flowers grown by the children.

Fourteenth-Street Intermediate.

The A9's gave a pretty presentation of the "Cricket on the Hearth," dramatized from Dickens's story, on Tuesday evening, in the auditorium, the school orchestra furnishing most excellent music, under the leadership of Miss Maude Boyle, in the intervals of the acts, and after the Dickens pageant.

The Dickens people were introduced by Anna Lane, as Mrs. Jarley of "Waxworks" fame, and included the following well-known and well-beloved characters from the English master: From "Oliver Twist"—The Artful Dodger, Fay Calhoun; Oliver Twist, Pasquale Zarilla. From "David Copperfield"—Dora, Edna Marsh; Peggotty, Hildegarde Leuenberger; David, Albert Oliver; Mr. Micawber, James Garrot. From "The Old Curiosity Shop"—Little Nell, Emily Souter; Mrs. Jarley, Anna Lane. From "Dombey and Son"—Miss Blimber, Naomi Adams; Capt. Cuttle, Albert Martin; Mrs. Pipchin, Bernice Kirk; Paul Dombey, John Noris; Florence Dombey, Margaret Kleckner. From "Our Mutual Friend"—Bella Wilfer, Mildred Smith. From "Tale of Two Cities"—Lucy Manette, Hulda Osterman. From "Bleak House"—Mrs. Jellyby, Mildred Walker. From "Martin Chuzzlewit"—Jenny Wren, Kate Greve. From "Little Dorrit"—Flora Finching, Lucy Walker. From "Nicholas Nickleby"—Mrs. Nickleby, Emma Harvey; Kate, Josephine Davis; Mrs. Squeers, Lillian Breutsch; Mrs. Kenwigs, Lura Davis; the little Kenwigs, Marie Betkouski, Jennie Reynolds, Leona Ritter and Beth Sizler.

The characters in the play were all well sustained. Russell Tucker made a capital John Perrybingle; Paul Markham did the toymaker to perfection; Perry White made the pathetic Caleb Plummer very real; Laura Lange played Dot in quite the charming manner in which we imagine the original to have behaved; Effie Field was a most amusing and realistic Tilly Slowboy; Ethelyn Holland as Mrs. Fielding, and Mildred Leahy as May Fielding played their parts to the life; Fremont Reichwein was a convincing Old Gentleman; Walter Neville made a good porter, and Rosetta Sommer's Bertha, though mentioned last, was one of the best bits of acting in the play.

After the play, the A9 class song was given, the words being by Webb King, an A9 boy, set to the music of Santa Lucia.

Classes in Clay-Modeling.

Mr. Kunou, supervisor of manual training, announces clay-modeling classes for teachers, during vacation, free of charge, to be conducted by him at Grand-avenue school, from 9 to 12 o'clock, school days. The course will consist of hand-made pottery—i. e., pottery made by casting molds. It will include applied decorative design; the process of biscuit firing, as well as of glazing and glaze firing.

Twenty-First-Avenue Intermediate.

A feature of the last week of school was the mock trial that was the finishing work of the ninth grade oral English class. The debating was amusing, as well as interesting and instructive, and it is said, several youngsters are planning to become lawyers and judges as the result of it!

Some of the teachers are planning very pleasant vacation trips. Miss Edna Ames expects to spend the summer in Europe; Miss McCulloch is going East via the Canadian Pacific. Miss Ball leaves for New York City. Avenue 21 will be represented at the State University summer session by Miss Oyler, Mr. Schoeffel, and Miss Irma Blunt. Miss Everett will study at the Columbia School of Oratory, in Chicago.

Among the year's achievements to which the school points with pride are the winning of the boys' and girls' basket-ball championships.

A recent victory over Polytechnic freshmen, in the first public debate is another thing that has made Avenue 21 happy.

Amelia-Street Evening School.

Amelia-street evening social center this week graduated a naturalization class of thirteen, under Miss Grace Turner. This class also passed the examination for admission to citizenship, before Judge Bordwell. Miss Turner has been conducting the class for the past three months, and has found her pupils most industrious, notwithstanding the variety of nationalities represented—Russian, Austrian, Swedish, Danish, German, Scotch, Irish and Italian—they made common cause in an effort to become good Americans.

Swimming to Be Taught.

Swimming is to be taught at Macy-street vacation school, or, rather, in connection with such school, for the plunge at Bethlehem Mission has been newly fitted up, in first-class shape, with showers, apparatus and all the newest aquatic wrinkles. Mr. George Weinstein will have charge.

Miss Stone to Visit Canada.

Miss Kathryn Stone will spend the month of July in Nova Scotia, much of the time on a motoring trip through that picturesque country. In August she will go to Boston and Chicago for special work in musical institutions of those cities.

Berendo-Street School.

Berendo intermediate has just issued "Life," for the second time this year. The work was done entirely by the pupils, except the printing and binding. The handsome half-tones of school scenes are reproductions of photographs taken by the pupils, and the clever and beautiful drawings are also their work. The book abounds in bright sketches, clever stories, and amusing "quips and quirks."

The editorial staff is as follows: Houston Patter, editor; Alfred Drew, associate editor; Robert Haggerty, cartoonist.

And by the way, the cartoons are good enough for a "growed-up" magazine! Especially the clever little one, "School Notes," at the head of a column, with a boy and girl passing notes across the aisle.

The book is dedicated to Superintendent Francis.

Contributors are as follows: Acrostic, Merle McAneny—very cleverly done; "The Lifted Cloud," Lucy Wilcox—charming in style; "Excellent Fishing," by Joe Toole; "Uncle Dan's Bear," by William Combs; "A Bear Story," by Edgar Sherer; "In the Days of Long Ago," by Raymond Huntsberger; "Shylock," by Theodore Taylor; "A Cactus," by Louis N. Lissner; "Characteristics of the Scottish People," by Mary Teitsworth; "A Book Report," by Anita Pease; well-written verse by the following: George Elder, Dorothy Popperwell, Weinad Eagen, Louise Hoffman, Gerald Herrerias, Dorothy Darling, Ernestina Modesti, Alice Anderson, Wendell Kinney, and a Spanish translation by Sarah Rothwell. Wylie Brown contributed an original essay in Spanish on "La Fiesta de las Flores."

On Thursday the B9 class gave the A9's a farewell party in the big hall. A tremendous surprise awaited the A's when, as a graceful compliment to their seniors, the B's lifted the stage curtain showing a setting for "The Only Play in the World"—written by Theodore Taylor, an A9 boy! Deep and long was the applause, and then the students settled down to listen to the lines. The cast played their parts excellently, the characters being assumed by the following: Morris Ankrum, May Roberts, Arthur Drew, Clara Peterkin, Gladys Edwards.

City Teachers' Club.

Distinguished educators of the city are preparing to give a summer course to teachers, under the auspices of the City Teachers' Club. Miss Ida M. Leonard will give lectures on voice culture and literature at the Y.W.C.A. building; Mrs. Mila Tupper Maynard will give talks on Ibsen; Dr. Susan Balfe will teach parliamentary practice; Dr. Richard Burton will lecture on "The Modern Drama."

Miss Edith Hodgkins is president of the organization and may be consulted in regard to the classes. Her address is No. 1680 West boulevard.

Sweet Pea Contest.

A delightfully fragrant load will be that which the 5 o'clock train bears north on July 21.

Between 500 and 600 children are participating in the sweet pea contest, in which cash prizes are being offered by the State University College of Agriculture for the most perfect exhibits.

The judging is to take place on July 4, at Berkeley, and the children are being instructed as to how to ship their flowers.

Most of the children have raised their plants at home, as the head of the gardening department, Mrs. Larkey, wishes each pupil to do his own work and his own thinking. The class teacher has decided which sprays of sweet peas are entitled to the honor of being shipped North, and in all cases the children have written compositions regarding their gardening experiences.

The prizes are as follows: First prize, $10; second prize, $5; third prize, $2.50; fourth prize, $1, to the next fifteen. Letters will accompany the exhibits, and be given credits in point of spelling, punctuation and English, and many small gardeners' hearts will be palpitating with expectancy every time the mail comes in from San Francisco, until the awards are made.

Moving Pictures.

Don't think for a minute that the Indians and roughriders and cowgirls have it all to themselves when it comes to the film-fanciers. Educational work is coming into its own, and during the past week the Sunset Moving Picture Company has been taking traveling photos of many phases of our school work, penny luncheons, folk-dancing, manual and domestic science work, orchestra, school gardening, and many other features. These are to be exhibited at the forthcoming convention of the National Municipal League, to be held in this city, July 8 to 12.

Los Angeles High.

Teachers of Los Angeles High are preparing to emigrate, now schools are closed. Some will go to foreign lands, some to near-by spots of "coolth" and leisure; and still others into the far-land of matrimony. Miss Katharine Carr will go to Yellowstone for a fortnight, then on to Columbia University, where she will take special work in Latin; Miss Lena McNaughten will attend Columbia; Miss Emma Caleff will go to Tahoe; E. W. Oliver will visit Yellowstone; Miss Juliette Pierce will attend the N.E.A. convention at Chicago, and later will take an English and sociology course at Columbia; Margaret Burkhalter goes abroad for a year; Flora Miller will marry; Miss Josephine Ginaca will visit her brothers coffee plantation owners, on the Hawaiian Islands; and Principal Housh and Mrs. Housh will sojourn at Tahoe.

Flowers.

Dear company, sweet flowers, upon your table-seat,
Crystalled befittingly, bewitchingly to greet
My fondling eyes: Your perfumed
robings fair arrayed—
Of such queenly graces never wore displayed.
What graciousness could bear your flamed and coying hues—
These held in blend the while to foster beauty's dues.
Though jewel-sparkled and with golden gauze about,
Your wondrous modesty of style puts them to rout.
Nor do you chatter when you talk to close commune—
Your pouring silence telling me of joyous June.
Roses, my dears, I live renewed within your shades;
You, lilies pure with graceful spring
blades,
You banish wintry thoughts shut in with stormy gloom.
For you are children of the love Divine in bloom.

THE VALUE OF TOADS.

Are the Greatest of All Exterminators of Insects and Destructive Worms and Should Be Protected.

[Technical World:] Science offers a new solution for the bug problem. It is to employ in its professional capacity, so to speak, the toad—the ordinary hoptoad of the field and garden—as an insect destroyer.

In this business the humble toad is unequalled by any other living animal. He is the greatest bug exterminator in the world. It is entirely practicable to utilize his services on an extensive scale, employing him systematically as an ally to keep in check insects which levy an annual tax of more than $8,000,000 upon our agricultural resources.

There is no reason why the farmers of the country should not hatch and rear their own supply of toads for local service. With a pond or even a small pool insured against drying up during late spring the creatures will breed of their own accord in any desired numbers up to the limit of the food supply available in the shape of insects. But one thing absolutely essential is that they shall be protected against their natural enemies, and by no means the least destructive of their enemies are small boys, who through mere thoughtlessness kill toads whenever they get a chance.

It is estimated that an average toad is worth to the farmer $5 a year for the cutworms alone, which it destroys. But this is only one item. The amount a toad will eat is astonishing. A large specimen has been known to devour a hundred rose beetles at a single meal. One toad needed seventy-seven myriapods—the common household centipede—to satisfy his appetite, another fifty-five army worms and another sixty-five gypsy moth caterpillars. Still another toad was seen to eat thirty-five large, full grown celery worms in three hours, and another accepted eighty-six [illegible] him in less than ten minutes.

It is a common thing when the occupants of an ants' nest are [illegible] and the insects are emerging in [illegible] numbers to see an enterprising [illegible] sit at the entrance of the burrow [illegible] snap up every ant that comes out. [illegible] slaughter he accomplishes under [illegible] circumstances is frightful. But, of course, most ants are not injurious to man; and the [illegible] insects injurious [illegible] destroys some [illegible] unquestionably [illegible] which are beneficial to the [illegible] Upon the whole he is [illegible] ful, devouring countless [illegible] the very worst bug foes of the [illegible]

WOMEN'S WORK, W

BY SYDNEY

LOS ANGELES club women have been enjoying during the past week a preliminary taste of the biennial convention which opens in San Francisco this week. With the arrival last Tuesday of the Empire State special, bearing a hundred New York delegates, the ball was set rolling and has continued to spin with increasing velocity ever since and will reach a climax today when several other special trains from various parts of the country arrive. No less than six special trains were scheduled in their trip across continent to approach the Golden Gate via the City of Angels—a most appropriate plan.

Two notable formal functions were given—the reception at the Ebell Clubhouse on Thursday evening and the luncheon at the Friday Morning Club on Friday, when the entire delegation attended the regular club meeting and afterward sat down to an elaborate luncheon in the club [illegible] as the honored guests of the club.

The following members of the club acted as hostesses at the tables: Mrs. David Chambers McCann, president of the club; Mmes. E. R. Brainerd, O. P. Clark, Charles Farwell Edson, Berthold Baruch, Frank Garrett, N. K. Potter, Anstruther Davidson, C. E. Shattuck, Estelle Heartt Dreyfus, W. F. Thurston, Randall Hutchinson, Helen Henderson Steckel, Dr. Amelia Gates, Margaret Frick, Mary H. Gridley, J. A. Osgood, F. A. Eastman, W. J. Lawless, Misses Laura Grover Smith and Jessie Anthony.

Half a Century a Teacher.

Among the most distinguished visitors at the Friday Morning Club last Friday was Mrs. L. M. Wilson of Chicago, a teacher of fifty-two years' experience—and she's teaching yet—although she has passed the seventy-first milestone of life. She was the first woman superintendent of schools in this country, having served in that capacity in Des Moines, Iowa, years ago. She found former pupils here in the persons of Mrs. Mila Tupper Maynard and her sister, both of whom attended school in Des Moines when Mrs. Wilson was principal there. Mrs. Wilson is accompanied by her niece, Miss Lida Little, and they are bound on a summer vacation trip to Alaska.

Some Empire State Women.

Mrs. John Lewis Childs, wife of the famous New York florist, and her daughter, Miss Childs, were among the biennial visitors last week.

Mrs. Sylvanus Purdy, president of the White Plains Woman's Club, and Miss Purdy are delegates from this wealthy New York suburb.

Mrs. Ruth Litt, chairman of the dramatic section of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs, was an interesting delegate.

Miss Mary Garrett Hay, for twelve years National Suffrage Organizer, in speaking of the suffrage situation in New York, said: "We can't get the franchise now, anyhow, inside of three years, but I believe we'll win then." Miss Hay stumped California in the suffrage campaign in 1896, speaking from one end of the State to the other. She goes from San Francisco to Ohio, where she expects to remain till after the special suffrage election in September, organizing and directing her forces. She is president of the New York State Federation, a relative of John Hay, and internationally famous as a suffragist.

Mrs. Rudolph Jacob Muller represents the Legislative League of New York. "I am going to the biennial convention to lobby for that marriage license bill," she declared, "whereby health certificates shall be required before marriage licenses are issued."

"Yes, my husband came along," cheerfully announced Mrs. John Yawger, as she stood resplendent with tiaras at the Ebell reception. "You see he's a lawyer and it happened that he had a couple of clients on this Coast whom he must positively see in regard to certain depositions. I told him it was the finger of Providence pointing him to come right along with me. So he did. He's gone on up to Seattle now and I don't expect to see him again till I get back to New York."

Ebell's Annual Luncheon.

More than 350 women, members of Ebell, sat down yesterday to the annual luncheon served in the clubhouse. For the first time on an occasion of this kind, the tea-rooms in front of the building had to be pressed into service to accommodate the crowd, as the big auditorium was not large enough to provide seats for all. There were thirty-six tables [illegible], each with its decorations of [illegible] and white, the club colors. The [illegible] cards were embellished with a portrait of Dr. Adrian Ebell, the distinguished German scholar in whose honor the club was named, the first [illegible] being organized in Oakland in 1876, since which time Ebell clubs have been formed in other cities [illegible].

Mrs. J. R. Millard was toastmistress. The first toast was to Dr. Ebell, by Miss Alice F. Parsons, president of [illegible] Collegiate School. Mrs. [illegible] Henderson Steckel responded to [illegible], "Our Ancestors and [illegible]," and Mrs. M. E. Johnson responded on "Masters of the Situation." Mrs. William H. Mrs. W. C. Mushet, the recently-elected president of the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs, presided at the first board meeting of the officers last Tuesday at her home. Luncheon preceded the business meeting, covers being laid for [illegible]. As the members of the board, in most cases, newly elected to their respective chairmanships, this meeting was largely for the purpose of getting acquainted and therefore of a social nature. Reports were given by various committees. Miss Kenney offering a resolution which was indorsed, to be presented at the biennial, urging clubs to work for the appointment of women on school boards.

Give Jersey Cows.

[illegible] of the Cumnock School recently gave an entertainment for the benefit of the George Junior Republic, clearing the snug sum of $300. They invested the money in the purchase of six sleek, fat, fine Jersey cows as the nucleus of a dairy for the Chino Republic, and now the young citizens out there are enjoying milk and cream and now and then a bit of butter that is strictly a home production.

Miss Florence Guernsey,

One of New York's most progressive and philanthropic women, who is a guest in Los Angeles, on her way to the biennial.

Progressive Club.

The Boyle Heights Progressive Club, which was organized but six months ago with a membership of thirty women, with Mrs. Samuel White Hamilton as president, held its formal session of the club year last week in the form of a banquet at the home of Mrs. Nealey on Plymouth avenue. Mrs. George H. Barry was the guest of honor and addressed the club.

The Rejuvenation of Grandma.

There is a venerable woman living on Long Island—in the picturesque town of Patchogue—who celebrated her ninety-eighth birthday anniversary last March and enjoys the distinction of being the oldest resident of the place, who took her first automobile ride one day last week. She entered the "devil wagon" with great trepidation and only after much urging by members of her family. In fact, it is said, it took a whole week of coaxing to induce Grandma Cornelius to agree to take such a chance, and it was with considerable fear that she at last seated herself in the tonneau and gave her consent for an old family friend to crank up.

When the machine started, grandma clutched the seat tightly and held on, but the worried look gradually vanished from her face as she sped smoothly along and when the car had reached a twenty-five-mile clip and the chauffeur asked, "Are we going too fast?" grandma cried out in ecstacy, "Mercy no, this is just great," and for a distance of a dozen miles they proceeded faster and faster, smashing the speed record, grandma clapping her hands in glee as they flew. When the ride was over, she hopped nimbly to the ground and asked anxiously, "When are we going again?"

The Club Husband.

The past week has been a strenuous one among clubwomen, with entertaining biennial delegates and keeping up with the almost incessant round of receptions, luncheons and functions that always mark the closing of the club year. One energetic woman, whose capable shoulders have borne heavy responsibilities in the administration of hospitalities to the visitors, and whose nerves were strained to the breaking point, turned on her husband, half-savagely, the other night, when, after dinner in the downtown hotel where they have bed and board, he timidly inquired how he should spend the evening—couldn't he do something to help, or would she go with him to the theater and take a night off, or—right there he was stopped by a frantic shriek of protest from his worried better half.

"For heaven's sake, man, take yourself off to your club and stay there till midnight—I shall be busy till then with these women. Don't you go up to our room," in a suddenly agitated tone, "for there's a clubwoman up there on the bed just tired out and trying to get a little rest."

The clubwoman's husband nonchalantly lighted his cigar and betook himself toward those masculine headquarters where domestic troubles cease to trouble and where worries are forgotten.

An Impressive Service.

The vesper service announced for Sunday, June 30, will doubtless be one of the most interesting sessions of the biennial in San Francisco. It will be held at Calvary Presbyterian Church, and the responsive service used was arranged by Miss Mary Emma Woolley, president of Mt. Holyoke College.

In this connection, it is of especial interest to recall the fact that President Woolley has inaugurated at Mt. Holyoke a most characteristic and distinguishing feature in the great vested choir, which includes 200 students in its membership. This girl choir has become famous to the world at large. Special days and exercises are made more memorable by the singing of this trained chorus, which lends to an impressive service an added interest and value.

The choir is in two sections, the junior chorus, consisting of fifty selected voices from the junior class which sings at Sunday morning services, and the vesper choir of seniors, sophomores and freshmen, which sings at vespers the first and third Sunday evenings of each month, the two uniting for special occasions.

At this biennial vesper service to be held in San Francisco, it is of interest to note that the address will be delivered by President Luella Carson of Mills College, which adds further to the note of harmony in that Mills College is one of the nine daughter colleges of Mt. Holyoke, with identical aims and ideas.

Back to the Farm.

Here's a rather curious coincidence which shows that people, by force of circumstances, often follow professions when they would prefer to follow a plow. I read in The Times the other day about a Boston woman, Miss Edna E. Holbrook, who has been a teacher in a large music conservatory, buying a five-acre tract of land at Puente, where she is going to build a bungalow and turn her attention to the fascinations of farming.

Yesterday I read in a New York paper that the choirmaster of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York resigned last week to go to Manitoba, where he will buy a fruit farm and turn farmer in pursuance of a long-cherished wish. This man, Rev. Dr. Ernest Voorhis, has been at the head of the cathedral choir school for twelve years, called there by the late Bishop Potter from Trinity parish.

Evidently these two musicians prefer the music of birdsong and the buzz of bees and insects in God's free, open countryside to the choir and conservatory.

Stunt Social for Southern Sufferers.

The Wade Hampton chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy are planning for a big benefit for the flood sufferers in the south. It will come off next Friday night at the home of the president, Mrs. H. H. Hutchason, No. 327 West Fifty-fifth street, and will be in the nature of a stunt social with continuous vaudeville from 5 o'clock in the afternoon till midnight—something doing every minute, with refreshments between acts and specialties. There will be several special features—a pay-as-you-enter ice-cream booth, fortune telling and other attractions to coax the dimes and dollars out of pockets to help the sufferers in the south.

What They'll Talk About.

A glance at the biennial programme as outlined indicates that the subject of public health will receive considerable attention, no less than three sessions being announced on this topic. Two sessions will be devoted to household economics, one whole day to civics, another to industrial conditions for women and a third to conservation of soil and water. The legal status of woman will have an evening to itself, as well as art, spelled with a capital A. So much for the printed programme, but there will be innumerable side issues that will come up for consideration. Mrs. Blankenburg, wife of Philadelphia's progressive Mayor, who was in Los Angeles for a few days preliminary to going North, in a five-minute speech the other day before the Women's City Club, declared that the most important issue to come before the biennial will be the unification of Federal marriage and divorce laws, which will go far toward solving this problem and also settling that of Mormonism.

Another Pennsylvania woman, Mrs. Marshall Smith, declares that California woman will not overlook the opportunity to work for a national indorsement of suffrage, notwithstanding the fact that it has been positively announced that suffrage will be taboo in the biennial sessions and not a mention of it occurs on the official programme.

For Working Women.

Several prominent club women from the city went down to Venice the other night to the dedication of the clubhouse built by the Hamburgers for their women employees. In his presentation address, M. A. Hamburger stated that the new home is a reward of merit and hinted that it is a forerunner of other surprises to come, expressing his belief that the time is not far distant when the employed will have a share in the profits of the employer.

Ellen Beach Yaw sang several selections and Mrs. O. C. Bryant, president of the Civic Association, spoke. Among other club women present were: Mrs. William L. Jones and Mrs. E. C. Bellows present and past-president, respectively, of the Ebell Club; Mrs. A. N. Davidson and Mrs. Thomas Allan Box of the Friday Morning Club; Mrs. W. J. Hole, president of the Y.W.C.A.; Mrs. William Baurhyte, past president Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. O. P. Clark, president of the Woman's City Club.

The Good Old Days.

[Colfax (La.) Chronicle:] In the good old days of ye old time ('77 to '80) the Chronicle used to make personal mention of almost every man that paid in a dollar for his subscription, and we only tipped our hat, "made our bow" and "acknowledged receipt" of real dollars at rare intervals. Peas and potatoes, onions, pumpkins and squashes, venison, butter, eggs, wild turkeys, squirrels and quail, with an occasional mess of "b'ar meat" all passed current for subscription and gave us an item of local note. Surely "them was good old days," when we lived on the fat of the land. Imagine the Chronicle making personal mention now of every man that pays in a dollar, when sometimes four or five men will pay their subscriptions in a single day.

MISS JULIA C. LATHROP.

Chief of Newly Created Children's Bureau Who Jocularly Calls Herself the Old Aunt of Young America.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Those who look upon woman suffrage as a condition at the national doors to be faced squarely and finally are jubilant over the appointment of the first woman bureau chief in the great machinery of the government. Those who know the history of the efforts begun in 1898 and maintained patiently and diligently ever since, know that Miss Julia C. Lathrop of Chicago was chosen the first chief of the Children's Welfare Bureau because of peculiar fitness for the work and her sex did not count except that it seemed fortunate that she did happen to be a woman and so well prepared to organize the new department. That it begins its existence on a modest scale is not a matter of regret to Miss Lathrop. But $50,000 a year has been appropriated by Congress with which to rent offices and pay clerks. But it is a beginning and the members of the National Child Labor Association which has labored for this result for nearly twenty years feel as though they were entering the promised land.

"While I am not in a position to discuss plans or outline policies," said Miss Lathrop, "I feel the universal interest taken in the Children's Bureau and its future calls for some word as to the history of this special division of philanthropy. The bureau, of course, will be wholly educational. It will investigate, collect information, classify, digest, and publish it. It has no jurisdiction except to suggest to law-makers after a close study has been made of law bearing on every phase of child life and its mission is a healthful childhood. It looks like a beatiful childhood. It looks like a big mission and it is. But a glance at the act of Congress approved April 9, of this year, shows the broad scope of the work and also defines its limitations. One feature which should set a certain class of critics at ease is that it is particularly stated that no official or employee of the Children's Bureau shall enter a house used exclusively as a residence without the consent of the head of the family.

"I feel rejoiced that this country is in a way, a pioneer in establishing this bureau in this particular way. The question of protecting children is coincident with the introduction of machinery when the child-labor problem began. As early as 1802, Sir Robert Peel in England, obtained the passage of a bill abolishing the apprentice system, a particularly cruel form of enslaving young children. England was an excellent model in thatall laws pertaining to children or to adults either came from one central law-making body, whereas child labor in this country depended on the clemency and justice of the various State Legislatures. This, however, is all remedied now and the labor of the bureau will be along every line of child life in every class of people, the birth rate, the diseases, especially the reasons for infant mortality. The word conservation is very popular now and we are getting ready to conserve the most precious property of the State, the children."

Though the first report on record in the government archives relating to the child problem, is a report made by the late Carroll D. Wright when Commissioner of Labor, for Congress in 1893, private efforts to aid children date back ten years before. Few acts of Congress have been passed after such paintaking effort. Not even the suffrage advocates have knocked more persistently at the doors of Congress than did this committee made of public-spirited men and women drawn from all walks of life and none with a hope of personal aggrandisement. When the bill was passed in its present form, they felt that they had realized their dream, of having laws for children entirely disassociated from politics and placed on the high level which such a subject deserves. Only a Federal bureau made it possible to wipe out State lines and State prejudices and interests and to work for the objective point of the nation and not for the benefit of communities and individuals.

Though associated with scenes of poverty, privation and sorrow for the past twenty-five years, no one presents a sunnier countenance than Miss Lathrop. She is thoroughly absorbed in the effort to help children and years ago when she selected this vocation in life, to devote her talents, her time and substance to aiding her fellowman, she specialized on children. In Hull House she found abundant material with which to demonstrate her theories and her appointment as a member of the Illinois Board of Charity, she widened her field. She takes the keenest interest in the games of children and can talk baseball like a rooter to the enthusiast of that pastime and she gravely discusses doll troubles with tiny girls and talks fashions with the frivolous little miss or the joys of the moving picture show. To be the aunt of every child in America seems a big contract, but Miss Lathrop expresses joy in the thought and is fairly aching to have her bureau organized and get to work.

"It is interesting to know," she said, "that women have been very prominent in every division of work which has finally resulted in the establishment of the Children's Bureau. Of the organized efforts it is unnecessary to speak: The National Child Labor Association has been part of the American Economic Association and has been under its direction. Countless clubs have added the weight of their influence and again individuals have given yeoman service. All social legislation must be supported by an intelligent public opinion if it is to affect industrial conditions. The mere passage of a law means nothing unless the community believes in it and we have a public behind us most enthusiastically and that because a pioneer in the movement, Mrs. John Armstrong Chanler of New York, took an excellent method to bring the subject of child labor before the American public. It was a prize of $500 for the best essay on child conditions in American factories and it was offered through the American Economic Association. The result was a general striving to learn the subject, primarily to gain the goal, but in many cases the knowledge so obtained was put to good use. The prize money was divided between two members of the Bureau of Labor, Mr. Willoughby and Miss Clara de Graffenreid, and so well did they cover the subject that their essays still remain a standard synopsis of the laws and conditions in this country. Naturally in many details things have changed since 1889, when the essays were written, but all who follow have to use the figures placed at their command and the conclusions were cogently put.

"To judge by the number of books and essays on the children's welfare placed on the market in the past ten years, it is a vital theme and a popular one. I hope to see it more popular still and every child in this great land of opportunity given a fair share."

Miss Julia Lathrop.

Miss Lathrop is a graduate of Vassar and a member of the board of governors of that venerable seat of learning. She cherishes a reverend love for her alma mater and only grave reasons keep her from attending the alumnae meetings and from assisting at the councils of the managers. She took the regular classical course with a small percentage of time devoted to the subject of economics. After leaving Vassar she made a profound study of sociology and studied under the best available masters. But her best course, she considers, was the practical work connected with Hull House. The under strata of the great city of Chicago became her ardent study and her charge. She has written, lectured, talked to small clubs and large ones, called neighborhood meetings, traveled to various State Legislatures in behalf of some urgent reform. Since her appointment fifteen years ago as a member of the State Board of Charity in Illinois, she has accomplished wonders. Her portion of labor was to visit the various State institutions for the dependent or the delinquent or the criminal? She went into the secret places of insane asylums, of hospitals, of orphanages, of asylums for the blind, the deaf, the epileptic, indeed her energy was so impressive that whenever she made a report she was heard with attention.

Like so many others in the same work, Miss Lathrop long ago realized that the only way to obtain good results is to divorce politics from every elecmosynary institution. But how to do was the problem she faced when the political plums consisted as a rule of making a man superintendent of this, that and the other institution with a good salary, no matter whether he were fitted by nature or training or not. Miss Lathrop has the reputation of being a peaceful reformer. She has accomplished tremendous results without upheavals or the strife which usually attends such changes. Her reputation for tact and for dependability are said to have weighed in her favor equally with her wide experience and splendid intellectual equipment. After the bill passed, applicants for the post of chief of the Children's Welfare Bureau sprang up over night. It is said that there were over 200 applicants, whom their friends, powerful men in most cases and very close to the President and to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, as entirely worthy to do the work. The salary attached, $5000, seemed to assure the appointment of a man, and the appointment of a woman was deeply resented in some quarters. Miss Lathrop made no effort, nor was she aware that her friends were making such efforts for her. For more than twenty years she had given her life gratis to the cause, and when the possibility of a Federal bureau was very remote. She was naturally profoundly gratified by her selection and even more so by the hundreds of letters and telegrams offering congratulations, which have come to her from every part of the country.

The Children's Bureau will not, though it possesses a feminine head, be composed entirely of the gentler sex. The remaining officials and clerks have been chosen in the regular way through civil service examination and the post of assistant chief has been given to Lewis Merriam of Salem, Mass., for several years a statistician in the census office. The clerks and others necessary have not yet been selected nor has the location of the bureau been made, for the money appropriated for its maintenance is not yet available.

Miss Lathrop is an authority of laws relating to children passed not only by Congress but also by the States. She has collected her knowledge in various scrap books well indexed and dated. She looks forward with pleasure to watching affairs at the capital. Hitherto her visits to Washington have been snatched from a very busy life, and generally she came on some specific mission which did not admit of much time to indulge private desires. The passage of the bill creating her office is but a step in what it is hoped to accomplish for child life in this country, and young America is to be congratulated in having a vigilant aunt right in the heart of affairs looking after its interests.

Officially Miss Lathrop will hold quite an exalted social rank and she will come next January 1 in state to pay her respects to the President, together with other grave and accomplished heads of great and important executive bureaus. The Department of Commerce and Labor is very young and has not the numerous ramifications of some others, but it possesses several commissioners and chiefs and into this circle Miss Lathrop will be admitted, the first of her sev. When the Secretary of Commerce and Labor calls together the heads of his various divisions, Miss Lathrop will stretch her feet under the mahogany with the best. From this, some gloomingly, others with roseate hopes, see the time when a woman shall be a regular member of the Cabinet, charged with looking after problems which are peculiarly in the domain of woman, education, children's welfare, conservation of health and strength, a number of kindred themes. To these suggestions Miss Lathrop gives only a whimsical smile.

"I am sufficiently busy with questions right here now and future ones do not make much impression. I am very sociable when I have time and I look forward to enjoying Washington in every sense of the word. It enjoys the reputation of being one of the most charming cities socially and full of hospitable, sympathetic people."

PECULIAR POSSESSIONS.

A Mr. Ormond, of Portland, Me., has a piece of the bell of St. Nicholas' Church in Sebastopol. It was secured by his father, who served all through the Crimean War. During the bombardment of Sebastopol all the spires of the church were demolished. When the allied armies took the city some of the soldiers cut up the bell and Mr. Ormond's father got one of the pieces.

Jacob E. Krout of Glen Rock, Pa., has a pair of shoes which are said to hold the record for long service in that State. Krout has worn the shoes for twenty-five years, and he is confident they will last ten years more. They have been mended several times, but are still in good condition.

While preparing a lot of fish at New Bedford, Mass., Manual Goulart, of that city, found a diamond ring in a large tautog. He took the ring to a jeweler, who immediately offered him $50 for it, but Goulart declined the offer because he interpreted the jeweler's eagerness to pay $50 to mean that the ring was worth much more money.

Sam Towsley of Garfield, Pa., has received a check from the United States government for $105, which was the balance due him in prize money for services rendered during the Civil War. Mr. Towsley was one of the crew of the gunboat Connecticut. For valuable cargo captured his share amounted to $2400, of which $105 had not been paid owing to an oversight.

Her honor, Judge Mary M. Bartaline, the first woman judge Chicago has ever had, has taken her seat on the bench of the Juvenile Court, and will devote her time to the trial of girls and young women charged with minor offenses.

THE HELPING HAND.

> "How far that little candle throws his beams!
> So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Both the White Star and the Cunard lines are to be congratulated on having solved a rather difficult and delicate problem in the working out of which it would have been easy for either to make a mistake.

When the Carpathia rescued those of the Titanic's passengers who had taken to the lifeboats, and when she turned back to New York instead of contining on her voyage to the eastward, a service was performed—by request, be it observed, though that makes little difference—that imposed considerable expense on her owners and gave them a clear legal claim to compensation from the White Star directors announced, they will not present; they consider it a privilege that their ship was able to save the Titanic survivors, and for reward they are content with the credit to the company that comes from what their captain so admirably did.

The White Star line, on the other hand, has recognized the deep obligation under which it was put by making generous money awards to every member of the Carpathia's crew, from the captain down to those performing the humblest tasks. That, too, was commendable, especially as it was accompanied by words of high appreciation.

About three years ago, says Popular Mechanics, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Sr., decided that one of the best ways to fight the spread of the white plague, would be the erection of sanitary homes for the poor. Therefore, she selected a site on the East River, New York, taking in most of the space between East Seventy-seventh and East Seventy-eighth streets, and had plans drawn for a type of apartment building that may well serve as a model for the world. The buildings are now completed and are said to be beyond criticism from a hygienic or any other point of view.

Mrs. James McMillan, widow of the late United States Senator McMillan, of Michigan, has contributed $1000 to the Woman's Titanic Memorial. This is the largest amount donated by one person.

Robert Knight of Providence, R. I., has given $25,000 to the Brown University $1,000,000 endowment fund, which has now passed the $920,000 mark.

Two women, fashionably attired, waded out in the lake at the foot of East Division street, Chicago, shortly before noon one day last week, and rescued Joseph Hasek, 6 years old, who had fallen into the water while "tryin' to ketch fish."

The women were drenched to their waists when they emerged with the lad in their arms. They hurried away before their names could be learned.

The child was given medical attention at the Chicago-avenue Emergency Hospital, and then taken to his home.

To a group of bluecoats the boy, as he lay on a cot in the Emergency Hospital, told how his life was saved by the "swell ladies," who are believed to be residents of the north shore.

"Me and my brother Vincent and my brother Pete went down to the lake to grab fish when they came up on the shore," he said, "and I fell into the water when I tried to grab one of the fish. Vince and Pete ran over on the Lake Shore drive and came back with two fine dressed women. The women came out in the water and carried me in their arms to the shore. Their clothes was all wet."

The only description of the heroines that the police have is that one wore a blue silk dress and the other a grown of gray material, both of which were ruined.

Joseph Cassidy, former president of Queens Borough, New York, saved two boys from drowning at Far Rockaway. The rescued boys were William Geoghegan, son of Judge P. A. Geoghegan of Manhattan, and John Blake, son of Peter Blake of Cedarhurst. They were bathing, and ventured out too far. Neither could swim.

Mr. Cassidy was swimming when he heard the Geoghegan boy cry for help. Before he could reach them the Blake boy had gone down for the second time.

Mr. Cassidy dived and brought him to the surface, and also succeeded in getting hold of young Geoghegan. He kept them both above the surface until a lifeguard reached the trio and brought them ashore.

Mr. Nathan Strauss who has just returned to New York from a visit to Jerusalem, is consulting with leading men of both the Christian and Jewish faiths regarding measures to alleviate the abject poverty of residents of Jerusalem. Mr. Strauss found thousands of Christians, Jews and Mohammedans living in filth and darkness in the cellars of Jerusalem, starving and suffering from malaria and tuberculosis.

John D. Archbold has donated $25,000 to Syracuse University toward wiping out the $60,000 deficit in the institution's current expense account. Mr. Archbold is president of the board of trustees of the university.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

H. G. Wells has come into public view in a new aspect—as the inventor of an educational war game. It is intended for students of strategy and tactics, and is said to be of an elaborate character. He is writing a book to accompany it.

Dr. W. J. Fairfield, a well-known physician, formerly of Anderson, Ind., was thought to have been drowned at the Gunnison River, near Delta, Col., more than two years ago, and six months later was declared legally dead by the courts, is alive and well and has joined his family in Denver.

Benjamin Bernstein, who graduated from the law school of Columbia University this year has been blind since infancy. He is 24 years old and since he became of age has supported himself, despite his handicap. "I have read proof for the Matilda Ziegler Magazine for the Blind," he says, "and in that way have carried myself through the law school. But if I hadn't been that, it would have been something else."

James Carlton, a young Minneapolis autograph collector, who has been in Rome seeking first editions and autographed books, all of which will ultimately belong to the University of Minnesota, has been such a boon to Italian dealers, poets and novelists that they have written about him in most eulogistic terms. When he departed, a large delegation accompanied him to the railway station and pelted him with flowers.

[Detroit Free Press:] "This latter day or new morality is too lax for me."

The speaker was Jerome [illegible] Wade, the Duluth millionaire. He continued:

"This new morality, which seems in its tolerance rather to encourage than to oppose wickedness, reminds me of a lad in my Sunday-school class.

" 'Now, Tommy,' I said to this lad one Sunday afternoon, 'now, Tommy, what must we do before our sins can be forgiven?'

" 'We must sin,' Tommy replied."

ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

[illegible] Sunrise.

[illegible] have I now outwatched the night
[illegible] this gray chamber toward the sea
[illegible] deep-arcaded balcony!
[illegible] yonder sharp acanthus-leaves the light
[illegible] stealing, red at first, then golden bright;
[illegible] when the day-god in his strength and glee
[illegible] from the orient flood victoriously,
[illegible] is tipped and tongued with quivering white.
[illegible] that were blots of purple [illegible] in soft liquid luminous [illegible]
[illegible] from the sea-floor to the [illegible]
[illegible] discerned erewhile through [illegible] gloom,
[illegible] now stud the water-[illegible]
[illegible] swans afloat from para-[illegible]
—[John Addington Symonds.

[illegible] and Art Lovers.

[illegible] of the South had an [illegible] opening last Monday in [illegible] studios, formerly the [illegible] galleries. About thirty [illegible] by representative painters [illegible] California are hung, half [illegible] being new. No [illegible] are yet shown, though [illegible] Daniell, who is be[illegible] the venture, hopes to have [illegible] reliefs by Julia Bracken [illegible] within the week.

[illegible] of the Salon of the South [illegible] far-reaching. It is ex[illegible] desirable that the scheme [illegible] fall through. The artists [illegible] nobly around the cause. [illegible] and lovers of art do [illegible]. If all work together, the [illegible] be made a tremendous [illegible]. And why not? Los An[illegible] now big enough, and strong [illegible] artistically, to support a [illegible] of this sort. All we have to [illegible] believe in the painters and [illegible] of Southern California, buy [illegible] when they are offered in [illegible] with those of other sec[illegible] of the world, and thus show [illegible] faith is not a mere mat[illegible] of words.

[illegible] artists of Los Angeles and [illegible] of Southern California [illegible] worthy of our consideration. [illegible] of them rank among the very [illegible] have in America, others take [illegible] only a little below them. [illegible] regularly in the most im[illegible] exhibitions in our eastern [illegible] seldom receiving laudatory [illegible] from discriminating critics. [illegible] prophets are so honored, why [illegible] dishonor them by refusing [illegible] proper recognition? The only [illegible] recognition is purchase. If [illegible] believed in our painters, [illegible] would buy their pictures and [illegible] them on our walls.

What are the real facts? Lovers of [illegible] genuine and spurious, but most[illegible] flock to art exhibitions [illegible] by local men, praise the [illegible] and sculptures, ask to have [illegible] in their clubs—and then [illegible] proceed to forget all about [illegible].

[illegible] the art collectors of Los An[illegible] buy pictures by Los Angeles [illegible]? Not they! They prefer [illegible] hack-work of the tight Italian [illegible] the sloppy Dutchmen—impossi[illegible] cardinals and impossible mothers[illegible]-over-cradles, all equally [illegible]. Without taste and [illegible] judgment, but still ponder[illegible] posing as lovers of art, they [illegible] the remotest idea whether [illegible] painters are good or bad. [illegible] conclude, of course, that they [illegible] good, as they all live just [illegible] the corner. But the men who [illegible] the pond must be good [illegible]—because they live across the [illegible]. They must be good—in spite [illegible] fact that eminent authorities [illegible] are declaring that the [illegible] is now being produced by [illegible] painters.

[illegible] indifference to the welfare [illegible] producers of beauty does not [illegible] callousness of heart. I [illegible]. Rather from the dis[illegible] of a multiplicity of duties [illegible] important. But I do in[illegible] our professed lovers of art [illegible] the proper perspective [illegible] word "important." Art is [illegible] important a thing as we have [illegible]—much more important [illegible] and tea. We really can't [illegible] without it, though this fact [illegible] still unknown to us. Art [illegible] everywhere, making us [illegible] and happy, forever sepa[illegible] our lives from those led by the [illegible].

[illegible], is it decent that these [illegible]—these magical work[illegible], the painters and sculp[illegible] be denied even the [illegible] to work for us? For their [illegible] very modest—the chance to [illegible] picture-making. Money [illegible] to buy paints and brushes and [illegible] with a little food and cloth[illegible] these things—the [illegible] of their laborious [illegible] they will be overjoyed at [illegible] of keeping on at picture-[illegible].

[illegible] gallery of pictures and [illegible] just opened in Los Ange[illegible] contain nothing that has not [illegible] considered by a jury of [illegible] painters. No un[illegible] picture or sculpture will [illegible]. They will be painted and [illegible] by artists of Southern Cali[illegible]. The gallery will be conducted [illegible] of artists and patrons of [illegible] work purchased here will [illegible] own guarantee of merit. The [illegible] should not be permitted to [illegible] lack of patronage.

[illegible] L. Pogson, Hollywood paint[illegible] landscapes and flowers, recently [illegible] Hawaii to sketch. Under date [illegible] Honolulu, she writes:

"[illegible] the climate here too warm [illegible] sketching, so am painting [illegible] of this country. The [illegible] are wonderful. May [illegible] exhibition when I get home. [illegible] you a Honolulu morning [illegible] Honolulu is not as favored as [illegible] with a good art critic." [illegible] for me? If so, I [illegible].

[illegible] of the Honolulu pa[illegible] is also the society editor, [illegible] of California flowers [illegible] by Mrs. Pogson, which was [illegible] Kilohana Art League [illegible] week, was greatly admired and appreciated by lovers of flowers and art critics, and has been pronounced the finest collection of its kind ever exhibited in Honolulu.

"By special request the art rooms are to be open every afternoon for the coming week, and those who have not been able to attend heretofore, should be glad of this opportunity.

"Mrs. Pogson belongs to that class of gifted artists who paint because they love the work. Her beautiful clear colors and poetical interpretation of flowers is pronounced by critics in the East and abroad the chief charm of her work."

Pictures and Painters.

An exhibition of twenty-one Dutch scenes from the brush of George Debereiner, a Cincinnati painter, will open in the Kanst gallery, No. 642 South Spring street, tomorrow, to continue for two or three weeks. Debereiner has exhibited at the Carnegie in Pittsburgh, at the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts and at the National Academy in New York.

About twenty or thirty new water colors from the brush of Helen Balfour will be exhibited at the Royar gallery, No. 744 South Hill street, during the coming week, beginning tomorrow. They are all California landscapes, a field of art in which Mrs. Balfour has achieved decided success. They will remain on view for several weeks.

C. A. Fries recently paid a two weeks' visit to Alpine, a mountain resort, thirty-three miles from San Diego. He made some excellent studies of the Cuyamacas, one of them being four by six feet in size. Ray Anderson, formerly an art student of Pittsburgh, but now a resident of Alpine, accompanied the San Diego painter on his sketching trip. Both artists praise the locality for its magnificent mountain views.

William P. Silva, a painter from Washington, D. C., was tendered a reception by William Wendt and Julia Bracken Wendt at their Sichel-street studio last Sunday afternoon. Silva was on his way to Carmel, whither he has now gone, and where he will spend the summer in sketching.

BITS OF VERSE.

Vesperal.

I, too, behold the day and know it fair;
I have lain silent where the noon-tide's spell,
Woven of leaves and waters and soft air,
Gives the hushed solitude a peace to keep;
Where gathered hues and fragrances compel
The willing souls along the ways of sleep.

I, too, exult when through a swirl of cloud
The flaming sun thrusts forward like a shield
Whereunder all the hosts of storm are bowed,
And the last cohorts of the smitten rain
Flee down the wide horizons, till the field
Of hard-worn sky be left without a stain.
Yet sweeter than all these the little space
Of slowly mounting twilight, ere the night's Dominion is accomplished, and her face
Shadows the earth with calm; most dear to me
A dying flush of sunset, and veiled lights
Of musing stars above a soundless sea.
—[Charles E. Whitmore, in the June Scribner.

The Stumbler.

If you've faltered by the way,
Stumbled much or gone astray,
Just begin afresh today,
Buckle to it.
For the errors you have made
And the faults that you've displayed,
Needn't leave you sore dismayed,
We all do it.
There is none so wise or great
But has faltered in his gait,
Left the pathway that is straight,
And been humbled.
And in every great man's wake
There is many a mistake,
That his courage tried to shake
When he stumbled.
Just because you've lost one fight
Do not cease to seek the right,
Battle on with all your might,
Fame will crown you;
Yesterday is passed and gone,
Its mistakes don't dwell upon,
If you'll only struggle on
They can't down you.
If you blundered yesterday,
Do not cling to your dismay,
Rise to seek a better way
When you've tumbled.
Keep up your courage, struggle on,
Here's a thought to dwell upon;
You are not the only one
Who has stumbled.
—[Detroit Free Press.

Hail the World, Hail.

Hail to the world—the world all hail,
Come forth and meet Pacific's sun,
Where wealth and beauty shall not fail
To have their noble work well done.
Behold the stately redwood tree,
Behold the flower gardens, rare,
Where orchids bloom exquisitely
And wonderment is everywhere.
The orange tree and apple bloom
That 'rise from lore of virgin sod
Still resonant in twilight's gloom
Bespeak the kindliness of God.
And magic spell of fertile plain
That bursts with treasures for mankind
Proves life will not be lived in vain
With grain to sow and reap and bind.
Upon the pasture's gentle slope
The great herds browse till day shall cease,
Fulfilling e'en the wildest hope
Of joy and happiness and peace.
The mighty hills that meet the sky
Like tow'ring battlements of old
Inspire, at sunset, every eye,
With robe of purple and of gold.
Here Bacchus might be well content
And Sappho trill her grandest lay.
Here is the realm of betterment
For tired humankind, today.
So come, pray, come in countless throng
And tread Pacific's golden sand,
Where fortune wakes the heart to song
And scatters wealth to every hand.
—[G. Norbrey Pleasants in Portland Oregonian.

Sleep.

Sleep has come to longing eyes,
Welcome sleep
Creeping, as the long night dies,
Like shadow, when the skies
Flush, and dawn begins to rise
From the deep.

Now, as though a glad surprise
Held her breath,
Smiling, solemn, still, she lies.
No more sobbing, no more sighs.
Sleep has closed her weary eyes,
Sleep and death.
—Ricardo Stephens in Westminster Gazette.

Through the death of his uncle, Donald MacGraw, in South America, Thomas Ougherston, a machinist in the railroad shops at Depew, N. Y., is reported to have come into a fortune of more than $1,000,000. MacGraw left $14,000,000 to be divided among eleven nieces and nephews.

GAMUT CLUB'S NOVEL PROJECT.

MIDSUMMER JINKS TO BE BLEND OF NATURE AND MELODY.

Mrs. Charles Wellington Rand and Daughter Charm at Mrs. Farnell-Bond's Birthday Party—Recitals Galore Reveal Gratifying Talent in Music Institutions.

With a real sylvan gambol the Gamut Club will celebrate its annual midsummer jinks next Friday and Saturday. The stage for this fantastic event will be set up in the heart of one of the most charming natural groves in California, located near Lankershim and Van Nuys, almost through the Cahuenga pass, and the gambol itself will be Carl Bronson's play, "California."

For the occasion the Gamuters will turn mountaineer, priest and cowboy, sleeping in the open, with a round of campfires, barbecues, dinners and nights under the stars.

Of course, it would not be a Gamut jinks were there not plenty of exquisite music, and club members are already busy rehearsing, under Joe Dupuy the songs and chants of the padres.

"California" is an allegory, having for its theme the coming to this country of the Spanish priests, and their triumph over the existing pagan rites encountered here.

Elaborate and beautiful staging splendid music, and a really inspiring theme, together with the novelty of the entire plan, will make this jinks one long to be remembered by Gamuters. As a matter of fact, the event will be the initial effort toward the club's Greek theater project.

Delightful Musicale.

On Tuesday evening, June 18, a brilliant little company was assembled in the parlors of the Scarborough, upon the invitation of Mrs. Genevieve Farnell-Bond, a birthday occasion. The room was sweet with roses and carnations.

Miss Lilian Rand, who was among the guests, sang in exquisite taste two duets, with her mother, Mrs. Charles Wellington Rand, the two voices melting into a delicious quality of harmony. Miss Rand's voice was highly praised by Bonci when he was on the Coast, and he declared, before going that some day she should sing with him.

Miss Rand also sang "Children, Little Children," a composition by Mrs. Bond, with lyrics by Bertha Hirsh Baruch. It was sung on children's day during the women's convention at Pomona, by a choir of little girls, and aroused most enthusiastic appreciation.

Madame Bertha Amet also sang two ballads by Mrs. Bond, "Kiss Me, You," and "Love Me While You May," with the warmth of dramatic and emotional quality that brought out the spirit of the songs, and gave admirable expression to the fire and timbre of her splendid voice.

Mrs. Bond is at present writing a comedy opera of the better type, which is nearing completion. Klaw & Erlanger staged a gorgeous musical spectacular act in the East of which she was co-author.

THE MUSICAL BIRD OF PREY.

[This is the tale of a Siberian convict told to George Kennan by a well-known collector of Russian folk-songs—V. N. Hartveld of St. Petersburg. Mr. Kennan repeats the story in The Outlook. Prior to Mr. Hartveld's visit to Siberia, in 1908, nobody had ever made any attempt to collect the songs of penal servitude in that country. With great difficulty he succeeded in gaining the confidence of the convicts and inducing them to sing. They suspected some sort of trap to get them into further trouble. When he overcame their suspicions, he succeeded in getting some wonderful songs and melodies, of great novelty and originality. One of them—the "Leg-Fetter March"—which he introduced into his concerts later, had such a poignant effect upon the Russian audiences that a law was passed by the government forbidding any one to play or sing it in public. Even to hum it is now a penal offense. It was on Mr. Hartveld's tour collecting these songs that the following events occurred.]

THE warden and I had been through nearly all the rooms in the large building, and had not been able to find a single prisoner who would sing, or who was willing to admit that he ever had sung. Finally we went to the kamera of the bez-srochni (the life-term convicts,) where we found eighteen men, all murderers, and most of them men who had made homicide a profession or who at least had killed more than once. At the stern command of the guard, "Smeerno! Po mestam!" (Silence! Take your places!) they all sprang to their feet with a great clashing of chains, formed a semi-circular line in front of the sleeping platforms, and, with hands and arms held rigidly at their sides, stood at "attention."

"How do you do, boys?" said the warden, affably.

"We wish you health, Your High Nobility!" shouted the prisoners, hoarsely, in unison, using the prescribed form of response to an official greeting.

"What do you say, boys, to singing a few songs for this gentleman? He has come from St. Petersburg, with the permission of the high authorities, to study your music; and he will be very much obliged if you'll sing for him. How about it?"

Dead silence.

"Don't be suspicious, boys, just because we ask you to do something that is usually forbidden. It's all right, nothing will happen to you. This gentleman is not a chinonik, or a revizor (investigating officer;) he's a musician, and he wants to hear your songs, and write the tunes down on paper, so that he can compare them with the songs and tunes of the prostol narod (common people) in Russia. He has already collected hundreds of songs, and he knows that you have some good ones. Don't be obstinate—sing for him."

Dead silence. The prisoners eyed us sullenly and suspiciously from under their brows, but did not open their lips.

"Semyonof," said the warden, addressing one of them directly, "you must know who the singers are in this kamera—tell us. We are not trying to trap anybody, or get anybody into trouble."

"We are birds of prey, Your High Nobility," replied Semyonof. "Even when we are out of the cage we do not sing—we tear meat."

"It's of no use," said the warden, turning to me; "they won't sing—at least until they have talked it over among themselves. We'll try again later."

We were about to leave the kamera when an old convict with snow-white hair and beard and the face of a patriarch halted us by saying: "There's Klochkof, Your High Nobility. He was bragging only a little while ago that he could sing, and he even used to fool with a balalaika."

As we afterward learned, the convict thus pointed out was not a favorite among his comrades, and they were quite ready to get him into trouble by betraying him.

"Good for Klochkof!" cried the warden. "He's a better man than any of you. Step out, Klochkof!"

The convict thus summoned came forward slowly, rolling a little from side to side as he lifted the heavy chain of his leg-fetters. At a distance of six or eight feet he stopped, raised his eyes from the floor and looked steadily at the warden without the least sign of fear or embarrassment. He was still a young man—35 years of age, perhaps—with a compact athletic figure, a strong but expressionless face, dark opaque eyes, and chestnut-brown hair, long on one side and cut short on the other from the forehead to the nape of the neck.

"The boys say you can sing, Klochkof," said the warden. "Is that so?"

"They're only making game of me, Your High Nobility," replied the convict. "Long ago, when I worked in a factory, I used to pay some attention to such things, but now——"

"Well, don't you do it now?"

A sudden flash of animation gave unwonted fire to the convict's dull eyes.

"What's the use of denying it?" he replied. "I know a few songs."

His companions exchanged glances significantly, as if to say, "Now he's in for it."

"When will you sing for me, Klochkof?" I asked.

"I can't sing without an accompaniment, Your Honor. If I had a balalaika now—perhaps——"

"All right! I'll get a balalaika for you. When will you sing?"

"Whenever Your Honor pleases."

"He can come to the office when we're ready," said the warden. "Let me know when you've looked up a balalaika, and I'll send for him again."

"Who is this Klochkof?" I asked, after we had left the kamera. "What's his history?"

"The devil only knows!" said the warden. "I can tell you more or less about the character of every other man in the prison; but I've never been able to make this one out. He is a quiet, orderly convict; obeys the rules and gives us no trouble; but he seldom speaks, even to his fellow-prisoners."

"How did he become a convict?" I inquired.

"That involves another mystery," replied the warden. "We know what his crime was, but that's all we do know. In a peasant village of the province of Yaroslav he rushed into a church where a wedding was taking place, killed the bridegroom and the bride with two blows of a short-handled ax, and then quietly gave himself up. He refused to explain his act; attempted no justification of himself when he was tried, and made no plea for mercy when he was sentenced to penal servitude for life. He was silent then, and he has been silent ever since. Take him all in all, he's a problematic character. I never before heard him say as much as he has said today."

On the following afternoon I succeeded in finding an old, much-used balalaika in the house of a ticket-of-leave convict of the Free Command, and the warden sent an armed guard to bring Klochkof to the office. In five minutes he appeared, walking clumsily and awkwardly in heavy fetters, whose looped-up chain clashed between his legs at every step. At sight of the balalaika in my hands he straightened himself a little, and a faint flush of color came into his face.

"Here's your balalaika, Klochkof," I said. "We succeeded in finding one."

"Will Your Honor please let me take it?" he asked.

"Certainly! Here," and, stepping forward, I put it into his hands. He took it carefully, pressed it against his body, and stroked it gently, as if he were caressing a pet animal.

"Well," I said, expectantly, "are you going to sing for us now?"

"Why shouldn't I sing," he replied, "when I have a balalaika? But it's years since I held one in my hands. Give me a little time for practice—three days, Your Honor—in three days I'll learn to play it again, and then I'll sing for you."

I consulted the warden in a whisper and he agreed to let Klochkof have the instrument for three days in his kamera. Then, turning to the prisoner, he said: "All right, Klochkof. We'll give you time for practice. Limber up your fingers and show us what you can do. In three days we'll send for you again."

"Grant me one more favor, Your High Nobility!" said the prisoner, imploringly. "I'm afraid that, if I play in the kamera, the boys will laugh at me and make fun of me. They may even do something to hurt the balalaika—break the strings perhaps or smash it altogether. Please put me into solitary confinement, Your High Nobility. Then I can practice in peace."

"I can't do that," said the warden, frowning. "The solitary confinement cells are all occupied."

"Perhaps there's an empty karster (dungeon) where you could put me," suggested Klochkof, diffidently.

"Well, you are a crank!" replied the warden, with a contemptuous laugh. "You're the first prisoner that has ever asked me, as a favor, to shut him up in a karster. Why, you lunatic, you don't seem to realize what a karster is. There's nothing there to sit on, and not a glimmer of light. You won't find it much fun to stand up or sit on a stone floor for three days in pitch darkness, and all alone."

"It's easier to play standing up," replied Klochkof, "and as for loneliness there'll be two of us—the balalaika and I."

"Have it your own way," said the warden.

After dinner on Sunday I went to the prison with my note-book and pencils, and the warden sent for the entombed balalaika player. He was brought to a large empty room adjoining the office, where there was ample air space, and where a writing table had been placed for me. The prisoner came in looking pale and worn, but not at all disheartened or depressed. His hair was in disorder; his long gray coat was soiled and rumpled; his eyes were half-closed to exclude the unfamiliar light, and his person seemed to exhale a faint peculiar odor like that of a damp cellar; but, with these exceptions, he was unchanged. I thought I could see the afterglow of recent excitement or exaltation in his tired face, but his demeanor was quiet and self-possessed. The audience that awaited him consisted of two soldiers armed with rifles, two turnkeys with revolvers in their belts, the warden of the prison and myself. Holding the balalaika to his breast the prisoner bowed to us respectfully and said, "Shall I begin?"

"Whenever you are ready," I replied.

It happened to be a bright, clear August day, and, going to one of the windows where the sunlight fell upon him, Klochkof picked out a plaintive melody on the strings of the balalaika and began to sing. His voice was a mellow tenor not extraordinary in volume or compass, but sweet and sympathetic. At first he did not greatly impress me—he seemed to lack confidence and spirit—but when, with a wonderfully brilliant balalaika accompaniment, he began the popular Siberian exile song, "My Fate," he seemed suddenly to become inspired.

"The man is a born musician!" I said to myself. "He could teach phrazing to many of our best operatic tenors."

But the singing — wonderful as it seemed to me in that place—was surpassed by the extraordinary brilliancy of the accompaniment. The balalaika is a wretched musical instrument at best, but in Klochkof's hands it became a mandolin played by an Italian master. His technique was something marvelous.

When the gifted convict finished his last song I grasped his hand, and, in my enthusiasm, thanked him almost effusively.

"Please get the warden to let me keep the balalaika a little longer," he whispered to me, while I was still holding his hand. "Persuade him to leave it with me a day or two more."

I made the desired request, but the warden declared it absolutely inadmissible. "It is against all rules," he assured me, "and I might have to answer for it to an inspector."

"Bring me the balalaika," he said to Klochkof.

Then there happened something that I still remember as astounding, tragic and almost terrible. The quiet, submissive undemonstrative convict suddenly became as fierce and menacing as a tigress about to be deprived of her young. His face lost every trace of color, his eyes seemed to fill with blood and fire, and, holding the balalaika to his breast with one hand, he threw himself into a fighting attitude, and cried, hoarsely and fiercely: "I'll never give it up. You can't have it. I'll kill the first man that tries to get it!"

I was absolutely paralyzed with amazement.

"Take the balalaika away from the prisoner," said the warden in a cold, stern voice.

The soldiers and turnkeys, with their hands on their weapons, sprang toward the defiant convict, who stood motionless, with murder in his eyes, breathing heavily and clasping the balalaika to his breast. Before they reached him he realized, even in his paroxysm of furious passion, that he could not successfully resist four armed men. Dropping the balalaika, he stood for an instant looking at it with an expression of wild grief and misery in his face, and then, throwing himself on the floor, burst into a storm of convulsive sobs.

The sobs and articulate cries of the prisoner finally became so wild and hysterical that the warden sent for the prison surgeon, but it was ten minutes before we could get the weeping and distraught man quiet. When at last he had recovered self-command, I thanked him again for singing, and told him that I should leave five rubles for him at the prison office.

"Oh, Your Honor," he said, through his tears, "I don't want money for that. Just let me take the balalaika once more—for a minute!"

I gave it to him. He stroked it caressingly, pressed his lips to it twice, and then surrendered it. As the guards were about to take him away he turned again and said: "Please, Your Honor, grant me one favor more. When you get back to Russia you may find yourself some time in the province of Yaroslav. If you ever do, please go to the village church of Romanof-Borisoglebsk, light a candle before the portrait of the Holy Mother of God that hangs on the left side of the chancel, and have a mass said for the repose of the soul of—of—Marya Ivanovna!"

He spoke the name with a half-strangled sob, and seemed to be on the point of breaking down again; but in a moment he recovered self-control, and, bowing low to me, said: "Good-by, Your Honor. God grant you a safe return to your home!"

The guard threw open the door, the prisoner went out, and the clashing of his leg-fetter chain grew fainter and fainter as he marched down the corridor to the kamera of the bez-srochni. I never saw him again.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

Rear-Admiral Eugene H. C. Leutze has relinquished command of Brooklyn navy yard, and turned the station over to his successor, Capt. Albert Gleaves. Admiral Leutze retires permanently from active duty after forty-eight years' service. Capt. Gleaves is not far behind him, having thirty-nine years to his credit.

After connection with the institution for many years, Rear-Admiral Alfred T. Mahan and Capt. William McCarty Little have retired from the United States War College. The law which permitted retired naval officers to do active duty has expired, and the college must lose the services of these officers. Rear-Admiral Mahan has been president of the war college at various times for about five years. On October 31, 1908, orders were issued for him to revise and bring up to date the lectures on naval strategy and other important service subjects. Capt. Little has been a lecturer on the war game, tactical and strategic, at which he is an expert.

Rear-Admiral Sidney A. Staunton has been placed on the retired list on account of age. At present he is the naval member of the special commission which is visiting European capitals to obtain representations of the foreign armies and navies at the approaching Panama-Pacific Exposition. His retirement will result in the promotion of Capt. Robert M. Doyle, commandant of the Norfolk navy yard to be rear-admiral; Commodore V. O. Chase, to be captain; Lieutenant-Commander Yates Stirling, to be commander, and Lieut. Sinclair Gannon, to be lieutenant-commander.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. Maggie Carter, of Wakefield, Mass., started in the milk business nine years ago with one cow. Today she owns a herd of fifty Jerseys. Her daily milk route includes six small towns and more than 500 regular customers. Mrs. Carter personally supervises all the details of the business.

Miss Alberta Claire has made a horseback journey from Sheridan, Wyo., to Philadelphia—8100 miles. She started on September 10 and reached Penn's city last Tuesday. She first rode down the coast to Los Angeles and beyond; then she struck across the continent. She was in the saddle every day; it wasn't a side saddle.

Miss Emily McVea, who has been dean of women at the University of Cincinnati for the last two years, is the newly elected president of the Cincinnati Woman's Club, an organization that interests itself in all that pertains to the well-being of women. Miss McVea is so successful in her own work that much is anticipated for the club.

STATESMEN.

Clad in blue overalls, Charles W. Fairbanks, one time Vice-President of the United States, won first prize last week for posting a bill on a billboard at a grand picnic of Hoosiers at Culver Military Academy, Culver, Ind. One thousand Hoosiers saw him capture the honors and they saw George Ade come in a poor second, while third place went to the Rev. John Cavanaugh, president of Notre Dame University. Gov. Marshall, John T. McCutcheon, and John M. Studebaker were in the contest, but scarcely classed as "also rans," compared with the tall winner. Mr. Fairbanks posted up a huge caricature of himself. The prize for victory was a silk hat, commonly called in Indiana a "plug hat."

A gold button of membership in Newsboys' Union, No. 9077, of Boston, was presented to Curtis Guild, American Ambassador to Russia, before his departure for Bremen. The presentation was made on behalf of the newsboys who are Mr. Guild's fellow-members in the union.

The birth of his fifteenth child probably gives Representative John M. Hamilton of the Fourth District of West Virginia the largest family of any member of the lower house of Congress. Fourteen of the Representative's children are living. The latest member is a daughter.

Fox Lore of Japan.

[The Strand:] The fox holds a place in Japanese legend much worse than that given him in the folk lore of Europe, unenviable as that is. His attributes go far beyond mere cunning and inhuman guile; he is a wizard of the blackest type, wielding demoniac powers, master of all the evil magic that can do hurt to man. Foxes enter into demoniac possession of human beings, and work all the wickedness, and, more, that was ascribed to the witches and warlocks of the middle ages in Europe. They live for many centuries, and at the age of 1000 years they become white, acquire nine tails, and have enormous powers. Every fox is to be dreaded, but the worst of all is the man-fox, which can assume the appearance, voice and manner of any human being at a moment's notice. The extermination of all such creatures was a sacred duty of every knight-errant in ancient fable.

ORPHEUM ONE YEAR OLD.

many ways. The theater itsef is no small factor in this respect. An absolutely fireproof structure, of great outward beauty and unique among buildings because of its architectural use of color and entablatured statutary, it is at the same time the acme of comfort. Its wideness and shallowness brings about a closeness and intimacy between audience and performer that makes for each one's best effort and keenest enjoyment. Every seat affords a fine view, and is perfect for hearing. Comfort is looked after to the last degree; the automatic regulation of the temperature has been tested alike by cold and hot days, and found perfection. The auxiliary rooms, the smoking and lounge room for men, the beautiful French parlors for women, the fine stage equipment and sumptuous dressing rooms, all have been large elements in the betterment of theatrical pleasure before and behind the curtain. The magnificent orchestra under the Frankenstein baton has proved a never failing delight with its preliminary concerts of symphonic nature, and its fine support to each act. The utmost detail seems to have been watched and perfected, till attending the Orpheum brings one into an atmosphere of actual satisfaction.

Notable, too, is the record of performances and performers. Some of the most brilliant and illustrious names in present day theatrical history have adorned its bills, among them Ada Reeve, Cecilia Loftus, Charles Kellogg, Theodore Roberts, Valerie Bergere, Fregoleska, McIntyre & Heath, Mary Norman, Blanche Walsh, Katherine Grey, Louise Dresser, Walter Hampden, Dr. Ludwig Wullner, the Four Fords, Nat M. Willis, Lily Lena, and so on. Many strong plays have been presented; big musical and animal acts—in fact, the high standard of most of the bills has ranked well up with the house in which they have played. And with a list ahead embracing the Tiller ballets, Florence Roberts, May Tully, the Mountain Ash Male Choir, the two Belasco-Beck productions, "Mme. Butterfly" and "The Drums of Oude," the Graham Moffatt players, the Elliott-Savonas, Cecil Lean and Florence Holbrook, Edna Luby, Sarah Bernhardt, Ethel Barrymore, the return of Ada Reeve and Cecilia Loftus, and more of the same character, it would seem that the era of the immediate future was to be even greater, during this, its second year on Broadway, than was even the first.

The new theater has been a success from the start. The records show that, performance for performance, the attendance has ever been greater than was the case for a like show at the Spring street house. The much greater capacity has availed usually to permit one to obtain a seat during the later hours—a condition never possible before—and this has added to the popularity of the theater.

So the Orpheum starts its second year, with congratulations from all, in its new house; with every prospect for advance in quality and style of offerings, and every good wish from the thousands who daily throng its doors.

OVER THE SEA.

Pierre Loti has consented to leave his retreat in the Pyrenees and go to New York early in September to superintend rehearsals and be present at the first performance of his great play, "The Daughter of Heaven." Loti, who understands English, but does not speak it, has never been in New York. His only recollection of America is his visit to San Francisco thirty years ago, when he was a young naval officer.

Prof. Carl von Noorden, a celebrated member of the Medical Faculty of Vienna University, who is going to New York in September at the invitation of the Post-Graduate Medical School, to deliver a series of lectures, will also go to Washington to take part in the International Hygienic Congress as the official delegate of the Austrian government.

Crown Prince Frederick William has made his debut as an author. "From My Hunting Diary," now being printed, describes the Crown Prince's hunting experiences in Germany and abroad. Many photographs will appear in the book, some of them by the Crown Princess.

Suitor: Oh, no, not at all. In fact, that's one reason why I've been so long about it. Her money seemed a hindrance to me.

Banker: Yet you're quite willing to take the hindrance, I suppose?

THE NEW BOOKS and the BOOK NEWS

By Willard Huntington Wright

THE TAINTED 400.

[illegible] Anonymous. Richard G. Badger, Boston.

PIDGIE'S astonishment knew no bounds when, in the wee small hours of the morning, she was awakened from a sound, delightful slumber by the impression that somebody was looking at her. It was following a very select dance given at an exclusive country club where only the most exalted members of high society were permitted to foregather, and, as Pidgie retired late that night, she little suspected what was in store for her. When she became aware that someone was looking at her she "opened her eyes with a start." There, beside her, stood no less an aristocratic personage than Capt. Jack [illegible]. He had entered her room, (why had the door been left unlocked?) and before Pidgie could raise herself on her elbow Jack had her in his arms, covering her face and lips with kisses. Pidgie struggled desperately and was about to scream; but the "rising cry died unborn in her throat and the fear of scandal choked it unuttered." Pidgie was nothing if not discreet. Her virtue, indeed, might be taken from her but her reputation was sacred. This, by the way, is a way which people who are in high society have.

Out of respect for my young readers I suppose it is no more than fair to inform them that Pidgie, though young, was a widow—a young and [illegible] widow—who had been precipitated into the ranks of the unsullied elite much against her will, and who wrote scathing letters to her friend Baba, exposing the lustful doings of her "set." In fact the book is comprised of a series of these letters whose moral intent is to duly warn those who are thinking of having their genealogies corrected and of breaking into ultra society. It is a blinding, shocking picture which Pidgie paints in these letters. They read like the report of a commission on the investigation of vice. Were it not for the "Mrs. Colonels" and the hyphenated names, for the finger bowls and bridge parties, one would suspect this book of being a chronicle of the doings of the demi-monde; but we are assured that these confessions are accurate and painstaking presentation of the social sins of our [illegible] aristocracy.

But to go back to Pidgie and Jack. As I have stated, Pidgie was discretion itself, and rather than arouse the other members of the select house party, merely bruised and exhausted herself in Jack's embrace "like a bird in iron hands." Jack's handling of the widow was very rough. She began to pant, but he would not even permit this, rendering her "breathless" with his ardent caresses. For a whole page she struggled valiantly, but at the end her faculty of muscular action was paralyzed. Jack had rendered her "breathless and numbed." She lay absolutely passive, incapable of movement," while Jack "rained upon her long kisses." Though breathless, paralyzed, broken, limp, crushed, incapable of muscular action, still she could hear his whispering voice as he said, "My love, my dearest, my own darling." And then she began to feel "the kisses as each wandered and alighted on lips or cheek and became more slow and soft, lingered lightly on forehead, brow, eyelids and temples."

It was a warm evening.

Pidgie's predicament was a painful one. It was indelicate as well. But Jack whispered passionately, "There is no danger, darling, no one can possibly hear us for this room is the last office off the corridor and [illegible] next door." Pidgie realized [illegible] helpless is mere woman. As she herself penned it: "I felt like a wild animal securely trapped, enclosed on all sides. I could not [illegible] for the scandal would be terrible. I dare not expostulate with him or raise my voice. I was absolutely helpless and bereft of all de[illegible]

"Look at me," commanded Jack. Pidgie looked—

[illegible] in Himmel—or rather, Mong [illegible]

Jack was clothed only in a blue [illegible], over which he had thrown a white burnous. Pidgie was [illegible], and well she might be. This was a proper costume in which to [illegible] a lady—even in high society. He did not even wear slippers. But—Oh, the shame of it! [illegible] frail flesh—Pidgie "could not help realizing how very handsome he was." His powerful neck [illegible] a column and the white [illegible] "his dark, fine-looking flashing eyes." As Pidgie was admiring him, said he, "At last we are heart to heart [illegible] to say us 'nay.'" An eloquent improper remark. Its eloquence [illegible] Pidgie. "Poor boy," [illegible] "It must have been [illegible] him to want me so."

[illegible] point another cloudburst of [illegible] forth from Jack which [illegible] thrilled" the recumbent [illegible] held her close, and though [illegible] tender and caressing," she [illegible] "the iron muscles roll under the white skin, drawing her [illegible] broad chest." Let [illegible] explain: "Yes, truly, a woman [illegible] is within the arms of [illegible] who loves her. I feel [illegible] yet so secure, within those [illegible] were to be my haven and [illegible] death do us part." [illegible] Pidgie wanted to know if [illegible] her, and he answered her [illegible] of tender caresses." [illegible] next page he again "re-[illegible] caresses." (They were [illegible].)

[illegible] argument ensued, and [illegible] was still unsettled when [illegible] avalanche of caresses broke [illegible] Wrote Pidgie to Baba: "My [illegible] ached with the desire of [illegible]." Then her brain reeled [illegible] senses began to leave her. [illegible] not quite. She leaped [illegible] bed, wrapped her gown [illegible] and bade him depart. Then [illegible] very ungentlemanly. He [illegible] her and said that she had [illegible] with him. "You posed [illegible] unapproachable divinity, [illegible] aloof and high on [illegible] pedestal! Pah! he [illegible] The lady was sobered. [illegible] skilled in the subtleties of [illegible] sarcasm, she delivered [illegible] cutting remarks: "My [illegible] are perfectly ludicrous [illegible] ridiculous figure. I [illegible] immediate exit of this [illegible] bath, for which [illegible] is most appropriate." [illegible] in view of the preceding pages, her advice seemed almost inspired. It is not stated whether or not Jack followed it, but, at any rate, he withdrew gracefully from the lady's boudoir.

The scene was a heated one and it teaches a great moral to all young ladies in high society, namely: Upon retiring, be sure to lock the door.

The anonymous writer of these vermilion chronicles is no match for the eminent Elinor Glynn; but let it be admitted for the sake of justice, that there are passages to be encountered here which will inflame the imagination and put rubber into the soul. There are no rarified reaches of passional indulgence such as we had at Lake Lucerne, and there is a depressing moral attached to the expositions here encountered.

MERRICK STORIES.

WHISPERS ABOUT WOMEN. By Leonard Merrick. Mitchell Kennerley, New York.

ANOTHER volume of short stories by Leonard Merrick is ready for American consumption. Last year Mitchell Kennerley imported Merrick from England and almost immediately America dropped Arnold Bennett and transferred its fickle affections to this other Englishman.

The stories in "Whispers About Women" are scored in the same key as those in "The Man Who Understood Women," and the standard of this former volume is here well sustained. Tricotrin, that improvident and delightful poet of the Latin quarter, is again encountered in the present contes. In fact, the most characteristic story of that young Parnassian is the ninth chronicle here included, namely, "Tricotrin Entertains." At first it seemed that this impecunious bard was on the threshhold of momentary success, and we had begun to lose heart, for to supply Tricotrin with money would be to lose him for all time. But the inauspicious return of Colette Aubray and the discovery of Tricotrin's uncle in this lady's beautiful bed blasted all the hopes which Tricotrin and Pitou had harbored.

If there is any change in the present volume of stories, from the former, it is in the influence of the French story tellersand especially of de Maupassant—which has undoubtedly taken hold of Merrick. At times we would wish that this influence was not so strong, for several of his stories, especially "The Infidelity of Monsieur Noulens," seems almost a translation. But if Merrick has absorbed French literature, either by direct intent or by unconscious osmosis, it is the finer qualities of this literature which characterize his work, namely; A carefulness and grace, a philosophical detachment, and that remarkable gift which as yet the Anglo-Saxon writer has possessed only in rare instances, namely: Suggesting psychological traits rather than explaining them and permitting omissions to do the work of intricate imaginative writing.

I believe the reason that Merrick's stories are so convincing is because they suggest rather than explain.

SHIRLEY'S LETTERS.

CORRESPONDENCE OF WILLIAM SHIRLEY. Edited by Dr. Charles H. Lincoln. The Macmillan Company.

PERHAPS the publication of the correspondence of William Shirley will raise the question, in the minds of many people, as to who William Shirley was. If they should look at the first volume of Dr. Lincoln's work (it takes two large books to contain the correspondence) they would find that William Shirley was one of the few popular English Colonial Governors. Born in Suffolk in 1694, he came to America in 1731, where, ten years later, he became Governor of Massachusetts.

His work in this country was confined to no single line. He was identified with many civic reforms. He was commander in chief of the British forces during the year following Braddock's defeat and death, in 1765; he was a diplomat, a man who knew how to work with the provincial leaders and yet how to carry out successfully the orders of the King. It is to give a clear view of William Shirley in all of his many activities that Dr. Lincoln has collected some 300 manuscripts and other letters of William Shirley which are arranged in the body of the text and over 50 additional pages are printed or referred to in the accompanying foot-notes.

Besides these, many letters other than those of Shirley have been included in the main text—among them a few from his wife, "a woman of no mean ability"—making a total of over 450 manuscripts printed. The importance of this series of letters sheds new light upon an interesting period in the history of this country. Probably the whole atmosphere of the times is better reflected through the correspondence of contemporaries more than by any other means.

The "Correspondence" is the third in the series of "Letters of Statesmen Prominent in the Colonial History of America," published under the auspices of the Union Society of Colonial Dames, the others being the "Letters of William Pitt" and the "Letters of Richard Henry Lee."

LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

LEE'S PRICELESS RECIPES. Compiled by Dr. N. T. Oliver. Laird & Lee, Chicago.

FOR 25 cents (or, if you are fastidious and prefer a cloth binding with red edges, 60 cents,) anyone may be put in possession of 3000 secrets for the home, farm, laboratory and work-shop. This abridged encyclopedia of receipts (admitted by the publishers to be a "gold mine,") contains formulas and methods for nearly every department of human endeavor from the simple and universally understood practice of making tea to the more complicated and far less known practice of concocting inks. With this book it is possible for one to manufacture imitations of gold and silver, powders, paints, soaps, champagne, cider, cement, mucilage, skin preparations, poultices, stomachics, ointments and whitewash. This remarkable handbook tells one the cure for sweeney and cracked heels and gives the legal rate of interest in the State of New Jersey. It informs one how to get a broken cork out of a bottle; how to make hair grow upon the bald head, and how to remove tapeworms. Really an astonishing book!

But, perhaps, that for which the book will be invaluable, that for which it will outlive the fame of Jenner and Pasteur, is six lines which appear on page 46, entitled "A Sure Cure for Smallpox." Here, indeed, is a boon to humanity. No more vaccinations, no more hospitals, no more doctors' fees. All that one has to do to overcome the most virulent forms of this obnoxious disease is to dissolve one ounce of cream of tarter in a pint of boiling water "to be drank when cold at intervals."

We are assured that this simple device "is never failing." Here,, indeed, is news for the medical fraternity, for those poor plodding bacteriologists in the Rockefeller Institute. What Ehrlich or Welch is in our midst unknown? What pharmacopoeic mullah is writing anonymous prescriptions for this simple volume of ricipes? What Brobdingnagian of medical experimentation is effacing his glory in agate type? What Mishnah and Gemara of modern therapeutics chooses obscurity for the voicing of his curative wares? Some one should drag this modest Hippocrates out into the open, and heap upon him the honors which he so richly deserves.

Will Levington Comfort,
Author of "Fate Knocks at the Door."

LITERARY GOSSIP.

"Letters to My Son," which caused considerable discussion when published anonymously by Houghton Mifflin Company, two years ago, is now announced to have been written by Mrs. Winifred James, a well-known English author.

The crowds that swept like an irresistible flood into the halls in which Dickens lectured, have become a legend, and the whole story of Dickens's "theatrical" triumphs is recalled by a group of passages from the hitherto unpublished letters which Sturgis & Walton Company brought out at the Centenary time under the title "Charles Dickens as Editor." Of the Glasgow lecture or reading Dickens writes:

"Meantime the crowd outside still forced the turbid stream in, and I began to have some general idea that the platform would be driven through the wall behind it, and the wall into the street."

Those, who could not get seats, became uproarious, complaining they were ill-treated. Ruffled gentlemen, with full-dressed ladies on their arms, their clothing torn to ribbons, clung to columns and took refuge in corners. At length, Mr. Dickens invited as many as could to come to the stage. No sooner was the stage filled than the "sides" roared because they could not see. The situation was saved by Dickens himself.

"At least half the people were ladies, and I then proposed to them to sit down or lie down. Instantly they all dropped into recumbent groups, respected chief in the center. I don't know what it looked like most—a battlefield—an impossible tableau—a gigantic picnic. There was one very pretty girl lying down on her side all night, and holding on to one leg of my table. So I read . . . and they ended with a great burst of cheering."

Among the bits of startling information that spice "The Life Story of J. Pierpont Morgan, not the least surprising is that of the part Mr. Morgan played in the Cleveland bond-issue of 1895. Those, who read the book will never forget the picture of Mr. Morgan, quietly playing cards in the room of his Washington hotel, and smoking, as always, as he awaited the call for help which he knew would, unwillingly but inevitably, come from President Cleveland before the long night was out. And come the call did, and it was Mr. Morgan's resourcefulness that saved the country from disastrous financial discredit in that great crisis. There are few more dramatic stories in American financial history than that of Mr. Morgan and the 1895 bond issue.

If New York and Boston are the literary capitals during the winter, it looks as if Carmel, Cal., and Cornish, N. H., are the capitals during the summer. Mrs. Grace MacGowan Cooke, after a few weeks in New York, has returned to Carmel, where dwell such lights as Harry Leon Wilson, George Sterling, Fred Bechdolt, Perry Newberry and Alice MacGowan, with Mary Austin, James Hopper and Jack London as frequent visitors.

At the same time Percy MacKaye is leaving Boston for his home at Cornish, where, in a radius of a few miles, live Augustus Saint Gaudens' brother and son, Maxfield and Stephen Parrish, Winston Churchill, Kenyon Cox, Louis Shipman and others.

Both small towns, both beginning with "C"—like a book by Churchill—there seems to be some bond, though one is Yankee and the other is Spanish, between Cornish and the old Carmel Mission. Mr. MacKaye does form a sort of bond, for he has lived in both, and he has a rancho down the coast from Carmel.

Sir Sidney Lee, the Shakespearian scholar, according to a recent cable dispatch, is said to have incurred the displeasure of King George through the biography of the late King Edward, which Sir Sidney wrote. The life of King Edward, it is alleged, depicts him as far from being the master of statecraft he has been popularly considered. Sir Sidney, best known in this country through the new edition of Shakespeare's works, often referred to as the Sidney Lee Shakespeare, stands in the forefront of those scholars who try to discover the facts of Shakespeare's life and to estimate his work with a conscientiousness equal to that of scientists. There was a time when it would have been impossible to treat Shakespeare otherwise than in a spirit of profound adulation; but nowadays critical scholarship and intellectual honesty are less easily quenched by literary traditions or by reference for royalty.

The sixth number of the Home Progress Magazine, issued by Houghton Mifflin Company for the Home Progress Reading Courses, contains ani illustrated article by Mrs. Sylvester Baxter on "Cleanliness and Health," which tells housekeepers how, easily and simply, to keep their houses in perfect sanitary condition. Another excellent article is, "Teaching Good Manners to Children," by Mary Willard Keyes, a school teacher of wide experience. Miss Keyes writes from a new point of view. A third leading article is, "The Home Kindergarten," by Alice Perkins Coville. This charmingly written paper is especially interesting in that it tells how a mother who, before her marriage, was a kindergartner, made use of kindergarten methods in her nursery. Every kindergarten and every mother will like this article. The editorials, the topics for discussions, the list of books for additional reading, and the various departments are even better than usual. This number of the magazine ends the "Home Progress Reading Course on the Health, the Mental Training and the Moral Guidance of Children." All members of the course who have completed their work in it will receive an examination paper. This paper is drawn up in a way that suggests a callege examination paper .It is one of the several unique features of the home progress movement. Next year, the home progress course will be on a different subject. The success of the course this year has led the publishers to double the size of the Home Progress Magazine and subscribers for next year will receive twice as much as they received this year. All the old features of the magazine will be retained and new departments will be added.

WITH THE AUTHORS

During a recent trip through the Southwest, Emerson Hough visited White Oaks, N. M., where he lived as a youth just out of college. He says the little stone building in which he began his law practice was the only familiar landmark he saw.

Harry H. Knibbs, author of "Lost Farm Camp," has just completed a second novel. "Lost Farm Camp," has found many enthusiastic readers among lovers of the Maine woods, as well as among those who enjoy a good, vigorous out-door story, wherever the scene is laid. Mr. Knibbs has gone from one corner of the United States to the other, from Eastern Maine to Los Angeles, where he is now located.

Scott Nearing, a specialist in sociology, and allied subjects, has recently come out with the statement that the United States is the most favorable land for the development of a super-race. He gives as one of his reasons for this belief the fact that the women of America have been particularly emancipated and that the emancipation of woman is one of the great forces which may be directed toward the improvement of race qualities. This question of woman's position in the world, her past, her present, and her future, is dealt with quite extensively in Mr. Nearing's new book, "Woman and Social Progress."

After her sensational trial and acquittal, Madame Steinheil left Paris and took refuge in London, whence she went about in quest of a tranquil and pleasant rural retreat. This she found, and in it she settled down to write the thrilling and absorbing "My Memoirs," which have just been published here, in England, and in France. With her live her daughter and her son-in-law, who is an Italian and an artist of promise.

An appropriate memorial to the late Vaughan Kester has recently been placed in Pohick Church, Fairfax county, Virginia, by his mother.

This old Episcopalian Church was built some years before the Revolutionary War, on a site chosen by George Washington. George Mason of Gunston Hall, the author of the Virginia Bill of Rights and the Constitution of Virginia, and a member of the convention which framed the Constitution of the United States, was the actual builder of Pohick Church. Daniel French, the contractor, dying, Mason, as his executor, completed the work. With Mason and Washington on the vestry at this time was George William Fairfax of Belvoir. After the Revolutionary War and the death of the builders, Pohick Church declined and gradually fell into neglect and decay.

The ravages of the Civil War, when troops were not infrequently quartered within its historic walls, completed the ruin of the interior. Some years after the close of the war a partial restoration of the interior of the church was begun, but it is only within recent years that the church has been carefully restored, from the old plans and drawings, which were fortunately preserved, to its appearance in the time of Washington, Mason and the Fairfaxes. The old square, high-backed pews with seats running round the three sides have been restored. Many of these pews have been restored as memorials to friends or relatives. Washington owned two pews; one of these has been restored by the Mt. Vernon Ladies' Association, the other by members of the Washington family. The Fairfax pew has been restored by Lord Fairfax and other representatives of the family. Gen. Custis Lee has restored a few as a memorial to his great-great-grandmother, Martha Washington. Miss Sharpe of Woodlawn mansion has restored a pew as a memorial to Nellie Custis, Washington's adopted daughter and the first mistress of Woodlawn.

The name of Parson Weems, the first historian of Washington, is also perpetuated in this way in the church in which he sometimes officiated. One of the two pews owned by George Mason of Gunston Hall has been restored by his descendants, the other by Vaughan Kester's brother, the owner of Gunston Hall and a vestryman of Pohick Church.

Next the latter pew is the pew which has been made a memorial to Vaughan Kester. This pew is near the chancel and was originally set aside for the use of "vestrymen and merchants" and was not sold. For his two pews George Mason paid fourteen pounds, eleven shillings and eight pence each. Washington paid for his pew sixteen pounds. Later he purchased the adjoining pew of Lund Washington for thirteen pounds ten shillings. Washington and Mason took down the partitions which divided their pews, thus making single pews of them, double the size of the others in the church.

Vaughan Kester had been intimately connected with the neighborhood about Pohick, having spent many years at Woodlawn and at Gunston Hall. He wrote "The Fortunes of the Landrays" while living at Woodlawn, and it was at Gunston Hall that he wrote "The Prodigal Judge" and "The Just and the Unjust." It was at Gunston Hall that he died. The Rev. Dr. Meade, the present rector of Pohick Church, was a warm friend of the late author. Doctor Meade is a grandson of the celebrated Bishop Meade, whose invaluable "Old Churches and Families in Virginia" is quoted more and more as time goes on. It is not generally known that Bishop Meade's father, Col. Meade, was intrusted by Gen. Washington with the very distasteful duty of directing the execution of the unfortunate Maj. Andre. Dr. Meade is also a first cousin of Thomas Nelson Page.

Marie Van Vorst is the daughter of the Hon. Hooper C. Van Vorst of the Supreme Court of New York. She has lived abroad, principally in Italy and France, for several years. Her new book is an intimate study of Italian life.

Edgar Jepson, author of "Pollyooly," may come to America this fall. He is greatly interested in automobiles and is anxious to see one of the big American races.

George Randolph Chester, creator of Johnny Gamble, is now in California, where he expects to buy a home. He will spend some time looking about before deciding on a location.

BOOK NEWS.

An interesting new edition this week is "Home Life in Germany," which was originally published in editions and has been for some little time out of print in this country. The book is the work of Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick and is a particularly happy and intimate picture of the day to day existence of the children, the students, the servants, the men and the women of Germany. Mrs. Sidgwick also touches upon the schools, education in general, upon the expenses of living, upon typical German customs, their summer resorts and their holidays. The volume is one which people who have visited Germany will like as much as those whose information about the country has been obtained hitherto from dry, uninteresting tomes. Mrs. Sidgwick's book does not in the least resemble these.

"The American Library Annual, for 1911-12," recently issued from the office of the Publishers' Weekly in succession to the "Annual Library Index," besides being an index to current events of 1911, bibliography, necrology and other usual features, schedules in selective lists 1512 American public libraries, and eighty-two Canadian public libraries, mostly those of 10,000 or more volumes; 311 leading libraries in other countries of over 100,000 volumes each, 650 publishers issuing books in 1911, 1283 private collectors of books and 3500 booksellers. These figures illustrate the extent of development in the library and book field, but it should be noted that they are purposely selective, and not comprehensive. In the case of the libraries, the name of the librarian, the number of volumes contained, the revenue for the past year, etc., are included.

It is reported that before Miss Schauffler's "The Goodly Fellowship" was published the author remarked that she did not see where there were more than a dozen people who would buy it. This is becoming modesty and it is very attractive when viewed by later developments, for "The Goodly Fellowship" has just gone into its third edition. The book has steadily gained, too, for the first edition lasted about two weeks, the second, only half that time.

Harper & Brothers announce that they are sending the following books to press this week for reprinting: "The Odd Number" by Guy de Maupassant; "The Friendly Stars" by Martha Evans Martin; "Chrystal, Jack & Co." by Kirk Munroe; and "Ten Boys from Dickens" by Kate D. Sweetser.

Nora Archibald Smith's little book, called "The Home-Made Kindergarten," is meant for the guidance of mothers who, being unable for one reason or another to place their young children in kindergartens, would be glad to use kindergarten methods in their home trainings. Miss Smith shows how this may be done, making a very clear presentation of a scheme of instruction that can easily be followed by intelligent mothers.

That the new republic of China is devoting considerable attention to the study of international law is evident from the fact that a large order for General George B. Davis's book, "Elements of International Law," has just been received in this country from St. John's University in Shanghai.

A new book on boats and boating has just appeared with the name of Charles G. Davis, consulting editor of the magazine "Motor Boat," appearing on its title page. All phases of the sport are considered, many diagrams are shown, and the section devoted to power craft has evidently received special attention. It seems very complete. The book, which is called "Harper's Boating Book for Boys," is designed primarily for the use of boys, but it is a safe guess that in many instances it will interest the father of the boy as well.

Messrs. L. C. Page & Company announce new printings of the following books: Lindsay's "Panama and the Canal Today," fourth edition; Mason's "The Spell of Italy," fifth edition; Elliott's "A Texas Blue Bonnet," fifth edition; Abbott's "Naomi of the Island," third edition; Kimball's "The Dominant Chord," third edition; Roberts' "Rayton; A Backwood's Mystery," third edition.

Admirers of Sir Walter Scott will find a world of interest in the beautiful collection of photographs which is being exhibited from time to time in the leading public libraries of the country. These photographs comprise artistic views of the country of which Scott wrote in poetry and prose. They were taken by Mr. Charles S. Olcott, of Houghton Mifflin Co., who went to Scotland a year ago for the specific purpose of picturing with his camera the scenes which furnished the inspiration of the great Scottish author for use in a forthcoming edition of Scott's complete works. One set of photographs has recently been on exhibition in the Indianapolis Public Library and this week is at the Boston Public Library. It will be at the Worcester Public Library in July, and at the Providence Public Library in September. Another set has been on exhibition in Seattle and Tacoma, and will go to Portland, Spokane and Vancouver.

"The Day of the Saxon," a new book by Gen. Homer Lea, author of "The Valor of Ignorance," is published this week by the Harpers. This is a warning to the Saxon race against the dangers of national over-confidence, fancied security, and neglect of sane preparation for any possible contingency. The author points out definitely the perils that threaten the survival of the race, and explains what he considers necessary for its preservation.

The Century Company now announces June 22 as the definite date of issue of W. Morgan Shuster's "The Strangling of Persia." This chronicle, by the ex-Treasurer-General of Persia, of his experience in Persia during the stormy eight months when he fought in vain to help Persia to her place among nations, has the startling facts substantiated by the British and Persian state papers, supplemented by a private diary kept by the writer during the entire period of his sojourn in Persia.

DR. MONTESSORI.

There is a schoolteacher in Italy who might outrank even such social literary lions as Gabriele d'Annunzio as an attraction in the most exclusive and elegant salons of Rome, if she wished, but she doesn't wish. The Queen of Italy, Baronesses and Marchesae call her friend, but she prefers her quiet study to their receptions. She is Dr. Maria Montessori, the originator of the Montessori method of educating children.

Whenever possible, she declines the invitations that to most women, however scholarly, would be welcome and flattering. Once in a while, she is dragged out to tea with the wife of some foreign ambassador, perhaps by an enthusiastic American student, but she prefers to sit silent, listening to the chatter of the teacher-pupil, and the titled patron of education. For not only is she a bit shy—though a person of a genuinely commanding presence—but her hobby is work, not talking about it.

In her scholarship, she is a rather unusual combination of thoroughness and enthusiasm. She neither dries up nor becomes a mere popularizer. Something of the same paradox is seen in the fact that, intensely though she loves to see the children of her school at play, she herself does not care to play. Like most Italian women, physician though she is, she knows nothing wathever of such sports as tennis and golf. When she is worn out by her ceaseless attention to training teachers and directing many schools, she slips away to the gray-green olive groves and the dreamy convent gardens of the Grotto Terrata, near Tivoli.

Her reading is broad and by no means all Italian. She loves and often quotes William Wordsworth; she knows modern Italian, French, Russian, and German literature. Curiously enough, though she is a true daughter of the Catholic church, she is very fond of Nietzsche.

She is not married, but definitely devoted to her work alone. Her independence of character is in nothing better shown than in her recent quarrel with Signor Talamo, the director of the great building society in whose tenements she founded the first Casa dei Bambini, or Montessori Schools. Signor Talamo, after a time, wanted to start schools with ill-trained teachers and insufficient apparatus in some of his tenements. Though he was her financial sponsor, she refused to acknowledge the imitations as Montessori schools at all, and could not be forced into acquiescence with the signor's wishes.

She gave up a large practice to carry on her installation of schools for the scientific education of children, but she has never forgotten that she is a physician. She has drafted and induced the Italian Parliament to pass laws for the better government of insane asylums and the protection of children. Recently, when there was a scourge of cholera in one of the poorer quarters of Rome, she entered the quarantined district, and stayed there for weeks, comforting her former patients, well-to-do or poor, and saving many lives, at a time when many physicians fled the district.

Mrs. Susanna Look Avery, ninety-five years old, a suffragist, of Louisville, who fifty years ago demanded the emancipation of the slaves, is in Cincinnati to help emancipate Ohio women. I gave up wondering whether women should vote or not seventy-five years ago and started right in to help them get the ballot, she says in an interview.

Oppenheim Aided by Allah—Bennet After American Trip—New Barrie Play—Booming Salambo—Cyreno French Hero.

BY HAYDEN CHURCH.

LONDON, June 5.—Egypt seems to be a magnet that draws most English novelists nowadays. Rider Haggard is there now, following in the footsteps of Robert Hichens, E. F. Benson, A. E. W. Mason and goodness knows how many more British romancers who have sought and found material in the land of the Pharaohs. Another English author who has been in Egypt lately, and is just home again is E. Phillips Oppenheim, whose stories seem to be as popular as ever in the United States, and whose newest tale, "Peter Ruff," has vastly pleased the critics here.

Oppenheim made rather a lengthy cruise in the Mediterranean before going on to Egypt, as the result of which we probably shall be having a story from him with the scene laid there. A friend of mine had lunch with the author just before he caught the train that was to take him back to his home at Sheringham, Norfolk, and was regaled with some of his doings while on his travels. Amongst other things, Oppenheim told about shooting quail near the Pyramids and remarked that his Arab guides prayed to Allah for his success as a marksman while he attempted to bag the elusive game. Apparently the prayers were answered, for the novelist did great execution and might have had quail on toast for some days thereafter if he had wanted to. Oppenheim declared that he was pining for a game of golf of which he is a devotee, and said he meant to have a week of play, anyhow, on the famous Sheringham links that are only a stone's throw from his seaside home, before settling down to work again.

Arnold Bennett is back from Paris, and is a near neighbor of King George and Queen Mary, being among the guests at a fashionable hotel that is just across the road from Buckingham Palace. Evidently his recent journeyings and junketings in the United States were a bit too much for the author of "Clayhanger," for I hear that ever since his return he has been in indifferent health, so that his articles about America for "Harper's" were written under considerable stress. Meanwhile, "Milestones," the play Bennett wrote in collaboration with Edward Knoblauch, of U. S. A., continues to "turn 'em away" at the Royalty, and must be making a lot of money for all concerned. I was told the other day, by the bye, that this uncommonly successful writer is one of the best of sons, and that it is a rare week in which his mother, who lives in one of the "Five Towns" about which Bennett has written, fails to get from two to three letters from him, which tell about his doings in detail.

Although this correspondence is not directly concerned with theatrical matters, a rather uncommonly interesting announcement which I believe to be exclusive, in connection with J. M. Barrie, may be made here. It was reported some time ago that Mr. Barrie, who now, of course, confines himself to stagework, was engaged on a new play—the first long one we have had from him since "What Every Woman Knows." I am now told, on the best authority, that the new piece, which is nearly finished, is a topsy-turvey version of "The Taming of the Shrew," and probably will be called, "Shakespeare for Women."

Edmond Rostand must be feeling a bit "chesty" at present, and with good reason. Apparently "Cyrano de Bergerac" is the favorite romantic hero of its creator's countrymen and countrywomen, too. The French paper "Le Journal" organized a voting contest, recently—two contests in fact, for men and women voted separately—to decide which heroes of literature its public preferred, and surprisingly enough, the three who head the list are the same for both sexes. They are Cyrano, Jean Valjean, and D'Artagnan. Evidently Rostand's long-nosed lover is the hero par excellence of fair ones in France, for he gets more than double the votes given to any other. Among the fifteen names at the head of the women's list there is not a single character chosen from English literature. But in the men's there are three, Sherlock Holmes, Robinson Crusoe, and Romeo. Doyle's detective hero comes well out of the contest, being fifth, while Robinson Crusoe is twelfth.

Gustave Flaubert's "Salaambo" was staged in America not so long ago, if one remembers rightly. It took its infinitely painstaking author five years to write and some correspondence that has just come to light reveals that he was paid 10,000 francs, or $2,000 for it. That works out at $400 a year, so it was just as well that Flaubert had private means. From one of the recently discovered letters, which was written by Flaubert to an intimate friend, it seems that the gentle art of "booming" was then much what it is today.

"Tell no one that it is 10,000 francs that I am getting," Flaubert wrote. "Levy is going to advertise 'Salaambo' lavishly and will send paragraphs to all the papers to the effect that he paid 30,000 francs for it."

Probably no song ever was composed under queerer circumstances than "Ach, du Lieber Augustine," ("Oh, you dear Augustine,") the author's 250th anniversary of whose author's birth is now being celebrated throughout Austria. That author, Augustine Mar, frequently got exceedingly drunk. One night when "under the influence," he managed to fall into a rubbish pit which he found too deep to climb out of without help. His cries for assistance were unheeded, and as he floundered about, the idea came to him that he might attract the attention of some passer-by by means of a new song. Then and there, accordingly, he composed the simple words and air of "Ach, du Lieber Augustine" and proceeded to sing it in a lusty voice, with the result, so the story goes, that he was heard, located and speedily rescued. The tale spread abroad, and a few days later all Vienna was singing the song that has remained popular for 250 years.

HOWLING MOB THREATENS WHEN MAGONS CONVICTED.

Sympathizers of Quartette of Revolutionists March on County Jail—Sheriff's Diplomacy—Attack on Jailer by Magon's Step-daughter—Demagogues Harangue Peons for Hours at Plaza—Government Denounced.

THE two Magon brothers, with their accomplices, Figueroa and Rivera, were found guilty in the United States District Court yesterday morning of conspiracy to enlist soldiers in the United States to make war on Mexico.

As soon as the news spread through the corridors of the Federal building and out into the streets, wildly excited Mexicans who had contributed their money to the cause of the Magons began to shout and curse in Spanish. Soon the excitement had assumed the proportions of a riot.

Outside the County Jail, to which the four men were rushed immediately after the verdict, a crowd of Mexicans gathered, shaking their fists and denouncing the United States government, and with their forces augmented to several hundred an onslaught was made on the Sheriff's office. The street outside was filled with a squirming, agitated mob, yelling "Abajo con Estados Unidos," and curses of all sorts in two languages.

Sheriff Hammel saw those in the foremost ranks and told them quietly to go away, but they demanded to see the prisoners. Several of them presented requests from the United States Marshal that the "bearer" be admitted to the jail, but the Sheriff announced that the visiting days are Tuesday and Friday and that only relatives and close associates of the prisoners will be admitted even then. The mercurial crowd seemed to think this was reasonable and melted away.

FEMALE OF SPECIES.

Meanwhile, however, the two step-daughters of the Magon leader and several others had obtained admittance to the jail as far as the inner bars of the entrance. There Jailer Gallagher stopped them and told them to leave, as he had already received word from Hammel that they were not to be allowed in the jail. The eldest step-daughter of Ricardo Magon, raising her voice to a shriek, cursed Gallagher in Spanish, and stepping back, struck him full over the heart with a blow that sent him reeling to the rear bars. Then, still screaming, with her sister equally agitated, she stepped out and up the steps to the sidewalk, where she was joined by half a dozen other women, all talking at the top of their voices and denouncing "Los Estados Unidos."

As this occurred, the real trouble outside the jail began. The mob that had gone away from the Sheriff's office a few minutes before, returned, led by a gray-whiskered man called a "doctor," who has been connected with the I.W.W. riots in San Diego. He loudly demanded admittance to the jail. He was told that he would not be admitted and set up a howl, shaking his fist in the face of the Sheriff. The Mexicans added to the clamor with yells and cat-calls.

"What would I be thinking of," said the Sheriff, "to let such a howling mob into the jail, full of prisoners as it is?"

Half a dozen leaders of the mob began a movement to the bars at the entrance of the jail, but at this moment half a dozen deputies for whom Hammel had sent, arrived, and the patrol wagon of the police, with four patrolmen, arrived to place a prisoner in the jail. The deputy Sheriffs and the patrolmen made short work of the Mexican mob, driving the shouting, cursing, sweating Magonistas before them into Temple street.

FUSION OF FIGHTERS.

The mob, seeing it was useless to make another demonstration against the jail, moved down Temple street to the Federal Building, where its numbers were augmented by about 500 men and women who had remained there in the hope of insulting the members of the jury that had found the revolutionists guilty. The throng stayed here for a moment until someone shouted "A la Plaza," and then the hundreds of excited men and hysterical women, decked out with little red flags on their breasts and some of them waving larger flags, always red, crowded out into Main street and paraded to the north to the front of the old Fremont residence opposite the Plaza. There they made a stand for several hours, listening to heated and inflammatory speeches by Mexicans, who were so wild with anger that they could scarcely speak distinctly.

"Abajo con el Presidento Taft," was screamed repeatedly, and alternated with "Abajo con Los Estados Unidos." Someone suggested that a dispatch be sent to the President at once and to Mexico as well, denouncing the jury's verdict, and among the impoverished, hard-working peons, most of whom rarely earn more than $1.25 a day $8.40 was raised to pay for the telegrams.

The police kept close watch to see that no overt act should be committed and late in the afternoon the peons and the women, with their wealthier leaders, began to disperse.

"We shall make war in secret," the leaders said. "The United States cannot stop us."

The verdict against the four Mexicans, Ricardo Flores Magon, president of the Mexican Liberal Junta, his brother Enrique; Anselmo Figueroa and Liberado Rivera, was reached after twenty-three hours of deliberation, at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning, after a trial that had continued for three weeks. The men were found guilty of having enlisted Joe Reed, Francisco Flores and Higinio Olguin for their so-called army to invade Mexico.

Sentence will be pronounced by Judge Wellborn next Tuesday morning. Ricardo Magon and Rivera were found guilty on four counts, Enrique Magon on three and Figueroa on one count. They are liable to two years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine on each count.

READY FOR TROUBLE.

As an attempt at a demonstration in the courtroom was expected, six patrolmen were added to the force of United States Marshal to maintain order. They were needed, for the women followers of the Magons managed to crowd into the room, while many of the men and a contingent of I.W.W. speakers patrolled the corridors of the Federal Building, and the street outside was crowded with men and women. After the verdict, and as the men were being hurried to the jail, the crowd pressed around and the activity of the police alone prevented serious trouble. Part of the crowd waited outside to jeer the jurors as they passed out, but the twelve were taken through another door.

The conviction of the quartette marks the successful culmination of the war waged by the Federal government on the conspirators for more than a year. Following their release from prison at Florence, Ariz., where Ricardo Flores Magon and Liberado Rivera served eighteen months for violation of the neutrality laws, a propaganda was inaugurated for the establishment of a new republic in Lower California.

Enrique Flores Magon and Anselmo L. Figueroa were original members of the junta on its organization in St. Louis in 1905. They joined with the first two mentioned in the publication of El Regeneracion, devoted to the spread of the doctrines of anarchy and socialism, and parenthetically used as a means to secure thousands of dollars from the poor peons who dreamed of an enlarged liberty in Mexico—and 160 acres of land, for the arrangement was that after the government of Mexico had been overthrown, the land was to be divided among the "brothers."

THE FORLORN CAUSE.

Agents covered Southern California and Mexico, collecting money from ignorant Mexicans. They enlisted soldiers for service below the line; commissioned officers in the so-called liberal army, and raised special funds ostensibly for the purchase of arms and ammunition for the "cause." It is said that the four defendants were collecting not less than $5000 a month.

The descent was made on the office of Regeneracion on June 14, 1911. After the seizure of the documents found at the Junta headquarters, No. 519½ East Fourth street, and following the release of the Ma-

ONE SOLUTION OF THE BIG TRUNK PROBLEM

The Difference Between Trunks.

Way-up Way.

MANY AUTOS TO RUSH A MILE TOWARD SKY.

Unique Road to High Summit of Mount Wilson Open Wednesday, and Los Angeles Drivers Eager to Be There First—Big Machines to Go Where Only the Burros Used to Climb.

FULLY 100 Los Angeles automobile owners and drivers are eager to be the first with a machine on the summit of Mt. Wilson. There will be a rush of scores of automobiles for the mile-high climb by the new road, which will be opened Wednesday at daylight. In addition to those who want to lead the ascent, are others who merely desire to watch the consumption of gasoline; then there are ambitious owners of electrics who plan to dare the new road. No tolls will be charged.

It is one of the most picturesque and scenic automobile roads in the world. It begins at the foot of Eaton's Canyon and the Foothill boulevard just outside of Pasadena and mounts by an easy grade—10 per cent.—to the peak.

Fifty workmen have been busy completing the last link of the road. A short bridge across Eaton's Canyon is about completed. Tuesday morning a trip will be made by one of two large auto busses which will hereafter run daily from Pasadena to the summit. That day no other machines will be permitted on the road.

Instead of the necessity of using the hurricane deck of a burro up the narrow foot trail from Sierra Madre, it will be possible to make the trip in the luxury of a high-powered automobile.

WHEN MOON IS BRIGHT.

Many wondrously beautiful and soft moonlight nights have seen the famous old trail fairly alive with burros and pedestrians making their leisurely up. There is not a twist of the old trail that is not dear to the hearts of thousands who have stories to tel lof every turn and bend and of every advantageous echo point. These later points were marked off and some famous echoes have set the mountain fastnesses to ringing.

The trip has been looked on as one of the most enticing of all mountain trips in California and its closeness to the door of Los Angeles only added to its popularity. The one drawback to its thorough enjoymen, by the grown-ups was the fact that it was necessary to walk up or ride a burro, neither of which is compatible with some grown-up's dignity.

Along this trail in the summer months a veritable stream of youth flows up and down. The trail is the entrance to the fastness of the near Sierra Madre Mountains. There is a quarter-way house where pop and other refreshments can be had. Then there is the half-way house known as Orchard's Camp, where everyone always stopped for a rest and lunch. A clear, cool, mountain stream comes splashing its way through this camp

Railroads Can't Charge Size Excess Proposed.

But Huge Containers' Doom Seems Written.

The feud that has existed between the railroads and the baggage smasher on one hand and the blithesome traveling salesman on the other in regard to the size of trunks has given a new lease of life just at the time that the parties of the first part were preparing to celebrate a victory.

The Inter-State Commerce Commission has stepped between the combatants and called a halt on the railroads. The latter had promulgated an order which was to become effective July 1 reducing the size of trunks to a maximum of forty-five inches and making a chance of ten pounds for each inch in excess. Now the commission has raised a halting hand and given the traveling salesmen a breathing spell of 120 days from July 1. During that time the commission will investigate the ruling of the railroads.

A loud yell has gone up from the express and transfer companies and from the porters at the big hotels in Los Angeles as a result. They insist they have been slowly becoming shadows handling the ever-increasing trunks, with no more remuneration for handling a huge trunk six or eight feet high, two of which would make a wagon load, than the small steamer trunk.

They thought relief in sight when the railroads sought to come to their own and the porters' rescue with an order to charge excess baggage rates on the immense trunks.

Apparently the doom of the big trunk is near. While the order of the Inter-State Commerce Commission allowing a 120-day stay puts it off the baggage men and the railroads will not let up in their fight against the monstrosities that have become so common.

GROWN FROM FIBER.

The introduction of the fiber trunk, which is as light as paper, was the first step in the evolution of the big trunk. It was possible to make a monstrosity that would hold nearly as much as a moving van and yet would not weigh as much as the ordinary small wooden steel-bound trunk of our fathers.

First actresses and actors traveling from one city to the other, and confronted with the necessity of taking with them their best frocks and costumes and carrying them with the least possible pressure, began to ask for larger trunks. The makers responded. Along came the day of the big hat, and the traveling salesmen who carried samples demanded larger trunks. Their call was answered with a trunk which to the layman would appear large enough to carry his entire household goods.

The railroads began to feel the crush of these huge trunks. Their former rulings as to the weight permitted to be carried on tickets and the rates for trunks seemed to be of no avail. The new trunks were not heavier than before, but took three or four times as much space. They were made of fiber and laden with light, fluffy stuff which did not weigh beyond the legal limit, but the size was prohibitive. It wouldn't take many to fill an express car, and there was no excess charge that could be made.

The baggage and transfer men began to feel crowded, too. Delivery wagons which heretofore carried twenty to thirty trunks at so much per trunk were now limited to five or six of these new monsters. The men joined with the railroads, but the trunks still grew until only the doors of the cars were the limit, and then they began to make them long and narrow so that while the greatest dimension would not pass the door they could be flopped on one side and passed through.

TOO MUCH FOR HOTELS.

After the baggage and delivery men were through with the big trunks the porters at the hotels became submerged with them. They were, as a rule, too big to get in the doors of the sample rooms, and the traveling salesmen would unpack in the hall or would even leave them in the baggage room and take out the contents in small removable compartments or small trunks in larger ones.

Thus again the handlers of trunks found themselves paid for one trunk when they were handling the same amount of material as had heretofore come in several.

Baggage rooms were remodeled to accommodate the big trunks, and now in Los Angeles hotels instead of baggage rooms inclosed as heretofore there has arisen the baggage area way with an open front, as no door could be used conveniently that would admit the trunks. These baggage area ways are large enough for wagons to drive through, and often contain trunks in which one or two men can stand when the lid is locked down.

In addition to the traveling salesman there are the wealthy society folks who travel and insist on having trunks of sufficient size to hold their best frocks without folding. These trunks are as large as the most ambitious of the fraternity of the road. But these, too, must go or pay a higher rate, according to the handlers.

It was the intention of the railroads to limit the size of trunks to forty inches and have the rule effective July 1, next year. It was figured that a year was sufficient to permit any one to change the size of the trunk. A howl arose from the several large commercial travelers' organizations against the ruling and from large business concerns which have men on the road and believe they must have larger trunks. To conciliate this element the railroads altered their plans and placed the

STATE WITNESS UNDER FIRE.

Stands Merciless Volleys of Defense Counsel.

Question of Ethics Arouses Lawyer Harrington.

Spectators Treat Courtroom Like Vaudeville.

The united skill and legal technic of Rogers, Appel and the defendant himself were turned against John S. Harrington in the Darrow trial yesterday, in an effort to batter down or minimize the effect of his testimony against his former associate in the McNamara case. The Chicago lawyer proved an impassive witness. Only once did he display any feeling and that was when Rogers sneered at his professional ethics. The reply aroused Rogers noticeably.

Harrington had testified that he would not narrate any conversation he had with Darrow about the McNamara defense, as it would be a violation of professional confidence. As a matter of fact a few days ago the defense was arguing the very same conclusion. Possibly to stir the witness from his well-nigh apathetic condition Rogers cut him with the remark: "Do you think you are a good judge of what constitutes professional ethics?" or words to that effect. Harrington glared at the cross-examiner and replied in heat: "Perhaps my ethics are as good as yours. At least, I never was retained by a defendant after learning all about the case as an assistant to the District Attorney."

Just when the spectators were joyfully leaning forward in hopes of more excitement, something else came up to distract the attention of the counsel and the incident passed off without "bloodshed." Yesterday's session was denominated by many as a "vaudeville show." The seats were filled with evident friends of Darrow, for they laughed or softly clapped their hands when Rogers made a telling point. Any temporary victory for the State was met by silence or ironic chuckles. Judge Hutton appeared greatly annoyed by the confusion and noise in the courtroom but he said nothing about it in open court.

LOOKING IN THE EYE.

At recess Capt. Fredericks protested against the manner in which counsel for the defense stood near the jury box and paced up and down the floor back of the tables. Darrow also got up to whisper in Rogers's ear and the words passing between them could have been overheard by the nearest jurors. They were heard by Capt. Fredericks, for he got up to protest. He declared that Rogers had told Darrow to try and fix the witness with his eyes and the District Attorney said that Darrow was going to practice any "hypnotic arts" upon the witness he wanted to know in advance.

In effect the judge said he did not recognize any such thing as hypnotism and Rogers declared that his whole purpose was to make the witness look the interrogator in the eye. "He dare not look Darrow or me in the eye," said he vehemently.

The courtroom was in an uproar and the sound of laughter reached three floors above, persons coming down to inquire into the cause of the mirth. Court attaches who have served for a score of years declared the laughter and applause for the defense exceeded anything they had ever heard in any court. It is alleged that the same tactics would have been attempted in the McNamara trial if the case had not been brought to an abrupt conclusion by the confession of the dynamiters.

Ford once more asked Judge Hutton yesterday to enforce the order regarding the presence of defense witnesses in the courtroom. He declared that the law was plain upon the point. H. W. Pohlman, who has been in frequent attendance upon the Federal grand jury in the investigation of the so-called dynamiting conspiracy, was requested to leave the room. Though Darrow admitted he might use other friends as witnesses, he was allowed to keep them inside the rail where they could lend their "moral support" to his side of the case.

Just before adjournment Rogers started to interrogate the witness about Detective Foster of the National Erectors' Association, and it is probable that the inquisitor will ask the witness tomorrow to tell about the alleged use of the dictagraph at a local hotel in an effort to entrap the defendant into admissions of guilt.

When court convened yesterday morning Juror Golding was ready with a question. He is the juror who when questioned as to his qualifications to sit on the jury admitted that he had grave doubts that a man of Darrow's ability would try to bribe a juror in a criminal case.

Golding asked what time the McNamara jurors were sworn. Capt. Fredericks replied that the case began October 11, but that the first juror was not sworn in until the last of that month, according to his best recollection. The question was supposedly framed by the juror because of the testimony of Harrington the previous day that Darrow had told him he had $10,000 to use in "reaching" a couple of jurors. This alleged conversation occurred on the last of September.

DIDN'T EXPECT IMMUNITY.

Rogers asked Harrington if he had expected immunity. The reply was in the negative. The chief counsel for the accused jury briber then read from a newspaper clipping in which the District Attorney was quoted as saying that if Harrington did not testify in the Darrow case he would have to face serious charges.

"Isn't it true that fear of prosecution induced you to testify?" asked Rogers.

"NO."

Capt. Fredericks said it was not fair to take some newspaper article in which he might or might not have been quoted correctly and use it as a basis for impeachment.

Rogers then had the witness identify a letter. It was read to the jury. In it Harrington told Darrow that Burns detectives were watching him in Chicago and warned him to be on his guard. "They know a good deal and certainly are after us," was one of the sentences in the letter.

"Why did you write to Darrow?"

"To give him my suspicions."

"You were friendly with him then, were you?"

"I was not ready to break with him at that time."

Rogers then asked Harrington if he knew a Mrs. Eargott, said to be a Socialist writer. The witness thought he had met her.

"If you want further identification she is a sister of Mary Fields," said the District Attorney. Rogers asked the witness if he knew Sergt. Cavanaugh of the Venice police department. Harrington said he did.

Rogers then read a long question in which Harrington was represented as saying to Cavanaugh that Darrow was innocent; that there never had been bribery in the McNamara trial and denials of every sort and description.

"I never said so," stated the witness. "Both Cavanaugh and I said Darrow was guilty."

NEAR THE JURY BOX.

At this point Darrow got up to speak to Rogers. They stood, perhaps, two feet from the jury box.

"Your honor, I object to Darrow's leaving his seat," said Capt. Fredericks.

Rogers, Appel and Darrow started to reply at the same time and confusion resulted. When he could make himself heard, Capt. Fredericks said that he had overheard Rogers tell Darrow to keep his eyes fixed on the witness. "We don't want any hypnotism here," said the District Attorney. He was greeted with jeering laughter from the spectators. No apparent effect was made to keep order and the courtroom was in an uproar. Rogers explained what he meant was that the witness kept his eyes away from the interrogator and he wanted Harrington to look him in the eye. "He don't dare to look me or Darrow in the face," said Rogers hotly.

Intermission came at an opportune time. Counsel for the defense kept their seats during the examination of the witness during the rest of the morning session. It is said the matter was taken up in chambers by Judge Hutton, who was much annoyed at the lack of decorum in the courtroom.

MRS. DARROW TO TESTIFY?

Harrington was asked if he had not told Mrs. Darrow that there never had been any illegal or underhand work in connection with the McNamara case, so it is evident that an attempt will be made to have the wife testify on behalf of her husband.

Rogers also asked the witness concerning the events at Darrow's house when he is alleged to have told his associate that he had $10,000 to use in bribing jurors. The conversation took place on the porch, the witness said. He thought his daughter and Mrs. Darrow were in the garden at the time. He said they discussed various phases of the McNamara case. Rogers asked him to repeat some of the conversation.

"I refuse, because it was privileged matter," said Harrington.

Rogers asked him if he thought himself a good judge of professional ethics and Harrington retorted by referring to the counsel's former connection with the investigation of the conspiracy to blow up The Times building.

The last few questions were about Foster who is said to have had some dictograph records prepared of supposed conversations between Harrington and Darrow.

FOUND IN GLENDALE.

President and Vice-President of "Scotty" Mining Company Located and Subpoenaed to Appear.

Through the efforts of the District Attorney's detective yesterday, Thomas A. Watt, president, and F. E. Sharp, vice-president of the Death Vally Scotty Gold Mining and Developing Company, were located and subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury Tuesday.

"These men will testify all about the company and the plan to use 'Scotty's' name to attract investors," said Detective Browne. "I have a complete confession from 'Scotty.' It would make a good magazine story. He admits he never had a mine, never prospected and in fact, was merely a kind of press agent for companies that want to sell stock. He sold the use of his name to the company for $200."

The investigation will continue under the direction of Chief Trial Deputy Horton. Besides puncturing the myth of "Scotty's" desert gold mine, the prosecutor intends, he says, to go into the subject of the incorporation of a mining company which it is alleged never owned any real claims.

At the last session, F. C. Goodwin, secretary of the Death Valley Scotty Gold Mining and Developing Company was a witness, but the president and vice-president were not located at that time. Now that they have been subpoenaed, it is expected that more details will be placed in the possession of the grand jury.

The Best She Could Do.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] They had quarreled and were returning the presents.

The love tokens made a pitiful display on the polished center table.

The man added a blue knit tie to the little heap in front of him, and then they were silent for a while.

"Mr. Brown."

"Yes, Miss Simmons."

"I feel that I am taking an advantage of you."

"In what way?"

"You have given me almost countless boxes of candy and no end of good dinners. I can't return those to you. I have eaten them. They are now a part of myself. And so, as I want to be honest with you, George, the only way I can settle this part of the transaction is to—to give you myself."

And the quarrel ended then and there limit at forty-five inches, to go into effect July 1 of this year, and advanced the date when the 40-inch trunk would be the dead line to July 1, 1914, or two years ahead. The various railroads had issued their bulletins laying down this limit of forty-five inches as effective July 1, when the commercial travelers organizations appealed to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and 120 days of grace was given the travelers.

It is not only the western railroads which have taken up this movement against large trunks, but the Eastern and Middle Western lines are fully as active. There was a period a few months ago when the Eastern and Western roads could not get together as to the exact and proper limit for trunks. The East wanted forty-five-inch trunks, but the western roads, with the longer and more expensive haul, demanded forty-inch trunks. For a time it was feared there would be a deadlock and that the eastern traveler would be forced to cut off five inches from his trunk when he passed Chicago or pay excess baggage. This point was settled a month ago in Chicago. At the same time a number of the commercial organizations convened and determined to oppose the banishment of the large trunk.

HATS REQUIRE SPACE.

Shippers and commercial travelers declare that in many cases the big trunk is an absolute necessity, and cite the shipping of women's hats. These demand the largest trunks but are inconsiderable in weight. There are other lines in which the weight is a small factor but the bulk the principal point. The shippers have always been willing, they say, to pay for over weight, but they think it is discrimination to charge them over-bulk.

Some shippers have stated that if the proposed regulation is put into force it will increase the cost of their business almost 50 per cent., as in many cases the traveling salesmen will be forced to carry three or four trunks of forty inches length where they now use but one. This they declare, means three or four times the charge for transfer from railroad to hotel and back again. Then again the more trunks a salesman has the greater confusion in keeping track of them.

The shippers agree that in some instances the railroads have a just cause for complaint in the abnormally large trunks, but assert this has been caused directly by the baggage smasher himself in his rough handling of smaller trunks. A small trunk, it is figured, offers a temptation to the baggage and express man to handle it roughly, while one of the mountainous affairs demands respect for its bulk, if for nothing else, and cannot be handled as can a smaller one.

gonistas from the County Jail, the publication of the incendiary sheet was resumed, and the work of collecting funds for the "cause" went on as before. The trial was among the most expensive ever held in the local United States District Court. By reason of the fact that witnesses had to be brought from all parts of Southern California, and as far south as the City of Mexico, together with other extraordinary expenses, it is believed that the total cost will not be less than $10,000. The Republic of Mexico has also contributed a large sum in the way of expenses, for President Madero was much interested in the outcome of the hearing, although his Secretary of the Interior, Jesus Magon, a brother of the two convicted Magons, is a member of his Cabinet.

All title companies with which they have been connected are in full active operation issuing reliable certificates of title. Los Angeles, California, was chosen as the goal, because of the Time, Place, Field and Business.
THE TIME, of ever increasing prosperity in Los Angeles County.
THE PLACE, being the most delightful county in which to live.
THE FIELD, which is the largest outside of New York and Chicago, in number of documents filed.
THE BUSINESS, of this company which shows growth at a rate of from [illegible] per cent. to 72 per cent. per month over the corresponding month of 1911.
It is also a fact that the California Title Guaranty Company at 133 West Third Street, is reasonable in prices and prompt in filling orders.

TREE-TOP CURE FOR INSOMNIA.

WAKEFUL SAILOR NESTS WITH BIRDS; SLEEPS NOW.

Retired Mariner, Undermined in Health Because Unable to Rest Without Rocking of Boat, Builds Him a House High Up Where the Wind Blows, Slumbers in Peace.

Because, after having spent the nights of thirty years in a hammock that rolled and pitched with every motion of the seas, he cannot sleep in an ordinary bed of the stationary variety, John Wallace, retired seaman of No. 343 West Twelfth street, San Pedro, has made his bed in the tip-top of a tall poplar tree in his back yard. Now, while the sea winds rock the tree to and fro in a very fair imitation of the rolling of a vessel, he sleeps beautifully. The problem of insomnia, one which had become so serious that Wallace's health had become gravely impaired from lack of sleep, is solved. For a time he feared that, in spite of his advanced years, he would have to return to the sea again if slumber were ever again to visit his couch. Now, however, he declares that he will live for thirty years more, unless his tree blows down.

Rock-a-bye Sailorman.

This is the tree-top bed of Capt. John Wallace, a retired San Pedro mariner. After thirty years on the high seas he found that he couldn't sleep without the rocking of a boat. After suffering intensely from insomnia he finally arrived at this solution. The tree is a poplar and sways with the least breeze. The sea-faring man's hammock is swung inside the "cabin" shown.

Wallace has ranged the Pacific and its by-paths for more than thirty years. He has seen service of the most strenuous variety in all classes of vessels from the one-mast traders of the South Seas to the crack passenger coasters of the north, and the greyhounds plying between Coast cities and the Orient.

Thirty years ago when he ran away to sea, Wallace was mess-boy on a tramp sailing vessel plying between San Pedro, San Francisco and Honolulu in the sugar trade. From mess-boy he advanced until for five years he was captain on a wind-jammer. Later he became second officer on a steam vessel plying out of San Francisco, and at one time was master of his own sailing vessel. Once a sugar trader on which he was chief mate foundered five days out of Diamond Head and he and his crew were twenty days in an open boat before they were rescued. That was twenty years ago. When they were finally rescued, three of the crew were dead from starvation and exposure.

A year ago Capt. Wallace decided that he had earned a rest and retired. Then he discovered that he couldn't sleep! At first he couldn't account for it, but finally found that what he missed was the rocking motion of the boat. He tried several remedies, but to no avail.

After suffering long tortures from insomnia, he noticed one day that the tall poplar in his back yard was so sensitive that the slightest motion of the breeze would set it rocking. An idea came to him. His sons, William and Vernon, helped, and in a week's time he had a fairly comfortable one-room house built up high in the branches of the tree. Inside he hung up a seaman's hammock. That night he slept soundly for the first time in months.

And the whole Wallace family is happy since "Daddy" will not have to go to sea again.

ONE MAN LIKELY TO DIE.

Condition of Other Persons Injured in Auto Accident Improves But Is Still Serious.

J. W. Rannells, secretary and treasurer of the Rannells Land Company, is the only one of the nine persons injured early Thursday morning in the auto-switch-engine collision at Ninth and Alameda streets, whose condition yesterday was not improved. At the Columbia Hospital where he is lying, it was said yesterday afternoon that Rannells was in a more precarious condition than at any time since he was hurt. He is suffering from a compound basal fracture of the skull. It is believed that if he can live forty-eight hours longer he has a chance to recover.

At the County Hospital Miss Leola Parker of Whittier, who sustained a depressed compound fracture of the skull, has shown signs of improvement. That announcement by the officials, however, did not carry with it the belief that she will recover.

A. Webb, who was taken to the Angelus Hospital with a skull fracture, is still in a precarious condition. Whether the slight improvement of yesterday means that he will recover or is a rally preceding a more serious turn in his condition, the doctors were not prepared to say.

The other six members, including the three Southern Pacific switchmen, who were riding on the running board of the switch engine, and Chauffeur McGee, at the Clara Barton Hospital, also showed improvement yesterday.

DELVING DIP DIPS DEEP.

A man who has a penchant for robbing women as they walk along the streets has become so active recently in the shopping district that the police have sent out a warning to all women to keep a firm grip upon their purses. Mrs Thomas H. Vannoy, No. 417 South Boylston street, is the latest victim of this persistent and clever "dip." He took $60 from her while she was walking in the vicinity of Fifth and Broadway. The pickpocket opened Mrs. Vannoy's handbag and then opened a purse that was in it and abstracted the money, all in bills, without attracting her attention.

MANY AUTOS TO RUSH.

and there are tents and a dining-room.

The half-way house, captured many of the faint hearted who had gone so far and saw ahead perhaps the worst part of the long trail.

BREATHING ROOM ONLY.

As the old trail advances past the half-way house it grows in ruggedness and in places it is necessary to go slowly, because it is not over eighteen inches wide, with treacherous precipices on one side and sheer walls on the other. While these hazards drove back the timid they were food and drink to the young folk who gloried in their own prowess in surmounting the difficult places. The burros, whose sureness of foot does away with all danger, were fallen back on by the timid, but scoffed at by the young.

The scenery of the Sierra Madra range begins to spread out before you about three quarters of the way up. You have passed out of the canyons and are traveling along a high hogback that inclines toward two peaks seemingly close to each other. The one to the left is Mt. Lowe and the one to the right is Mt. Wilson. They are a good ten miles apart.

CHANGE ON SUMMIT.

Since the establishment of the Carnegie Solar Observatory at Mt. Wilson there has come a gradual change in the mountain top. It has been for the better. Not one of the natural beauties has been injured. Things have been gradually made more comfortable.

Electricity became available and the Carnegie interests constructed a temporary wagon road from Eaton's Canyon to the summit over which to haul the enormous castings for the observatory. This road was private but has since been acquired by the Mt. Wilson Company and completed and improved at a cost of $12,000. Up this the automobiles will go.

It was necessary to cut down the curves to accommodate the longest automobiles and then the grades were reduced so that the machines could negotiate them with little difficulty. In fact, the road has been made so that the automobile run can be made from Los Angeles to the summit and return in four hours. It will afford one of the most picturesque automobile trips afforded any large city in the world. It will be about twenty miles from the city limits to the summit, making the entire trip forty miles and no grade over 10 per cent. It will open to the traveler a panorama of 100 miles of Southern California from a high view-point.

The automobile route will be on the foothill boulevard to the turn going to Altadena and thence along the bluff to a point 100 yards above the old toll house, where a bridge has been thrown across the canyon, which brings the traveler onto the new road, which is smooth and of slight grade.

A. H. Voigt, president of the California Furniture Company, will leave tomorrow on his annual buying tour to Chicago, Grand Rapids, New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and will visit the leading centers.

PLAYING THE GAME.

It is evident that the women of California are going to have their share in the lawmaking and government administration of the future. Some of them are beginning now, and our friends, the politicians, must walk circumspectly if they expect to fare well.

SUBDUED.

The Colorado River is becoming more tractable. Probably the weather along its line of march is enough at this season to subdue almost anything. The willfulness of this stream, however, is likely to make one forget the logic and beauty of Bill Nye's remark that nothing adds more to the attractiveness of a river than water.

A LIVE ONE.

The press agent of the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce deserves a medal. Somewhere in the deeps of the Rocky Mountain heights it snowed the other day, as it has a perfect right to in altitudes of that prominence, and this brilliant press agent immediately burned the wires with his story of snow in June in the vicinity of the town he is boosting.

FEARLESS.

The National Packing Company has decided to dissolve without the aid of the Attorney-General and the Federal courts, thereby taking the bull by the horns in a most literal manner. The experience of the Standard Oil Company in finding itself richer than ever after it had been divided some thirty-five times seems to have reconciled the corporations to what happens to them when they are adjudged to be wicked combines.

PROSPEROUS.

We suppose it is a sign of prosperity that the delinquent taxes this year for Los Angeles county are less than ever before in spite of the fact that the tax books carry new names by the thousands. No practice is more absurd than that of permitting taxes to lapse. In the end they must always be paid and the interest sometimes comes high. The habit of selling a property on which the taxes are not paid to the minute is one which all legitimate real estate dealers discountenance.

PROGRESS.

An American has just been run down by a London motor-bus. So many American citizens are run down in their own country by jolly auto-speeders that the news is hardly considered important enough to be cabled across the Atlantic. We wish the cases were rare enough to attract as much attention as they do in slower-moving countries. Some day these older countries may be tuned up to the pace set by the American motorists. Truly, the world do move when the staid old London omnibus begins to catch the fever.

TURNING THE TABLES.

Of late it has been a common custom to make newly-wed couples the victims of practical jokes. In South Pasadena a groom and bride have just reversed the proceedings. While the invited guests were assembled to witness the ceremony, the chief actors slipped quietly off and were married in Los Angeles. Nor did they enlighten the expectant guests until they were well on their way to San Diego.

The choice of a partner for life is such a serious business that to us it seems foolish to make it a subject for practical joking, either by the principal actors or by their jocular friends and acquaintances. Like hazing in colleges, such practical joking is a custom "more honored in the breach than the observance."

A GREAT LOSS.

Lovers of romance may regret the killing of a pirate at Stockton Wednesday after he had held up and robbed the crews and passengers of two river launches. Our country is lamentably short of pirates these days. Most seas are now as scarce of pirates as they are of mermaids. Even the woods nowadays hold no more fauns. Society is mightily inconsistent. It yearns for the pirate of fiction, and yet, when it gets a perfectly good and reliable pirate who is able to do a man's work and willing even to overwork by robbing two ships in one day, he is promptly executed like some ordinary criminal. This is not the way to encourage the pirate industry. An ambitious pirate observing the attitude of the people from this incident would be tempted to give up his noble calling to become a lawyer or a plumber.

IN THE RIGHT.

Without disparaging the excellent and earnest work carried on by the Los Angeles Society for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, the public at large will sympathise with the members of the Board of Education who are supporting Supt. Francis in his refusal to distribute a lengthy programme on this subject among the pupils of the city schools. Mr. Francis is not supposed to distribute literature of any kind among school children and has no right to do so without the special authority of the Board of Education, which, in this case, had never been given. The quality of the subject and its treatment is quite beside the case, although it is also within the jurisdiction of the principal to decide upon its fitness, and he has done so in unmistakable terms. The society publishing these bulletins must look for their distribution through other channels. They could be mailed directly to the homes and this will probably be done.

THE CALIFORNIA CASE.

In all the turmoil in the National Republican Convention at Chicago during the past week the spot where President Taft's following fell the lowest was in the vote on the seating of two contesting delegates from the Fourth Congress District of the State of California.

From first to last a great hubbub was made about this case. Is it worth while restating the basis of the contest? Perhaps it is. The call for the national convention was made in December of last year. According to immemorial custom the manner of selecting delegates was prescribed. Each Congress district in the United States was to have two delegates to represent the Republican voters of that district, to be chosen by the separate districts.

After the call was issued the State of California passed a primary election law purposely attempting to thwart the design of the National Committee, and to deny to the Congress districts the kind of representatives they wanted. The State law prescribed that the whole body of delegates from the State should be elected at a State-wide primary, and that districts should be disregarded. The scheme was to prevent the election of Taft delegates in certain Taft districts by overwhelming them with the surplus Roosevelt vote in other districts. It was an infamous plot, and it came pretty near working.

There is the basis of the contest. Even had the California law been in existence prior to the calling of the convention it would have been entirely competent for the National Committee to have ordered that the delegates be chosen by Congress districts. Such an order would in no particle have made void the State law. As the primary law of California was passed subsequent to the issuing of the call, it was revolutionary, recalcitrant and high-handed to attempt to override the rules of the national convention, which had just as much right to designate how its delegates should be apportioned as a Presbyterian synod or Methodist conference has to apportion its delegates. No State Legislature has a legal right to declare how the delegates to a nation-wide convention or conference held in another State shall be distributed or assigned.

Now we have brought this subject up again for the purpose of considering, as in the case of the lovely Maud Muller, "what might have been."

Supposing the shoe had been on the other foot, that a State under similar circumstances had sent a Taft delegation to the national convention, that Col. Roosevelt in his vaulting ambition to be President for a third time, backed by his strong-arm brigade and violent partisans of the Johnson, Heney, Flinn type, had gained control of the convention, what do you think would have been done in such a case? What would have happened? That whole State Taft delegation would have been hurled bodily from the convention hall with Heney and the others bawling after them as they went: "Thieves," "robbers," "liars," "scoundrels," "convicts," and the colonel himself with all his arms and legs and teeth in evidence, shouting: "It was a bully fight, and I won."

"PROGRESSIVE" LOGIC.

According to progressive political ethics a law made by the Legislature of the "sovereign" State of California must be obeyed in preference to any law, rule or regulation prescribed by any other authority on earth or in heaven or elsewhere—if it is to the interest of the progressives to obey it. As, for instance, the act of Johnson's Legislature providing that a Republican delegate from San Francisco to the national convention shall not be chosen by his own constituents, but by the voters of all the other districts from Siskiyou to San Diego.

But when it came to electing a United States Senator, then a law of the "sovereign" State of California which provided that the advisory vote of the people for Senator should be taken by districts and not by the State at large was disregarded and defied by Johnson's Legislature. They found that obedience to the law would compel them to elect Spalding, while by ignoring the law they could elect Works, and they wanted to elect Works.

It was not necessary for them to give a reason for their action, for the law was only advisory and could safely be violated. But nevertheless they did give a reason, and the reason assigned was that the disobeyed law was a measly, low-down, corrupt measure, enacted by the tools of predatory wealth, and it was the privilege of statesmen to pick and choose among the statutes as to which they would obey and which they would contemptuously disregard.

Works had perambulated the State, proclaiming everywhere that, unless the people of a majority of the districts voted for him, he would not be a candidate. But when the returns came in and it was found that a majority of the districts were against him, then, like the renowned acrobat Wurley El Hassan, he threw a treble back somersault and ended by jumping down his own throat.

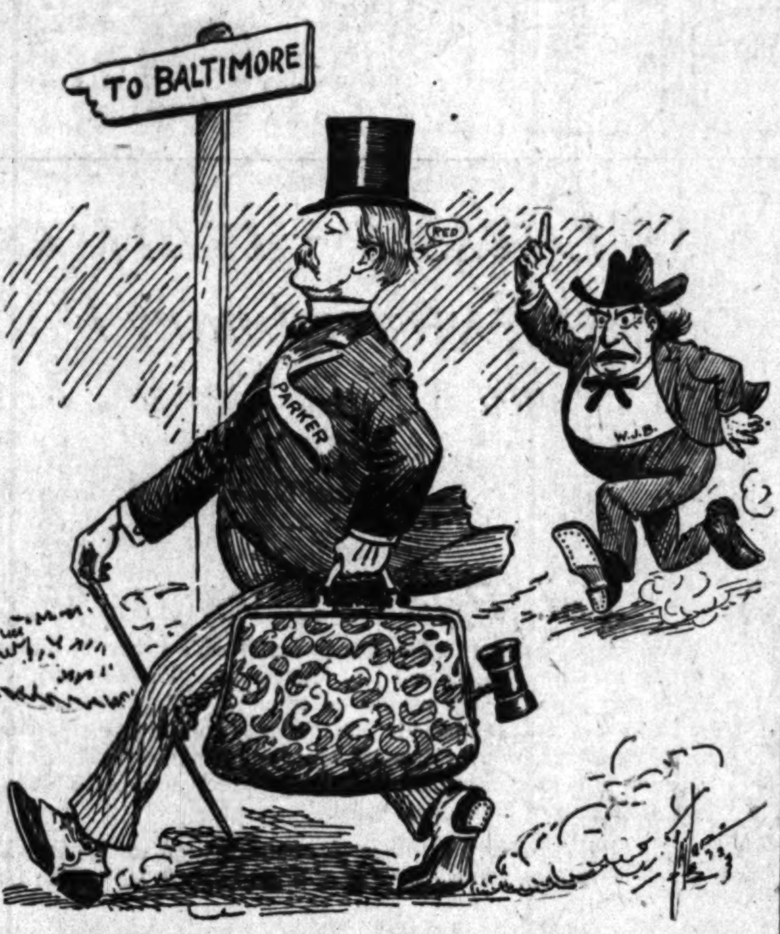
When the voters of the "sovereign" State of California declared in favor of Spalding, Johnson and his "progressives" helped to violate the law and elect Works. But when the voters of Trinity and Riverside counties helped to elect a delegate to Chicago from San Francisco, Johnson clamored that the law of the State must be enforced against the rule of the national convention, which is a law unto itself, just as much as a Methodist conference, although by so doing the San Francisco voters were disfranchised.

In looking at anything the point of view makes a great difference. It aids the doubtful man to select between tweedledum and tweedledee. "Simon," said a Hebrew dealer in second-hand clothing to his boy, "I wants to see now if you haf been a good boy and attended to your studies. I try you now with that multiplication table. Tell me now how much is eleven times twelve?" "Father," said the lad, "do you want to buy or sell?"

A professor in the University of Pennsylvania has written a book on how to select a life mate. There is simply no question that these university professors will not tackle.

But there's a divinity that shapes our Presidential ends, rough-ride them how we may.

"Hey, There!"



A PLEA FOR REASONABLENESS.

We are not making a plea for charity in the commonly-accepted meaning of the word. This is unnecessary. As far as charity consists in giving alms and assistance to the poor and unfortunate, our people have never been appealed to in vain. Indeed, if one can be said to err in practicing this cardinal Christian virtue, we should say our philanthropy is inclined to be somewhat unscientific.

But there is another form of charity just as important, the neglect of which can cause as much misery in the world as the harshest material conditions. This is charity in judgment. It is a rarer virtue to acquire and a harder one to practice. Imputing dishonest motives to those who differ from us on political, religious or personal issues is a cheap, ready-made form of attack. Though uncharitable, unscientific and generally ineffective, it persists. It is the favorite weapon of the weak.

Particularly is this so when great political interests are at stake and party feeling runs high. A man may hold detestable views—from our standpoint—on vital questions affecting the interests of the state or the happiness of the individual. We may fight these views—we must, if we are honest, fight them—with every ounce of strength that the Creator has blest us with, but we do not help our own cause by starting to impugn the honesty of the opponent who holds to these dangerous doctrines. The benefit of the doubt is every man's right. Of course, if he is really a scoundrel we are justified in attacking him personally for his acts; we have no right to assume he is a scoundrel because of his opinions.

To attack a man personally when his deeds have shown that, though to us mistaken, to himself he is sincere, to attempt to saddle such a one with vices foreign to his nature, is a too common form of uncharitableness and one unblushingly indulged in by those who would never dream of inflicting a bodily injury on a fellow-being except in open fight. Where a brave man would use his fists, a coward uses innuendo. If we believe a certain man to be unfit for a certain office we should attack the man through his views, not the views through the man. When we have proved by reasonable argument that the policy of any candidate is foolishly impractical or willfully disastrous, public opinion will efface the man along with his discredited policies. We cannot efface the policies merely by discrediting one advocate.

Sweet reasonableness has won more victories than violent diatribes. The American people today are doing too much quiet, at-home thinking for themselves to be moved for more than a moment by gallery play or violent attacks, unsupported by ample evidence. Lawyers would be surprised if they knew how little effect all their dramatic byplay and frenzied rhetoric has in influencing the verdict of a jury. "Popular government"—in the words of Senator Root—"is organized self-control," and organized self-control does not countenance slander or indulge in sweeping, unproven condemnations.

KILLING THE TARIFF BOARD.

The Democrats in the House of Representatives have illustrated their fondness for darkness and their dislike of light by voting against an appropriation to enable the tariff board to continue its work. The Democratic Ways and Means Committee in formulating a tariff practically invited its Republican members to keep away.

Congressman Redfield of New York said that he had no use for the tariff board, that its report on the cotton schedule did not, in his opinion, contain evidence of its absolute correctness. Yet, as an evidence of the correctness of the report of the board, it appeared that a company which was doing an $8,000,000 business was examined by the board, which proceeded to estimate by the use of its table of cost the actual total cost of manufacture for the year to the company. The figures checked within $8.33 of the total amount of money expended by the company in manufacture during the year for which the tariff board made the estimate. In another case by the same method of computation the variation amounted to only $332 In every case the report showed that the companies examined agree, after a careful examination, that the figures given by the tariff board in its report on the cotton schedule and the cost of manufacture are correct.

Notwithstanding these facts which were given in a speech made by Congressman Malby of New York, Congressman Redfield and his colleagues combined to drive the tariff board out of existence by refusing the small appropriation necessary to enable it to go on with its labors.

The appointment of a non-partisan tariff board to ascertain the difference in the cost of producing goods abroad and at home was in accordance with the national Republican platform, which declared that customs duties should be so adjusted as to cover that difference. A higher tariff would be an injustice to the consumer. A lower one would be unjust to the American manufacturer and more than unjust to the American worker.

"A tariff," said Congressman Malby, "representing less than the difference in the cost of production would inevitably result in either lowering the wages of the employee to the point where the cost at home and abroad would again have to be equalized, or the importance of foreign-made goods would be inevitable, bringing about the complete destruction of our home industries, for a tariff which does not equal the difference between the cost at home and abroad is no better than no tariff at all so far as the effect upon our protected industries is concerned, for the results would be the same in either case."

The Democrats voted against continuing the labors of the tariff board because they do not want a scientific tariff framed for the protection of American labor. They want a tariff for revenue only, and that would necessarily be a tariff so framed as to increase importation of foreign goods; for the more foreign goods that were imported the greater the Federal revenue that would be collected at the customhouses, and the fact that this would decrease the wages of American operatives or else close American factories does not weigh with Democratic Representatives, for the manufacturing districts in the East are Republican, and Democracy looks to the purely agricultural districts and to the slum districts in the cities for its majorities.

SUGAR IN THE PHILIPPINES.

The admission of sugar free of duty will cripple, if not destroy, the growing sugar industry in the Philippine Islands. The provincial junta of Pampanga have addressed a petition to Congress in which they state that free sugar would inflict a severe blow upon Philippine sugar, considering the distance from the islands to the United States as well as the defects in its present manufacture, due to lack of centrales, good machinery and other elements for the production of sugar.

The protestants call attention to the fact that after the approval of the Payne bill the cultivation of sugar in the Philippines was greatly stimulated, much land being put under cultivation which had previously been abandoned on account of the low price of sugar. They say that the mere announcement of the presentation of the bill declaring free the entrance of sugar into the United States from all points of origin has lowered the quotation price of sugar in the Philippine markets 30 per cent. and, as a result of this drop in prices, the sugar market of the Province of Pampanga has been almost completely paralyzed.

It should be the policy of Congress to foster the cultivation of the land and increase the product of our remote island possessions. Prosperity is a better promoter of loyalty than fleets or armies. The Democratic demand that we should "give up" the Philippines has not been heard of late years. Indeed the proposition to shift the white man's burden from our own shoulders to those of England, or Germany, or France never did meet with an enthusiastic reception even from Democrats. Whether wisely or not we incurred political and moral responsibilities in acquiring those islands of which we could not divest ourselves if we would, and those responsibilities can best be discharged by legislating so as to enhance and not destroy the material prosperity of the Filipinos.

One advantage is to be gained from the fact that the revolution is on in Mexico. It stimulates the study of geography. Names are constantly appearing in the news that the average man did not know existed.

What has become of the old-fashioned mother who was not afraid to feed her baby in public?

HIRAM JOHNSON AND POLITICAL TRICKERY.

Why should Gov. Johnson raise the cry of "thief" in connection with the seating of the two Taft delegates from the Fourth Congressional District, in view of the fact that "Hi" was party to a deliberate attempt to steal the entire delegation?

It is recognized the world over that every organization has the absolute and unqualified right to prescribe the manner of selecting its delegates. It has always been the rule of the national conventions for years to select its delegates by Congressional districts. Obviously it is the only fair way. There are but two geographical divisions applying to the Federal government, the Congressional United States Senatorial and judicial districts. Because of their size and the fact that frequently a judicial district includes more than one State it would be impracticable to select delegates to a national convention from a judicial district. Gov. Johnson and his associates organized a deliberate conspiracy to thwart the right of the residents of the various Congressional districts to select delegates to the national convention by providing for a State-wide Presidential preference primary.

The crafty Governor had a reason for ignoring the national convention's method. When Johnson was elected it was the vote of Southern California that elected him. Now if the voters were given the recognized right to vote for Presidential delegates by Congressional districts, and the vote had been relatively the same as it was when Johnson was elected, all of the country north of the Tehachepi would have sent Taft delegates to the Chicago convention, and the delegates from Southern California would have been Roosevelt delegates. But under the State-wide primary as forced by Johnson and his associates, the majority in Southern California would have made the entire delegation a Roosevelt delegation.

Johnson's political offense is none the less serious because of the fact that in the primary election only one Congressional district went for Taft. If the vote had been the same as when Johnson was elected and the delegates had been selected by Congressional districts Johnson's self-created boom for Vice-President would have hit the slide long before it did.

It is certainly a violation of the principle embodied in the slogan, "Let the people rule," to cut out district representation and have the delegates elected at large. The unit rule, which allowed the majority of a State delegation to vote the whole delegation one way, was fought to a finish in the early eighties. The effect of the unit rule was the same as that of electing all the delegates at large. It deprived localities of their individual preferences and made them support men or measures that they were opposed to. The closer the representation can be brought to the voters the greater the influence such voters will have in the government. Let the people rule in fact instead of in name only.

About the most absurd bit of inconsistency is Johnson's criticism of the "steam roller." Has he forgotten how two years ago when he was a candidate for Governor the delegates in the Los Angeles county convention were ignored and a hand-picked delegation was selected in the interests of Johnson? The delegates were elected by Assembly districts; but instead of the convention's being allowed to nominate the delegates to the State convention this power was autocratically given over to a committee named by Johnson's chairman.

Again a primary was held by legislative districts for the selection of a United States Senator. A. G. Spalding carried a majority of the legislative districts, but he was ignored by Johnson and his crowd who in characteristic "steam-roller" fashion defied the vote of the people and elected Works to the Senate.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

A conference was held yesterday between Councilmen and representatives of the Pacific Electric to discuss the proposed San Pedro-street franchise, and it is probable the ordinance will be presented Tuesday.

Councilman Reed is shaping a plan to be presented to the City Council for its indorsement on Tuesday whereby the old State Normal School grounds may be purchased for the municipality.

An attorney representing a defeated faction in a fight for a $200,000 estate is preparing to show in the Superior Court that the woman who was awarded the fortune has never fully established her identity as the niece of the woman whose property she claims.

SHAPING PLANS FOR SAN PEDRO STREET FRANCHISE.

Conference Held Yesterday May Result in Definite Proposal Going Before the Council on Tuesday Looking to Relief of Crowded Situation on Main Street.

It is probable the long-discussed San Pedro-street franchise will be presented to the City Council Tuesday. Councilman Lusk, who heads the special committee incharge, stated yesterday that he hopes to have the ordinance ready.

A conference was held in the offices of the City Attorney yesterday forenoon by Councilman Lusk and Topham, Vice-President Shoup of the Pacific Electric and Attorney Hill of that company and Chief Deputy City Attorney Robertson. Councilman Reed, who has taken an active part in previous conferences on the San Pedro-street franchise, was absent.

It is understood that at this conference, some modifications of the former plans were discussed and may be adopted, and that the ordinance, when finally presented to the Council will provide that the Pacific Electric be given a franchise on San Pedro street from Ninth street to the Plaza and also on Los Angeles street, and that there will be no provisions as to any exact time at which the line on Los Angeles street shall be built, but a provision that the company shall vacate San Pedro street on one year's notice, and upon receipt of such notice from the city, shall then have the privilege of building on Los Angeles street, provided it has not by that time prepared to use a private right of way to the Pacific Electric building.

While the San Pedro-street line is to be constructed by the Pacific Electric, the Los Angeles Railway Company is to have the right to use it from Fourth street to the Plaza, if the previously-discussed plan is followed in the ordinance that may be presented Tuesday. The construction and operation of this line will greatly reduce the congestion on Main street.

Want City to Purchase.

The movement to adopt some plan whereby the old State Normal School site can be purchased for the city when it is put up for sale on July 5 has been considerably discussed at the City Hall and in other quarters during the past few days. The Mayor and City Council are on record as favoring this purchase, and Councilman Reed is working on a plan which he will probably present to the Council next Tuesday. Meanwhile the subject is being discussed favorably in club circles, and F. W Blanchard, president of the Allied Art Movement, consisting of representatives of about forty clubs of this city, has called a meeting of this association for 11 o'clock tomorrow forenoon to consider some plan whereby this property may be secured for the city.

Plans for Playgrounds.

Plans are being prepared for a general schedule of public playground events for the summer months, and these will include several novelties. The general attendance at the playgrounds has increased 100 per cent. over that of last season. This is attributed to the fact that many parents have become interested in the work and have taken a deeper interest in sending their children to these playgrounds. Plans have been made to keep the Violet, Echo and Downey playgrounds open forenoon, afternoon and evening, beginning the first of July, and all other playgrouds will be kept open afternoons and evenings. The swimming club, which is composed of boys from all the playgrounds, is to have a series of "hikes" during the season, one of which will be to the swimming pool in the Arroyo Seco at Pasadena, and another to one of the beaches, with an overnight camp midway on the trip. The Playground Commission is preparing a float for the municipal parade on July 3. This will represent a playground with a baby swing, a sand pile, etc., and there will be a dozen children playing on the float.

In Big Demand.

The demand for the city's building ordinance has been so great that more than 5000 copies have been distributed since March 1, 1910, from the building department at the City Hall, and in addition to this several printing-houses and publications have gotten out pamphlets containing this ordinance. The City Clerk is to be asked to print 3000 additional copies of the ordinance to supply the demand.

City Hall Brevities.

More than 31,000 barrels of oil have been used during the year for street sprinkling, and contracts have just been awarded for 10,000 barrels additional. The street department has used 750 tons of crushed rock in street repairs during the year.

Further developments on the city's garbage situation are awaiting a settlement of the mix-up at the City Hall. Commissioner Humphreys of the Board of Public Works is ready to start on his trip to eastern cities to investigate garbage disposal systems as soon as there is some settlement of the present difficulties between this board and the Harbor Commission; but as one of the demands on the Mayor is that the entire Board of Public Works be requested to resign, Humphreys thinks it the part of discretion to postpone starting on his trip.

Requests for restoration of old street names in place of the names arbitrarily adopted by the Council, on suggestion of the Board of Public Works and the City Engineer continue to be filed with the City Clerk. In working out the scheme of renaming streets in the territory recently acquired by the city, the City Engineer has undertaken to give streets with names duplicating those already within the city the names of other streets with which they are in line, although they may have no direct connection. When property owners have understood this plan in some cases they have withdrawn their objections.

House Court Situation.

The Housing Commission has made a summary of the work accomplished in regulating housecourts in this city from the establishment of the commission in 1907 to June 15 of this year. This shows that eight house courts, housing fifty-seven inhabitants, have been vacated; twenty-eight, housing 215 inhabitants, have been demolished; fifty, housing 225, have been abolished, and 241 are now active. An additional inspector has been secured this week and during the ensuing week he will take up the inspection of house courts at Gardena, Wilmington and San Pedro.

At the Courthouse.

AN OLD FIGHT TO BE REVIVED.

ANOTHER CONTEST FOR FORTUNE AWARDED WOMAN.

Attorney for the Contestants Asserts Successful One Never Fully Established Her Identity as Niece. A Blacksmith's Big Earnings and Fortune.

A fight for the estate of Mrs. Matilda Walden, who died in 1903, leaving property worth $200,000, which was decided by Judge Rives in favor of Mrs. Martha Monroe, an Irish claimant, is warming up for another bout.

The statement of the case to be used on the motion for a new trial in July, was settled by Judge Willis yesterday and Attorney Galusha, who represents the contestants, is preparing to show that Mrs. Monroe never fully established her identity as the niece of Mrs. Walden.

Galusha alleges that Mrs. Monroe, who lives in Baily Connell, Ireland, and who received one-half of the estate, did not make herself known as Mrs. Walden's nearest-living relative until a year after the latter's death. He will also endeavor to confute her deposition, sent from Ireland, that her husband was an English soldier and lost his life in battle.

The identity of Mrs. Monroe will be fiercely attacked on new evidence that Galusha says he has discovered. The fight at the previous trial was between the Irish and the American litigants, the former winning. The coming fight will be between the Irish factions, one side being led by Mrs. Monroe, and the other clan by the Lattimers.

Mrs. Walden is best known as the sister of John Wilson, a blacksmith, who accumulated a fortune by investing his earnings in real estate. In the early days, Wilson charged $5 for shoeing a horse.

CITY GETS PART. RESERVOIR CASE DECIDED.

Judge Wilbur decided yesterday that the city has forfeited about fourteen acres of the twenty-four known as Reservoir No. Five, but is entitled to hold the rest under the conditions of a deed granted by John S. Griffin in 1878. The deed recited that in case the city ceases to use the land for a dam or reservoir, it shall revert to Griffin.

Suit was brought by John Griffin Johnson, a grandson, claiming the property on the ground that the city had ceased to use it for reservoir purposes. The testimony showed that certain ditches were being used and the decision of the court is that the city can only claim part of the grant.

The court found that all of the land west of Mission road, formerly used as a portion of the reservoir, is no longed used and the title is therefore forfeited. Johnson waived his claim to the land now used as Mission road, so long as it is a graveled road.

The city showed title by a certificate of Sheriff's sale subject to redemption and practically has a lien on that portion of the property which the court's decree declares forfeited.

COURT DISMISSES WRIT. STOCK REMAINS IN PLEDGE.

The alternative writ of mandate asked for by Kimball Fletcher, trustee for A. B. Hoag, to compel the Eucalyptus Estates Company to issue 1198 shares of the stock of the company to Hoag on a judgment obtained in another suit, was dismissed by Judge Willis yesterday.

The judgment had been obtained by Hoag against C. H. Teeter, president of the company, and execution followed. The stock was bought in and the company refused to issue it for the reason that it had been pledged with various banks. The court held that the company had no right to issue the stock which remains in pledge, and dismissed the action.

Fletcher, who is an attorney, represented himself, and Attorney Burnell was counsel for the respondent.

SUIT FOR ALIENATION. HUSBAND SEEKS DAMAGES.

W. H. Paulin is named as defendant in a suit filed yesterday by A. D. Seixas, charging alienation of the affections of the latter's wife, Blanch Seixas. He asks $25,000 for the loss of his wife's love and care.

The complaint aleges that Paulin furnished Mrs. Seixas with money and in letters he wrote to her impressed upon her his great love.

Seixas alleges that Paulin and Mrs. Seixas went to Murrieta Hot Springs April 6, last, remaining a week. She left her husband May 28.

Seixas also filed suit for divorce, charging desertion.

COURTHOUSE NOTES. BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

TAKES NEW NAME. The Cook's Auto Tour Corporation petitioned the court yesterday to have the name changed to the Golden State Auto Tour Corporation. It bases the reason on the ground that confusion has arisen from a similarity of names, there being a Cook's Tours, "and the Cook's Auto Tour Corporation."

The Inferior Courts.

MISUNDERSTOOD IS HER PLEA.

WOMAN ALMOST FAINTS WHEN SENTENCED TO JAIL.

After Explanation Justice Reverses Himself and Sets Case for Hearing—First Speeder Fined Under the Muffler Ordinance. Drunken Chauffeur Admits Charge.

Laboring under such suppressed excitement that she was unable to control herself sufficiently to permit her to speak audibly Justice Rose misunderstood the plea of not guilty to a statutory complaint, filed against her by her former husband, and sentenced Mrs. E. R. Abbott to sixty days in jail yesterday. The woman almost fainted, and clutched at the bench in front of her to keep from falling to the floor. She was steadied by her attorney, who called the court's attention to his inadvertent mistake. The justice apologized, and passed her case to be set on August 12. Mrs. Abbott was permitted to go on the $250 bail she gave when arrested. Frank Cox, arrested on a similar complaint, also sworn to by Abbott, pleaded not guilty, and his case was continued to the same date. Mrs. Abbott obtained a divorce last November and he is understood to be maintaining their two children.

Three Dollars for Noise.

Bob Arthur, No. 514 West Sixteenth street, enjoys the questionable distinction of being the first person to be arrested and prosecuted for violating the new ordinance relative to operating a motor-driven vehicle with the muffler open. He was arrested by Motorcycle Officers Harlan and Walls, while mounting the Grand-avenue hill. Arthur said he was testing out the machine for another man, and that the muffler has a hole in its side. He was fined $3 by Police Judge Rose.

Admits His Guilt.

Oscar Bacon of West Washington street, pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor charge of driving an auto while in a drunken condition, when arraigned before Justice Williams in the University Court, yesterday morning. Sentence was continued until tomorrow morning to enable the prosecution to produce eye-witnesses to the accident in which the defendant wrecked his machine when he collided with another driven by T. M. Bacon. The men were en route home from a beach resort.

Demurrer. Filed.

In each of the suits against the Pacific Electric Railway Company for $250 damages, for refusing to accept a 5-cent fare to Hollywood, the company filed a demurrer in the justice court yesterday, on the ground that the court lacked jurisdiction. There are fifteen of the actions.

OFFICE REORGANIZATION.

Police Chief Occupies New Suite at Central Station After Extensive Repairs to Building.

Chief of Police Sebastian and his private secretary, C. E. Snively, are back at the Central Station having moved yesterday from the temporary quarters in the Temple Block on North Main street where they were domiciled for several months while the regular suite at headquarters was being altered.

The Chief now has an inner private office which cannot be reached without first going through the outer office occupied by the secretary or an adjoining waiting-room which is fenced off with a railing. The quarters formerly occupied by the property clerk, who is now located in the basement, have been enlarged and arranged for the accommodation of the accountant of the police department.

Capt. Murray is now occupying his former quarters on the left of the main entrance to the station. Across the hall is located Lieut. Butler of the traffic squad, and the license inspector's office. Temporarily the desk sergeant has a suite of rooms in the rear of those occupied by the captain. When improvements in the the basement are completed the desk sergeant will move downstairs.

The matron's quarters, in a suite of rooms and cells on the second floor of the station over the tanks in the center of the building, are undergoing repairs. While these improvements are being made women prisoners will be kept at the East Side Station.

When the changes and improvements under way at the Central Station have been completed, entailing an expenditure of about $75,000, prisoners will not be unloaded from the patrols or autos on the sidewalk, the present custom, but will be carried direct to the door of the desk sergeant's office in the basement. This running along the east side of the suite will be reached by an alley building. A turntable is being installed to turn the cars that they may head out while waiting for a call.

HURT IN COLLISION.

TULARE June 22.—J. F. Doran, a pioneer businessman of this city, was knocked from his bicycle and seriously hurt this afternoon when he collided with a horse and buggy being driven by George A. Lewis an employee of the Santa Fe at this station. The accident occurred on Tulare street, Doran being thrown under the wheels of the buggy when his machine was hurled to the side of the street by the force of the impact.

SULPHURRO

Sulphurro Bath
A Health-Giving
Pleasing Luxury

Great Aid in Purifying System and Necessity in Fighting Disease.

C. M. C. Stewart Sulphur Co., Seattle.
Gentlemen: Rheumatism compelled me to retire from work. . . . I began at once using Sulphurro as directed, and in three days was back at work. . . . I continue using Sulphurro and have never enjoyed as good health as at present.
LAWRENCE LEED,
Purser Str. Atlanta.
Seattle.

One of the most delightful forms of the Sulphurro treatment is the Sulphurro bath. Softening and purifying the water, Sulphurro used in this manner is a health-giving luxury. It stimulates and invigorates the system when you are well; it is most beneficial in the quick cure of disease.

In bad cases of rheumatism or any kidney, skin or blood disease, the Sulphurro bath should be used. It is essential to keep the pores of the skin open and breathing, as they assist the kidneys in their function of throwing off waste matter. The baths also furnish another means of getting more Sulphurro into the blood.

The Sulphurro bath is a necessity in the cure of disease; a rest for the fatigued and a luxury for all.

Each bottle of Sulphurro is accompanied by an interesting 32-page booklet. This booklet we will be glad to forward you upon request. Sulphurro at all druggists; bottles 50 cents and $1. THE C. M. C. STEWART SULPHUR CO., 71 Columbia st., Seattle.

DID THEY WORK IT THUS?

Persons Under Arrest for Fraud Charged With Clever Scheme to Secure Money by False Pretense.

One of the features of the scheme charged against W. L. Bessolo, the San Diego man, his wife, Felicia Bessolo, and L. J. Rice, assistant cashier of the American National Bank of San Diego, to use the United States mails to defraud, came out yesterday in the examination of one of the government witnesses. Charles W. Shaffer of San Diego, who testified before United States Commissioner Van Dyke that he was the owner of the subdivision of land known as Marion, nine miles south of San Diego, consisting of 384 lots.

Shaffer says he was approached by Bessolo for the gift of a lot for factory purposes, it being the scheme of the latter to pretend to erect a shop where his patent wrench should be manufactured. The witness said he agreed to give Bessolo a piece of land 96x312 feet for a factory site. Later on Bessolo and the witness entered into a contract by the terms of which Bessolo was to purchase 150 lots of the Marion subdivision, for which he contracted to pay $16,500.

Shaffer says that he secured $330 of the price agreed upon for three lots that Bessolo claimed to have sold. Afterward the matter was dropped as Bessolo made no other payments.

About the time that the money became due, Bessolo returned from a trip through Arizona, where he claimed to have been very successful selling stock in the projected wrench-making plant, and he gave Shaffer a list of thirty-six persons that he claimed had purchased stock and lots. The witness says he wrote to the men whose names and addresses had been given him by Bessolo, but heard nothing from them.

It is claimed by the government that Bessolo sold lots enough in the Marion subdivision to clean up $7000 cash and $27,000 in notes, in connection with sales of stock in the manufacturing concern, which he could not deliver to the purchasers because he has never paid anything except the amount above (covering the transfer of three lots,) on the property. The witness said efforts had been made by Bessolo to get the San Diego Chamber of Commerce interested in his scheme, but that body had refused to have anything to do with it.

HE'S FROM THE MULE BELT.

Patrolman Understands Missouri Hybrid and Gets Him Right Side Up When Many Others Fail.

Patrolman Martin qualified yesterday morning as an expert on matters pertaining to equine obstinacy when he succeeded in inducing a Missouri mule, which had laid down in front of the Hotel Hayward, to rise after a crowd of more than fifty persons had failed.

Martin, who hails from below the Mason and Dixon line, attributed the animal's failure to get up to the fact that it lay on its left side, and predicted that if the animal were turned over it would rise without being urged. His suggestion, at first jeered at, was carried out successfully.

Prominent in the crowd that gathered about the prostrate animal, which was attached to a van, was a heavy-set man with a flaming face. He was of the opinion that by twisting the mule's tail it would be forced to rise. This he did vigorously, but ineffectually. His efforts were greeted with cries of: "Whispers in its ear," and "Get a steam roller."

He was determined, however, and resorted to pulling the animal's tail, despite the warnings of the spectators and the raw-boned driver of the van. The latter declared the mule would revolt against such strenuous methods. Several women called him "a brute of a man," when the tail twister took an extra yank.

At this juncture Martin appeared. He smiled at the efforts of the red-faced man and others.

Every means suggested by spectators having failed, the driver of the van decided to adopt Martin's suggestion. Ropes were tied to the mule's hoofs and it was turned over on its right side. Martin gently kicked the animal in the side and it scrambled to its feet.

"MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY."

Naturalization Papers Taken From Italian Who Is Deported from Los Angeles and Country.

James Sapio, an Italian, who has been engaged in business in this city for about nine years, is the Philip Nolan of his time—the "Man Without a Country." Today Sapio will leave for New York under voluntary deportation orders, and will sail for Genoa next Saturday. When notice has been received from the Commissioner of Immigration at New York that Sapio is safely en route, Antonio Draga, an Italian girl with whom he was involved, will be released from the custody of the United States Marshal at San Bernardino and allowed to go her way.

Sapio was arrested on a white slave charge. In order to avoid prosecution, he agreed to surrender his naturalization certificate and go back to Italy. Being a little slow, a complaint was filed against him, alleging that perjury had been committed by his two witnesses and himself, in making affidavits in connection with his naturalization. Judge Wellborn ordered the cancelation of the naturalization certificate.

When Sapio became a citizen of the United States he renounced all allegiance to the King of Italy; and his certificate making him an American citizen has been revoked, so that in law he is a man without a country.

When Sapio arranged to return to Italy he made an effort to marry the girl, but she refused to have anything to do with him. Sapio cried copiously when she told him in the presence of Asst. United States Dist.-Atty. Regan that she would not be his wife, but she was obdurate.

BIRD THAT'S A BITER.

Has Nest on Courthouse Grounds and Viciously Tackles Persons Who Go Near.

There is a wild and excited blackbird that pecks at nearly every visitor to the Courthouse. Strangers hardly know what to make of it when they pass along the walk, to be assailed by a whirlwind of raven wings, but the bird keeps at it, pecking away at the coats and sleeves of judges and lawyers, officials and litigants, and seeming to be especially angered at the well-dressed couples who are trying to find Deputy County Clerk Sparks and get a marriage license.

Somewhere in the palms the bird has a nest with young in it. She is very jealous of the sanctity of that nest, and is wild with alarm when anyone comes near, which is every minute of the day during business hours at the Courthouse. Her manner of pecking at passers-by is not at all gentle, either, for she actually bites with her beak and flies over the man or woman, glaring with her golden-rimmed eyes as if she would like to eat them alive.

The bird seems to have taken an especial antipathy to Deputy Probation Officer Gibson and attacks him viciously every time he passes the palms, in one of which her nest is located. Yesterday, too, she went after Dr. W. R. Hendrickson of the National Funding Company, as he tried to investigate and find where her little home is. She flew at him and around him, hopped on the grass but a few feet from him, and every time he moved, jumped at his hat or his shoulder.

Whittier Man Almost Misses Securing Marriage License Because He Forgets His Spectacles.

Because John McBarnes, a Whittier mechanic, is near-sighted and lost his glasses, he nearly missed a marriage license yesterday morning.

'Neath Sylvan Shade.

GAMBOL OF GAMUTERS FRISKY AND FANCIFUL.

Gamut Club Jihks Grounds and President.

The sylvan scene is but a bit of the refreshing place where the unique celebration is to be held next Saturday and Sunday. F. W. Blanchard is the head of the organization.

THE MEMBERS of the Gamut Club, who are continually doing the unexpected, have arranged for a mid-summer night dream, which they have termed a "sylvan gambol," to be held in a genuinely Druidical grove of live oaks out Van Nuys-Lankershim way.

The time is next Saturday night and Sunday, and only genuinely dyed-in-the-wool Gamuters will be admitted to the jinks, which the club has dignified with the name of ceremonies.

For many weeks committees have been preparing a programme of sports and divertissements for the outing, which promises to be extremely unusual and interesting. Twelve thousand acres along the Los Angeles River, in the vicinity of Van Nuys and Lankershim have been secured and from the preparations being made every acre will be needed.

The stellar attraction will be Bronson's mission play, "California," written and composed expressly for the Gamut Club. A great stage has been built for the play and beneath the grove of live oaks a pageant will pass that will carry one back to the time of Father Junipero Serra and his band of Franciscan monks.

Several hundred members have made arrangements to go on the outing and will leave Saturday afternoon, remaining over night. A number of tents, cots and mattresses have been arranged for which will make the sleeping accommodations adequate.

In addition to the presentation of Bronson's play, there will be races, swimming and foot, mountain-climbing contests, tree climbing and certain mysterious contests the exact nature of which is not divulged to the uninitiated.

The play will have a cast of fifty. The Orpheus section of the Gamut Club will conduct that feature. Costumes of the proper period have been secured and the life and customs of the days of El Camino Real will be depicted.

A feature will be the reading of "The Legend of the Gamut," by Prof. Bronson, from which the following excerpt is taken:

"And placing in his hands the unstrung lyre
Bade him go forth the new world to inspire.
Then Orpheus with fiber firmly twined,
Strung his mute lyre to harmony refined,
And on its Gamut, music's subtle scale,
Caught the sweet cadence of the nightingale:
And what of old had been discordant sound
Was tuned into a symphony profound.
He then in trust, that all might make it theirs,
Bequeathed his art to his devoted heirs."

The "Sylvan Dell," or tract of 12,000 acres, will be policed by officers of the club, and only members will be permitted on the restricted area.

F. W. Blanchard, president, is an active booster of the forthcoming jinks and says it will be similar to the famous high-jinks of the Bohemian Club of San Francisco.

The spot that has been chosen is regarded as one of the most uniquely attractive in the vicinity of Los Angeles. A typical Spanish garden will be at the disposal of the Gamuters and relaxation and sport will reign.

Among those who are actively engaged in making the preparations for the outing are R. D. Wade, C. E. Pemberton, A. W. Francisco, L. E. Behymer, Harry R. Callender, C. B. McCollum, P. B. Dougherty, J. Baum, H. H. Livingston, W. E. Wing, Ben F. Field, Dr. G. W. Tape, C. E. Gilhousen, Joseph Dupuy, Benjamin Scovell, Charles W. Hatch, Arthur Alexander, Charles Demorest and W. E. Strowbridge.

The Simple Life.

PHILOSOPHER IS HERMIT-MINER.

STRANGE OLD MAN OF THE SAN GABRIEL CANYON.

Has Lived for Thirty Years in Queer Stone Hut and Shuns Civilization—Meets Party of Campers, First Persons Seen Since Fall. Reminiscences.

Old Bartoldo they call him. Nobody seems to know his first name, and certainly nobody cares. He is plain Bartoldo. That suits him and everyone else. He is the hermit of San Gabriel Canyon.

Last week Old Bartoldo was discovered by a party of campers who had gone for a hike from Camp Bonita. His cabin is at the fork of Cold Water Canyon. It is not a cabin of logs such as one expects to find in the mountains, but is constructed of rocks of all sizes, shapes and descriptions. It looks like a hit-and-miss antediluvian bungalow, and it is plastered with mud. Mud has the double virtue of being free to the mason and tolerably tenacious.

The walls of this hermitage are about two feet thick and the ceiling is just high enough to hang a tin cup conveniently without bumping it down with your head. The interior isn't more than 8x10 feet and there are no windows, no chimney and only the one door; which is in keeping with the rest of the establishment. The whole interior is frescoed with the smoke of thirty years. For three decades Old Bartoldo has lived a solitary life here, raising vegetables and panning enough gold to buy flour and bacon.

The genius of the stone hut does his baking out of doors in an old-fashioned bake oven. Just within the doorway of his hut he has an iron stove, on which he does practically all of his cooking.

In this granite chalet Old Bartoldo is his own master and lives year after year a solitary life with only his pipe as a companion. He has a superb view of wild mountain scenery and is practically lord of all he surveys.

He seems happy. He finds his happiness in a philosophy that is at once the knowledge of the man of the world and the recluse. An Italian, educated, he speaks in addition to his native tongue, French English, Spanish and Arabic.

Three years ago Bartoldo left his beloved retreat for three days, and a year ago he was away for two hours. But he shuns the world and he doesn't propose to leave any oftener than fate forces him to. The campers who found him the other day are the first person he has seen since last Autumn.

"I am here because I am a wild man," he declared, removing his old pipe from his mouth and chuckling. "I'm a wild man, wild and free."

This wild man has been all over the world.

"Oh, this is the place for me," he laughed. "I live, I am happy—what more do I need, eh?

"I lived in town for twenty years, working at a trade. I didn't like it. There were too many persons, too much noise. It made me very tired.

"All the time I kept looking toward the mountains. I came up here for a week, and I stayed three months. I made up my mind to come up here and stay forever. And I came. You see me."

He waved his pipe at the cragged glen and smiled.

"It is good up here. It is near heaven. You live close to nature and God is your nearest neighbor. I took up a mining claim. I have plenty of water, shoot game enough to keep me supplied with fresh meats and raise all the vegetables I need. When I need money I get a little gold. It is in the creek."

Old Bartoldo puffed at his pipe with an air of contentment.

"Here we have the memories of long ago for companionship. Down yonder is the ruins of a camp of thirty years ago. It is called Los Mortos—the dead. Thirty years ago that camp was the center for all miners hereabouts—a Mexican pueblo of the mountains. It had stores, dance halls, saloons, shanties, and a church. To Los Mortos the miners went of a Saturday night and bartered away their gold for a night of drinking and gaming. On Monday mornings when the dawn was cold and the sun was still sleeping they would hit the trail for the 'diggin's' again. They got all the way from $5 to $20 and in some cases even $100 a day. Everyone made big money, and it was easy come, easy go. Now they are all gone. Only the memories are left—and the phantom of that reckless village.

"How did the camp get the name of Los Mortos? One time four miners came up here and made their camp at that point. It was dead winter. A raging storm came up. The river rose. All the miners but one had gone to sleep. He was reading in the tent. He heard the roaring of the river. He went to investigate and returned to the others with a frightened face. He tried to rouse them, but they told him to go away and let them sleep.

"He went away, but in a little while he was back again. He couldn't leave them. The river kept rising and the bank began to crumble. He tried to read again, but he was too nervous. He went to his companions and said:

" 'Come, come, the river is rising, the current is swift, and if we stay here we'll all be drowned.'

"The others refused to rouse themselves and he went away alone. Suddenly the bank gave way with a roar and the men in the tent were washed to their death.

"Next day the storm quieted and the solitary miner went by the trail over the mountain to another camp and told what had happened. A crowd of miners went back with him and they found and buried the three miners who had refused to flee. At the point where they were buried the village sprang up, and it was dubbed The Dead."

EXETER WOMAN AN HEIRESS.

Courts of St. Louis Declare Mrs. Itha Ballard Part Owner of Million Dollar Estate.

EXETER, June 22.—Mrs. Itha B. M. Ballard of this city, has been declared by the courts of St. Louis, one of the four heirs to an estate which is valued at $3,500,000 and the disposition of which has been in litigation since 1843. Mrs. Ballard is a member of the Chambers family to whom the estate was left.

Thomas Beatty, the grand father of the four Chambers children, went to St. Louis in an early day and acquired property in what is now the business district of St. Louis. In 1832 he mislaid the deed to the property and it was not until eleven years later, in 1843 that the papers were discovered again. He brought suit to quiet his title against the claimants. Beatty died and since that time the case has dragged through the courts year after year like the famous Jarndyce and Jarndyce. Under agreement half the estate goes to the firm of attorneys who have been fighting the case for the past eight years. The other claimants are Miss Eva and Miss Virginia Chambers of Visalia and L. Chmbers of Oakland.

HOST A SPEEDER, GUEST ACCUSER.

TRIAL HELD IN CLUBROOMS; VERDICT IS GUILTY.

Deputy City Prosecutor Takes Ride With Friend, Then Prepares Warrant Charging Violation of Traffic Ordinance—Indignation of Defendant.

The apparent nervousness of Deputy City Prosecutor Choate on an automobile trip to San Fernando May 18, gave the clue to members of the Metropolitan Club to hold Friday night a trial of Rudolph Rosenberg on a charge of having violated the speed law. As neither Rosenberg nor several of the club members were in the secret, the affair looked like a bona fide trial.

Rosenberg drove a Regal which contained Choate among others. He sent it along at a lively clip and Choate, being a public official, feared the consequence if a lurking Constable should arrest them. "But Rosenberg was proud of the car and was anxious to show its paces.

While Rosenberg was at the club last Friday evening a patrolman in uniform came in and read a warrant to him, citing him to appear before Police Judge Rose for speeding. Attorney Charles S. Burnell demanded to see the warrant and found it had been drawn by Choate and was regular.

The club members not in the secret, abetted by those who were, denounced the arrest as an outrage, and the air was full of remonstrances and bitterness. Choate was condemned, as a member of the club, for having taken advantage of Rosenberg, whose guest he had been on the auto trip.

The suggestion that Rosenberg be tried in the clubroom met with ready acquiescence. Attorney Vincent P. Morgan was selected as the judge; Attorney Burnell, assisted by Deputy Dist.-Atty. Richardson and Attorney Sorenson, represented Rosenberg. Choate conducted the prosecution. J. T. McBean and William Willis were appointed bailiffs. Clarence Hopkins was court stenographer. A jury was drawn with William Clark as foreman.

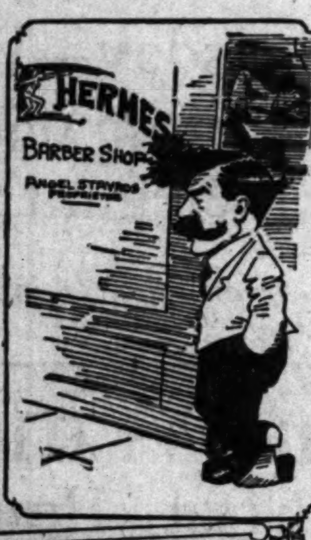
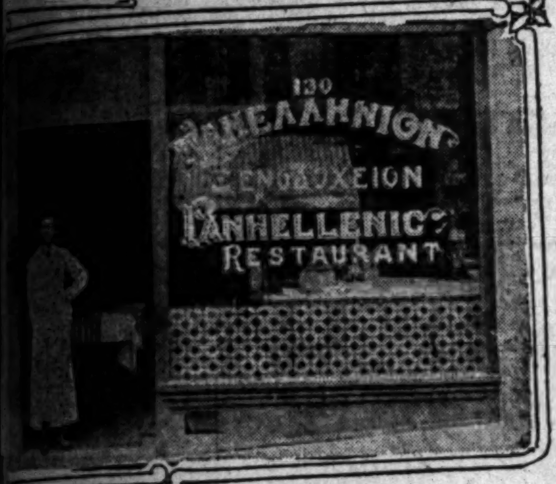
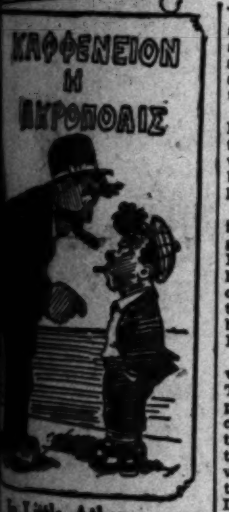
MAKING IT OFFICIAL.

The Parthenon Club, one of the well-known Greek organizations of the city, moved its headquarters to the corner of Fourth and Los Angeles streets, and then there was no doubt that Little Athens had selected this quarter of the city as its own.

From that time there has been a steady stream of Greek stores, restaurants and other business places appealing to the Greek established in that vicinity until at present there are more Greek places of business







In Little Athens.

quarter of Los Angeles, lished on East Fourth and rooming-houses in the few squares between Main and Wall streets on East Fourth than are in all the rest of Southern California together.

Strange scenes are enacted on East Fourth street during the night. Then the many hundreds of boys who work in the bootblack stands and barber shops gather at the cafes and listen to the orders of their padrones.

The Greeks look forward to a rapid increase in their number in Los Angeles with the completion of the Panama Canal. Hundreds of them have friends and relatives who are only awaiting the opportunity to travel cheaply by an all-water route before they will become colonists of Little Athens.

The Greeks resent being classed with other foreign colonies here. They point to the fact that their places of business are truly Americanized and not to be compared with the mercantile establishments in Little Tokio, Chinatown, the Russian village or Sonoratown. They say they are not "one of the sights of Los Angeles," but that they are an addition to the commercial life.

NARY A SALOON.

But the fact is, that quarter is different from the others. There is not a saloon in that section owned by a Greek. The Greeks drink coffee and a lot of it, but seldom patronize barrooms. They are partial to the light California wines and are second only to the Italians in this respect.

It is a common occurrence to pass along East Fourth street after nightfall and hear issuing from one of the little poorly lighted cafe or coffee-rooms the strain of the "Sextette from Lucia" or some other equally superb classic. The Greeks love music with an abandon that is only equaled by the Italians and in their little cafe's and coffee-rooms are nightly heard orchestral playing whic would put to shame some of the more ambitious big cafes or hotels. Men play here for the love of it and not for money and after the light California wine has passed around several times the music will begin. It is contributed by the guests or patrons, for there is no paid orchestra. The much-maligned accordion is the favorite instrument and the American who looks with disdain on this contrivance of reeds and bellows should spend half an hour in one of these Greek cafes or coffee-rooms and listen to many of the most famous classics rendered in a manner that sets the blood tingling and recalls memories of some long-cherished night at grand opera when the music crept up close and whispered of the actuality of many of the grand myths of Greece and Italy when men were near-gods and the gods themselves lived just at the top of Olympus.

SURVIVAL OF ART.

In several of these Greek cafes there will be a little piece of statuary in the corner, perhaps a bit dirty from much handling, but still a real work of art and not a plaster copy.

Greeks love their art and cherish the memory of what Greece was once, but they have a happy faculty of mingling with this lose of art a commercial shrewdness that makes the best and most minute figuring of the Japanese appear bungling and wasteful.

The Greek boys have practically driven the colored boys out of the bootblacking and scrubbing business. There is a system about this work that has its headquarters in this New Athens. The older Greeks come to Los Angeles and bring a score of boys said to be above the legal limit. The older Greek with a little capital secures by lease or purchase several of the most desirable bootblack stands and immediately places four or five of his boys at work. They know little English and are taught first of all to say "5 cent, pleese."

Youthful, Wrinkleless Skin Easy to Have

(Elberta Reid in Woman's Tribune.)

You who desire to regain a youthful appearance will do well to make the acquaintance of the two simple, but valuable, prescriptions here given.

To make an effective wrinkle-chaser, mix an ounce of saxolite and a half-pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in the solution—immediately every wrinkle is affected. It acts wonderfully on sagging facial muscles, also, the lotion possessing remarkable astringent and tonic properties.

To get rid of an aged, faded or discolored complexion, buy an ounce of common mercolized wax at any drugstore and apply nightly as you would cold cream, erasing this morning's with soap and water. This will slowly absorb the undesirable surface skin, revealing the younger, brighter, healthier skin underneath. I know of nothing to equal thi streatment as a facial rejuvenator.

Be Especially Careful About Your Drinking Water In Summer

If You Drink Puritas Distilled Water You Need Not Be Afraid to Drink As Much As You Wish.

During the summer months everyone drinks more water than in the other seasons combined. For this reason the idea has long been prevalent that moderation should be employed. The idea is well based, for thousands of persons invite disease by consuming large quantities of water of doubtful nature.

If you are not absolutely sure about your drinking water, it will be as well for you to drink sparingly of it this summer.

But the point is, there is no reason for any uncertainty whatever. You can have water that is absolutely pure at very little cost.

PURITAS Distilled Water is absolutely pure, not a mineral water. It is distilled by the most advanced processes known and aerated with pure Ozone. It reaches you in a thoroughly clean container, sealed at the plant.

Let us send you a five-gallon demijohn of PURITAS Distilled Water. It will cost you just 40 cents, delivered to your door, if you reside within the old city boundary lines. If you live beyond the old boundaries, the charge is a trifle more, of course. County residents are supplied by our agents, though we will supply you direct from our plant if you are unable to find an agent in your vicinity.

Telephone our office, or send us your name and address on a postal. Just say, "Send me a demijohn of PURITAS." We will fill your order promptly. Los Angeles Ice and Cold Storage Co. Phone Home 10053, Sunset Main 8191.

STEMS TIDE OF "PHONY" CHECKS.

CONSTABLE DISCOVERS SCHEME TO MAKE EASY COIN.

Worthless Paper Is Cashed Day It Is Drawn and Raid on Merchants Is Thought to Have Been Prevented—How the Game Was Worked.

The presentation of a check for $42.35 to the Security Trust and Savings Bank the same day it was drawn, is believed by Constable Woodbury to have prevented an extensive raid on the merchants of this city by worthless check passers.

Evidence has been secured by Woodbury and Deputy Kahn of a carefully-laid plot for the wholesale issuance of spurious paper, in which at least two, and probably three, men were engaged. Good descriptions of the men have been obtained and they are said to have police records.

Two men applied last Tuesday to the Parker House, No. 409 East Fifth street, for a room. One of them registered as B. L. Stevens, and told the landlady that he would receive several telephone calls soon. He handed er a card, and later returned with another business card, on which appeared the name of R. B. Young and Company with the telephone number of the Parker House in one corner. The card gave the business of the firm as general contracting.

A Main-street furnishing-goods house cashed the check for $42.35 last Wednesday on the Security Bank It was signed "R. B. Young and Company," and made payable to S. L. Slater. The indorsement was in the name of Slater. The handwriting of the signature to the check, and of Slater is the same as that signed to the Parker House register by Stevens. Across the face of the check is a rubber stamp impression reading, "R. B. Young and Company, General Contractors."

"We expect any day to hear of dozens or more of these checks," said Woodbury, "for the men had prepared for big business. They evidently took the alarm last Wednesday, for while two of them returned to the Parker House that evening, they left before morning. Their bed had not been slept in.

HELP CATCH SPEEDERS.

Chief of Police Appeals to Citizens to Report Recklessness of Drivers of Automobiles and Motorcycles.

Chief of Police Sebastian has appealed to the general public to assist him and his officers in the suppression of speeders and reckless drivers of motor vehicles. With the public's co-operation, he said yesterday, he hopes to secure a sufficient number of arrests and convictions to have a deterrent effect upon others who persist in violating the traffic ordinance.

The Chief asks that when a person sees a chauffeur or driver of a motorcycle exceeding the speed limit, or propelling their vehicle in a reckless manner, that they either swear to a complaint against the alleged offender, or take down the number of the machine and report the instance immediately at Central Station, or the nearest sub-police station.

If the evidence secured by the complainant is sufficient upon which to predicate a complaint, the driver will be arrested. If the convicting evidence is lacking, the driver will be summoned to headquarters, given a warning, and in the future his or her car or motorcycle will be watched carefully when seen upon the streets.

"We are determined to stop this reckless driving of autos and motorcycles," said the Chief yesterday. "The city is so large it is almost impossible for our force to watch all the machines all the time, while attending to regular duties. With the co-operation of the citizens, however, we can wage such a crusade against this recklessness and flagrant violation of the law as to make our streets safer than they are today."

BRAKES ON STEAM ROLLER.

Authority Says Mayor Won't Demand Wholesale Resignations of Commissioners.

It was stated yesterday by an authority close to the Mayor that His Honor will not ask for the wholesale resignations of the members of the Board of Public Works and the Harbor Commission Tuesday afternoon when the Hubbard matter comes up for further hearing.

Councilmen Reed and Andrews are urging the Mayor to run his steam roller through both offices and declare it the only way to bring about harmony in the present City Hall municipal mixup.

The Mayor refused to discuss the situation yesterday. He said he is devoting much of his time to careful consideration of the voluminous report of the Board of Public Works.

It is the consensus of opinion about the City Hall that the Mayor will not comply with the request of the Good Government Organization to remove both boards.

T. E. Gibbon and C. E. Richards of the Harbor Commission, and William M. Humphreys of the Board of Public Works intimated that the Mayor will not ask for further resignations.

Hubbard's friends are making a sturdy fight against his summary removal and it appears almost certain that the Council will refuse to sustain the Mayor when it comes to a vote Tuesday.

NORMAL COMMENCEMENT.

The commencement sermon to the graduates of the State Normal School will be preached this afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the Assembly Hall of the school, by Rev. Robert Freeman of Pasadena. The class-day exercises will be held tomorrow morning at 10:45, also in the Assembly Hall; the faculty reception will be held on the lawn on Tuesday afternoon, and the graduating exercises will be held in Temple Auditorium on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

MEXICAN SHOPLIFTERS?

Three Men Are Arrested on Charge of Having Looted Store—Carry Grip with Trap Door.

Three young Mexicans giving the names of Augustine Gararo, W. Laguna and Joe Martinez were booked on suspicion at the Central Police Station yesterday noon. They had in their possession a canvas telescope grip with a trap door on the under side. In it was found a pair of misses' tan shoes, valued at $3.50, seventeen yards of dress silk quoted at 49 cents a yard, and seventeen yards priced at 39 cents a yard.

It is charged by the management of a department store in which the three were arrested that while one man carried the grip the others picked up what articles they could and slipped them through the trap door into the grip. A fourth member of the alleged gang of shoplifters escaped.

THIS CHAUFFEUR FINED.

Charles A. Daley, a one-armed chauffeur who holds a stand for an automobile on Spring street, was fined $50 yesterday, for running his machine through the streets, at about 5 o'clock yesterday morning, at a speed in excess of twenty-five miles an hour. Patrolman Fulton endeavored to arrest him, but he got away by dodging him in a Seventh-street hotel and was recognized on the street several hours later and arrested. It is said an effort will be made to have the license revoked for his stand.

FAVOR ONE BUILDING.

VISALIA, June 22.—Members of the supervisorial family of Tulare county favor a single building for California at the 1915 exposition and so expressed themselves at the meeting of the county board this afternoon. Several county Boards of Trades have endeavored to interest Tulare in a proposition to have three buildings, one for Southern California, one for the San Joaquin and one for the Northern State, and there was a strong sentiment at one time in this county favoring a Tulare building. The offers to have Tulare join in the move for a San Joaquin Valley structure, received little consideration, since it was deemed impossible for Tulare to make a showing as against the immense amount of money that could and would be spent by the counties of the Southern California district.

JOY SEASON ON, GAY IS AVALON.

BRILLIANT THRONGING PLACE OF THE BON-TON.

Where Beauties Foregather and Fishermen Live in Paradise. Also the Swapper of Piscatorial Yarns—Bunting, Lanterns and Fireworks for Opening.

Her Adorable Majesty, the Princess of Summer, will open the season of gaiety in her maritime principality, the Isle of Summer, otherwise known as Catalina Island, this afternoon. A band of thirty-two pieces will strike up a tuneful air, and Avalon will come into her own.

And Avalon is in holiday attire for the occasion. Every building is bright with Chinese lanterns, flags and bunting. Fireworks and red, green and blue lights will add to the brilliance of a moonlit evening and the waters of the bay and the surrounding cliffs and jagged peaks will be revealed. The three-month season of joy will be on.

The little town, which has a winter contingent of about 500 souls, is to be transformed into a pulsating summer-sea of 10,000 vacationists.

The hotel piazzas and principal streets will be gay with the beauty and fashion of the world this summer. Avalon is stylish during its summer season and the latest Parisian creations are as common on Ocean avenue as on Fifth avenue, New York.

Members of the Ananias Club are beginning to congregate and the conversation drifts to things piscatorial. There are no Democrats Republicans or Populists at Avalon. It is the yellowtail zone and "Big Sticks," "Steam Rollers" and fanciful political nostrums melt away before the word wars on bait, rods, reels and various lines used for the big game fish.

On the awning-covered seats of the fishermen one meets all of the local celebrities, Mexican Joe, who has been on the island forty years; Billy Bruen, who is invested with certain rights and privileges; Hugo and his famous dogs, which are said to catch flying fish.

And there is "Teddy," one of the most remarkable characters on the island. Twenty years ago "Teddy" owned a large coffee and tea plantation in Ceylon, bordering on Sir Thomas Lipton's famous plantation. He had 500 coolies working for him. Today you'll find him rowing about in a glass-bottom boat, describing to his patrons the goings and comings of aquatic life in the clear waters below. He suffered financial reverses, lost his fortune and went to Avalon to replenish his exechequer. "Teddy" is a graduate of Elizabeth College, Isle of Guernsey, and is highly educated. He looks much like Roosevelt and seems proud of the resemblance.

Another unique character is "Chicken Johnny." He has been on the island nearly thirty-five years and has not visited the mainland in that time. A few weeks ago he was offered a pass to Los Angeles and free tickets to the theaters, but he declined. He owns a small ranch near the golf links.

The biggest man in Avalon is the fellow who can land the biggest fish. Down by the musical sands and on the piers one hears the piscatorial gossip of the day-stories of big yellowtails, monster jewfish taken on a light rod and many more.

Spearing flying fish on the wing is keen sport at Avalon these days. It is a sport peculiar of Catalina.

The flying fish dash here and there in the calm water when chased by the seals and big fish and often fly on the piers. In several instances they have landed on Ocean avenue several hundred feet from the shoreline—so it is said.

The spearmen stand on the piers and when they see the fish darting through the water or flying in the air hurl their sharp five-tonged spears, attached to a long rope. The piers are crowded at night with tourists watching the spearmen at work under the glare of the huge electric lamps. The flying fish are atracted by the light.

The flying fish holds its fins rigid, the motive power being the tail, which acts as a screw propeller, driving the fish out of the water with a force that causes the entire body to vibrate.

Fishing has been poor at Catalina for several months but is looking up.

HOUSEHOLD SHOW EFFECTIVE.

Home Duties Made Easy by Modern Devices Now on Exhibition in Local Storeroom.

A "household show" consisting of a number of well-equipped demonstration booths has drawn thousands of interested women to the main floor of the Parmelee-Dohrmann Company store on South Broadway during the past week. The exhibition has been so successful that it is determined to continue it for another week.

The exhibition consists of booths devoted to practical and, in many cases, new, devices in household economy such as the constantly-developing electrical contrivances by means of which the housework of the future is to be accomplished.

The novelty booth, where edibles are made to take on the most unusual shapes; the aluminum booth, showing a striking variety of cooking utensils of this material; vacuum cleaners, fireless cookers, and other appliances are among the attractive features.

The exhibits were selected by Manager Tuttle and the decorations are the work of the store's decorator, D. E. Smith. The "Household Show" is open to the public from 9 a.m. until 5:30 p.m., daily. The fireless cooker demonstrations start at 10 o'clock and the various foods prepared are served during the afternoon.

EAT IN STATE, AND BY STATE.

UNIQUE ARRANGEMENT FOR A GREAT BANQUET.

Big Doings Planned by the Federation of State and Provincial Organizations—Guest List Limited to One Thousand—Talk of a Million-Dollar Home.

The third great banquet of the Federation of State and Provincial Organizations is announced for Thursday evening at the Hamburger Cafe. The guest list is limited to 1000. The banquet will bring together the sixty State organizations in Southern California, and is the rallying point in the year's work marked by a programme of speaking and entertainment and affording unusual opportunity for an interstate exchange of ideas.

The dinner this year will be of especial interest, for in nearly every instance the several societies have enjoyed remarkable growth, and the Executive Committee of the federation is considering the advisability of erecting a $1,000,000 home on some convenient downtown site, a definite proposition to this end having been made by the Los Angeles Investment Company.

Arrangements for the Thursday-night banquet contemplate turning the dining-hall into a miniature map of the United States. For instance, if a visitor comes from the Northeast, he will find his compatriots and his plate in a corresponding section of the room. State banners will be much in evidence and the societies are practicing their respective "yells."

The officers are R. W. Richardson, president; M. W. Fleming, first vice-president; Miss Bertha N. Campbell, second vice-president; C. H. Parsons, secretary, and M. M. Davison, treasurer. President Richardson will tell of the aims and purposes of the federation in his opening address. Rev. Frank M. Dowling is to be the toastmaster; Mayor Alexander will make the address of welcome; Mrs. M. W. Law of Wisconsin will respond to the toast, "Woman," and Lieut.-Gov. Wallace is expected to deliver an address on "Patriotism." Dr. Hughes of Pasadena has been assigned the pleasant subject, "California."

The musical portion of the programme will be cared for by Mrs. Princess C. Long, who will sing a number of the songs of yesterday, and Messrs. Hogg and Black are down for bagpipe duets. The tickets have been placed at $1 and the committee expects that every seat will be engaged early in the week. These tickts may be procured from the State officers, federation headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce building, Hamburger's store, the California Savings Bank, the City and County Bank, and the Lindsey Music Store.

GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21.—It was so hot in Chicago that some of the warmth reached us. It made a few of us hot in the collar to read that Roosevelt leaders formally decided that Frank Heney was a firebrand and for that reason should not fire up the convention. A special thermometer would have been needed to register Heney's physical state at this ultimatum.

Business men were hoping that after the Chicago convention was over trade would pick up and bank accounts fatten. It looks now as though the trouble has only begun. Everybody is talking politics and nobody is talking business. Here and there some citizen is found conversing to himself about some meeting that is to be held in Baltimore.

Of late years people have been referring to Dr. C. C. O'Donnell as the "poor old doctor." Now that the gentleman has died this term must be changed. His estate sums up to the handsome total of about half a million acquired by judicious investments and the progressive practice of medicine.

Elizabeth C. Smith sues John Zerman, realty dealer, for $10,000, alleging that he failed to keep his promise of marriage. She had bought a wedding trousseau for $500 and refrained from writing books for six months and so did not earn her usual bit of $3000. If Zerman does not do the right thing by her the grateful public ought to donate her a few thousands in consideration of her abstaining from printer's ink for half a year.

Dr. Snow of the State Board of Health has certainly committed les majeste and it may be political hari kari. He has publicly criticised Gov. Johnson for pocketing a bill requiring nine-foot bedsheets. When Hiram returns from Chicago, he may be hot enough to melt Snow into private life.

With more than its usual vigor, organized labor, through its leaders, is opposing the acceptance of $750,000 from Andrew Carnegie for a new library. The arguments against the gift would be humorous if they were not pathetic. The city administration has wisely accepted the offer and nine-tenths of the residents praise them for it.

Mr. Rush is in an awful hurry to build a bridge across to Goat Island He thinks that it is almost accomplished and is living up to his name in his mind at least. ANCIENT CASTLE BACK IN FAMILY.

A Descendent of Famous O'Neill Purchases Estate.

Great Rejoicing Over Event in County Tyrone.

Spirit of Reverence for the Fighting Earls Strong.

BY THOMAS EMMET.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

DUBLIN, June 22.—The ancient castle of the O'Neills, chieftains of Tir-Owen, which stands in the midst of a spacious park near Dungannon, has just been purchased by one of the descendants of Owen Roe O'Neill, the victor of Benburb. Another landmark restored to the "ould stock." There is great rejoicing in the County Tyrone, where the spirit of reverence for the famous family of fighting earls still flourishes. The new owner, John Douris, a justice of the peace and farmer, inherits the blood of Owen through his mother. He will assume the name O'Neill by patent.

Last year Roughan Castle, the family seat of the celebrated Sir Phelim O'Neill, was bought for $50,000 by another of the present generation of the race of Niall of the Nine Hostages, from whom all the O'Neills and the MacNeals are derived. The first MacNeill went to Scotland, stayed there and by dint of his elbow won himself a lairdship and many acres of good heather and barren bogland. In both of these cases the inspiration to recover the old halls of the original Irish nobility came from Americans and American dollars.

IRISH PEASANTS MOTOR.

The Irish peasant farmers are taking readily to the motor cars. So, too, is the Irish farmer's wife. Prosperous harvests have sent plenty of money into circulation through the four provinces. With new riches come new social responsibilities and the necessity of being genteel.

Mike Murphy, a contractor of Mallow, county of Cork, celebrated one of several repeated business successes by presenting his wife with an auto and a French chauffeur. Mrs. Murphy "read up" carefully before blossoming forth in her new grandeur. Then she invited Mrs. Hannah Clancy for a ride in the car.

"Whatever you do, Mrs. Clancy, don't talk to the 'shoffer' at all, not a word or a whisper to him, for it takes his mind off what he is doing."

So they started off at a rapid clip. The chauffeur went zip around the corner, and zip around another corner; sometimes the car would be on two wheels. Finally Mrs. Clancy touched the chauffeur on the back and said:

"Mr. Shoffer, I beg your pardon; I was told not to spake to you at all, but let me tell you that Mrs. Murphy hasn't been in the car for the last ten minutes."

ACTRESS YIELDS.

The leasing of the Dublin Theater Royal to a rival attraction, Vesta Tilley, very nearly upset the plans for the great meeting to be addressed in that house by Prime Minister Asquith. However, with tact and grace the vivacious Vesta gave way, and the Premier and Mr. Redmond can now go ahead with their arrangements.

There is no precedent for a British premier paying a visit of this kind during his term of office. Disraeli once intended doing so, but illness prevented him.

BANSHEE REAPPEARS.

The Banshee has re-appeared in Banagher. A priest in Tullamore vouches for the authenticity of the following story:

A young man named Tynagh decided on emigrating to America in opposition to the wishes of his mother, whose only son he was, and the morning on which he left home for Queenstown she refused to shake hands with him. The parting scene between the mother and son was a very sad one, and tears rained down the cheeks of the former, whose grief was agonizing. They parted, the mother still declining to take her boy's proffered hand, and saying she would not do so until his return, when she promised him a hearty handshake. He sailed on the ill-fated Titanic, and the moment the big ship went down Mrs. Tynagh heard a noise outside her house which startled her, and caused her to look towards the door. Just then she saw the figure of her son approaching her in the same attire he wore the morning he left. She wondered very much at his sudden return, and thinking he had changed his mind, with outstretched arms and gladness in her heart she rushed forth to embrace him, exclaiming, "Have you come back again, Tom?" when suddenly the figure vanished. Young Tynagh was among those who perished in the terrible disaster, and the sympathy of the district for miles around is extended to his widowed mother.

BERLIN, June 22.—While San Francisco is celebrating the opening of the Panama Canal with the world's fair, the nations of Europe will be marking the centennial anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo.

On all sides the hope is expressed that June of 1915 will find the world at peace, and notable Prussians have taken the lead in proposing a peace jubilee to stand as a symbol of the horrors of war and the blessedness of amity between civilized people. The suggestion is well received, distinguished French publicists noting the better understanding which now prevails between the republic and the descendants of the victors at La Belle Alliance and Gravelotte.

Headed by M. and Mme. Adolphe Brisson, about one hundred French peace advocates visited Waterloo recently and laid wreaths at the foot of Gerome's "Wounded Eagle." M. Jean Richepin, in the very house which the Duke of Wellington used as his headquarters throughout the battle, voiced the hope that France, England and Germany would for the future, use their cannon only against common enemies of civilization.

SHOOTING PIGEONS.

Pigeon-shooting is becoming the most popular sport of Hamburg. The International Pigeon-Shooting Club was recently founded and the traps are being attended by many notable German shots. Broad lawns surround the clubhouse, which is one of the very finest in the Fatherland. Among the charter members are the American Ambassador, J. G. A. Leishman, Prince Albert of Schleswig-Holstein and the Grand Duke Michael Mikhaylovich of Russia.

CLING TO GERMAN EAGLE.

While the governments of Great Britain and Germany are trying to get along on terms of brotherly love and friendship, it does not follow that Germans are eager to change their eagle and tri-color for a part of the mane of the British lion or a cross or diagonal in the Union Jack. Respect for the Fatherland still ranks high among Berliners.

A fashionable tailor advertised for a city solicitor to look for trade among the summer visitors. The successful applicant introduced himself as Theodore Smith of London. He had good luck in getting new clients but his discharge came quickly. His employer had discovered from his police papers that he was Schmidt not Smith, and a Berliner instead of a Londoner. Smith, or Schmidt, sued for wrongful dismissal, justifying his subterfuge on the ground that as "an English gentleman, and Theodore Smith of London," he could do much better than as plain Meyer Schmidt of Berlin. The court punished him for his lack of patriotism by throwing his case out of court.

KING ESCAPES POISON PLOT.

VICTOR EMMANUEL'S COOK DROPS DEAD IN KITCHEN.

Anarchist Tampers With Sauce of Ruler's Favorite Dish, but Fatality Thwarts Attempt at Regicide—Pope Decides to Build New Palace for Cardinals.

BY CLEMENT J. BARRETT.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

ROME, June 22.—Some excitement has been caused in Rome by a report that King Victor Emmanuel only narrowly escaped poisoning a few days ago. Accident, it is stated, saved the life of the King from extinction at the hands of an anarchist who gained the confidence of the palace chef and a place in the kitchen staff.

King Victor Emmanuel is exceedingly fond of fresh trout broiled with crumbled bread sprinkled over the fish as they are being cooked, and chili seasoning. The anarchist tampered with the sauce. The cook tasted the fish before turning the dish over to the royal servitors. He dropped dead on the spot. His murderous assistant had already vanished.

CARDINALS TO HAVE PALACE.

The Pope has decided to build a new palace to house the cardinals when they are called to elect his successor. When he was himself elected he was greatly struck by the bad accommodation provided for the cardinals, and decided to make better provision for them on the first opportunity. The new palace is to be built on the site of the old Italian mint, which has been acquired by the Pope.

It will have 350 rooms, besides kitchens and halls, sufficient for the whole College of Cardinals, with their attendants, doctors, and cooks. It will be joined to the Sistine Chapel, where the actual elections take place.

The existing Vatican buildings comprise 4000 rooms, eight grand staircases and 200 smaller ones, several private chapels and endless corridors.

SUFFRAGE IN ITALY.

The amendment of the Italian suffragists to obtain a woman's suffrage amendment to the Reform Bill was rejected by 218 to 47. Signor Giolitti had threatened that should it pass the Chamber he would ask the Senate to reject it, which accounted for the large majority. The minority included the former Premier and the Socialist members.

CROWN JEWELS ARE RECOVERED.

Queen of Siam Again in Possession of Her Gems.

Frenchman Accused of Theft Receives His Sentence.

Paris Women Carry Dogs to Match Their Toilets.

BY PAUL VILLIERS.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

PARIS, June 22.—According to a dispatch from Bangkok, the crown jewels of the Queen of Siam have been recovered after a hunt which took in the better part of Europe and Asia. The gems wer got in the rear room of a shop at Colombo. Paul de Boseck, the Frenchman, who was arrested in London charged with trying to dispose of the Queen's pearls, has been sentenced to Bangkok to two years' imprisonment.

The King of Siam, desiring to be up-to-date, sent an officer of the court to London and Paris to have some of the royal Siamese heirlooms reset and new jewels added to the collection. At considerable expense new ornaments were made, and a fine present of rare pearls purchased from a London jeweler. On the way to Siam the royal messenger was held up and relieved of his rich consignment. The gems vanished. Their recovery is thought to be more a matter of luck than anything else. One of the detectives, stopping off at Colombo, went sight-seeing. His suspicions were aroused in the shop of a Singhelese merchant through overhearing snatches of a conversation carried on in French, his own tongue. Search followed and revealed the hiding-place of the "fence."

TOOK HIS NUMBER.

A village near Dijon in the Vosges has given an illuminating proof that country children are not necessarily dull and unobservant. At the conclusion of school the infant children were dispersing when a motor car killed a fowl belonging to the master. The auto was sweeping by at such a swift pace that all the indignant master could see was a cloud of dust and the corpse of his rooster. The following morning a mite of 7 years approached his desk with a serial number jotted carefully down on a scrap of paper and the explanatory remark:

"Monsieur, the car that killed the cock!"

WEAR DOGS TO MATCH.

Dogs to match one's toilette is the latest fad among the women of Paris. In the Bois, a few evenings ago, one of the loveliest women of this city of lovely women appeared with two tiny dogs, one black and one white, and a silk frock which was itself a study in black and white. Her hat was white with nodding black plumes. The correct thing is to carry the dog or dogs in the hollow of the arm.

AROUSES COURT'S IRE.

A retired commission agent, who wore in his buttonhole the ribbon of the Legion of Honor, was killed by a passing auto in the streets of Paris. Suit was started by a relative, asking damages against the owner of the car. The defense admitted that the dead man was a knight of the Legion of Honor, but entered the plea that he was also "a man of no value." The counsel who raised this remarkable point is himself an officer of the Legion, a fact which was brought to the attention of the court by the lawyer for the plaintiff. The judge marked his displeasure at the suggestion that the ribbon counted for nothing by awarding damages of $5000—a substantial penalty in the Parisian courts.

WOMAN SUPPLANTS MAN.

French feminists are elated by the announcement made that M. Leon Bourgeois, the Minister of Public Works, has ratified the appointment of a woman to the second grade of employment in the special section of the Ministerial department which carries out the State control of insurance companies. Hitherto there has been only a small opening for women clerks in Ministerial offices.

BROKEN HEART KILLS DOG.

Raoul, perhaps the most celebrated dog of the St. Bernard breed has died from a broken heart. Raoul was one of the famous four-footed attendants at the convent mid-way in the St. Gothard Pass through the Alps until he came with his last master, M. de Etienne-Brissac, to the latter's chateau in Provence. Some time ago, the dog found a young fawn in a dying condition in one of his master's fields. He managed to bring it to the chateau, where it was nursed back to life and strength. The two became inseparable playmates, and when the fawn grew a little older both would go for long rambles together. If other dogs attacked or in any way affronted his fawn friend, Raoul, with his great paws and strong teeth, made them regret their insolence. As the fawn grew up, which the dearest deer will do, and became much taller than the St. Bernard, M. Etienne-Brissac, fearing that it might get into trouble, owing to its tameness had it put into a deer park. The dog moped for a week and then died.

GILBRALTAR, June 15.—Gen. Gourand left Fez yesterday to attack the Kabylei and Harkas, who have caused so much trouble to the French forces recently. The formidable Kayleis of Hiaula Taian have joined with other flying columns to attack the French reinforcement on their way to Morocco City. The persistent rumors that Sultan Mulai-Abd-El Hafid is to abdicate at once, are denied, but it is expected that he will do so in the near future. His sufferings are great and he knows his people hate him.

OBLIGATIONS IN CUBA.

Sugar Planter Tells of Investments of Americans in Island and Necessity of Maintaining Order.

"The United States has a moral obligation to assume in the responsibility of Cuban government, but above all it must guard the American interests which have grown to immense proportions," said L. J. Lyndon yesterday. He is registered at the Van Nuys from Los Canos, on the island.

"Most Americans have little idea of the manner in which the American people have invested money in the island enterprises," he said. "Their total holdings would aggregate $200,000,000, which divided would represent $40,000,000 in railroads; $90,000,000 in sugar and tobacco; $25,000,000 in public utilities and city improvements wherever the American is active and the remainder in commerce manufacture, mines, banks, mortgages and minor products of the soil.

"American capitalists own the electrical railway systems of Cuba, the great tobacco companies, cigar and cigarette factories, iron and copper mines, sugar plantations and refineries. The negro uprising has done considerable damage to the mining properties and the sugar industries, particularly in the provinces of Oriente and Santa Clara.

"The sugar industry is one which in a way competes with the industry in California in so far as the imports of the United States from Cuba are large. The rise of the business came in 1902 with the passage of the commercial reciprocity treaty which allowed a preferential duty of 20 per cent. on sugar entering this country from Cuba.

"Of a total of 173 mills on the island, nearly fifty of them are in American hands and 35 per cent. of the sugar is produced by Americans. According to our deputy consul in the Province of Oriente, the sugar investment totals $25,300,000. Thus it can be seen that this government really has an obligation to fulfil in keeping these properties out of the hands of the revolting negroes. Outside of that fact, the United States is looked on by the world as the nation to preserve order in the island."

Lyndon is making a tour of the United States. He was formerly in government service in New York and during the Spanish War went to Cuba as a volunteer in the ranks. He is inspecting some of the beet sugar factories in Southern California, and says they are recognized among the most advanced sugar factories of their kind in the world.

LICENSES HIS OWN DRAMA.

Retiring Examiner of Plays Favors Himself.

Briton Begs to Be Buried With His Dog.

Notable Naval and Military Tournament Held.

BY PAUL LAMBETH.

[By Atlantic Cable and by Wireless from Chicago to The Times.]

LONDON, June 22.—It has just been learned that before handing over his office to his successor, G. A. Reford, ex-Official Examiner of Plays (familiarly known as the censorship,) licensed a comedietta which he himself wrote. The title of the piece is "A Snug Retreat," which the critics say is very appropriate as it is "not out of keeping with his own exit from the play censorship."

Mr. Redford admits that he passed the play. He says: "I just submitted it to the Lord Chamberlain's Department in the ordinary way, and when it came to my desk of course I approved it. But there is really nothing in it to which anybody could possibly take exception." "Is not that what all the playwrights say?" chorus the noisy critics. "Who ever heard of a dramatist who could pick a flaw in his own masterpiece?"

DIES FOR LOVE OF DOG.

"Please bury me with my dog, Jack," wrote Alfred Moseley, aged 42, to his wife before he swallowed cyanide of potassium and passed away. His pet dog became infected by rabies and had to be killed. Moseley protested and when Jack was executed gave him a funeral, inviting his friends to attend the burial in a Liverpool churchyard. The sexton refused to open a grave for a dog in consecrated ground. Moseley then buried the dog in a field near Liverpool, went to a tavern, wrote his letter and poisoned himself over the mound covering the body of Jack.

HISTORY IN TOURNEY.

The most striking feature of the Naval and Military Tournament was the historical ride of the Third (King's Own) Hussars, showing the transition in arms, dress and accouterments of the regiment at different periods from 1685 to the present time.

The first period was represented by a trooper of the Queen Consort's Dragoons, as the regiment was then called, in the uniform used at the Battle of the Boyne. In the second period—1714-1751—the regiment was called the King's Own Dragoons, and the uniforms in use at Dettingen and Culloden were shown. The fourth period recalled the Peninsular War, in all the engagements of which the regiment took part. In the eighth and last period the regiment has become the Third (King's Own) Hussars, and has added "South Africa" to its battle honors. The varied uniforms and trapping mingled together in the evolutions made a strong scene.

BURIED ALIVE STORIES.

Remarkable stories of being buried alive were related at the annual meeting of the Association for the Prevention of Premature Burial, held at Caxton Hall, London, and a novel way of avoiding the danger was propounded.

George Greenwood, M.P., the chairman, said that the law at present offered every facility for the concealment of crime. In 1911 there had been approximately 6666 cases in which no certificate of the cause of death had been given by either medical man or Coroner, and taking this as the lowest figure, he asked if this state of affairs was not scandalous.

Miss Oakes told of one man who was put in his coffin. The mourners had assembled at lunch before the burial when the "dead" man suddenly sat up, realized his position, hastily dressed himself and went down stairs, joining the party and doing justice to the viands and beer.

BUYS CAPERS FOR COPPER.

A citizen of Montrose wrote to his London agent telling him to purchase a ton of copper. The writing was bad, and the agent read it as an order to purchase a ton of capers. This he did after great difficulty, but it made capers so scarce that the price advanced by leaps and bounds. In the meantime the citizen learned of the agent's mistake and was about to write and give him sauce for his caper when news of the advanced price came along. The caper sauce was then turned into honey dew, and the capers of the agent commended as the profits were realized on the prompt resale of the capers.

TOMMIES ARE THESPIANS.

The average London sightseer, who marvels at the histrionic ability displayed by "Tommy" at the tournament, is possibly unaware of the fact that Mr. Atkins of the household regiments gets much valuable theatrical training that the man in the street knows nix of. In many plays, where soldiers appear on the stage, they are impersonated by His Majesty's footguards, who are granted the privilege by their commanding officers as a reward for good conduct, and as they are strictly punctual, clean, sober, respectful and reliable—and their marching and military bearing are above criticism—the sloppy old super of bygone days stands no chance with them. Their dramatic ardor is, moreover, admirable, and after a long and profitable "run"—say of fifteen months at the Lyric with "The Chocolate Soldier," which employed nearly two dozen Tommies—it is not surprising if one or two of them should write inquiring the cost and qualifications of membership of the Garrick.

BASE IS ANTIQUE.

Investigations in a tumulus, or barrow, on the island of Mersea, Essex, have led to the discovery of a Roman tiled structure intact, within which was a leaden receptacle containing a glass vase pronounced to be 1800 years old.

BEAUTIFUL GIRL PRIZE IN BACHELORS' LOTTERY.

Chances Only Fifty Cents Each but She May Refuse Winner—Grand Duke, Proficient Aviator, Experiments With Plane of Own Invention—Is Honored Guest of Aero Club Dinner in Odessa.

BY GEORGE FRAZER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, June 22.—A remarkable bachelors' lottery is being organized at Smolensk. The prize is a beautiful young wife, and 5000 tickets at fifty cents each are being sold. The "lottery bride" is to be "at home" every day for a week, to the ticket-holders, and, after interviewing them, if she does not approve of some candidates as a possible husband, the money is to be refunded and the tickets withdrawn.

Another stipulation of the scheme is that when the winner eventually comes to claim his bride, he may yet be rejected by her, but receives by way of compensation, half the total proceeds from the sale of tickets.

DUCAL AVIATOR.

Grand Duke Alexander Mikhaylovich, is one of the most enthusiastic and proficient airmen in Russia. At his summer residence at Ai-Todor, in Southern Crimea, he is now experimenting with a plane, several of the parts of which, he invented himself. Recently, in the imperial yacht Almaz, he made a cruise of the maritime hydro-aeroplan stations around the Crimea. The Odessa and Sebastopol Aero Clubs are considered two of the finest in Russia. At Odessa, the members of that club entertained the Grand Duke to a magnificent supper on the roof garden of the Hotel de Londres on the Nikolai boulevard.

VALUE OF WIVES.

A little bit of light has just been thrown on the value of wives in the Terek territory. At a conference of ingushiss (Circassian tribesman,) which has just been held at Nasran, the general opinion was expressed that the main cause of robberies and other crimes was the custom of purchasing wives. It was therefore resolved to fix a definite tax to be paid by the bridegrooms, such sum not to exceed $60 in the case of marriage with a girl and $30 for a widow.

Hungarian Sensation.

ARCHDUCHESS REBUKED BY VENERABLE BISHOP.

BY EMIL VAN DRASSY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

VIENNA, June 22.—No Hungarian event since the battle of Mohacs has raised such a commotion as is now proceeding from storm to storm because the venerable Bishop Prohaska, one of the most eminent churchmen in the dual-monarchy, has publicly rebuked the Archduches Augusta for her extravagance.

Bishop Prohaska is a holy and properly respected man, who baptises, marries and buries half Hungary's nobility. Perhaps because people are born, married, and interred in relatively simple costume the Bishop has come to abhor showy and flaunting garments. And being an honest priest, he does not conceal his reprobation; but says that Europe should return to the Middle Ages, when Maximilian I cut off the toes of a lady who wore jingling bells on her shoes.

The Bishop has an acid tongue. He names, and shoots javelin-like epithets. All tight, revealing skirts and auroreal blossoming hats he condemns in German as "Frauenzimmerunfug," which means "female baggage roguery;" and he adds, "the tight skirts have no aim or intention except seductiveness.

When Princess Irma Andrassy marched down the aisle of his cathedral with eight rosy ostrich feathers wobbling in a pearl-rimmed hat the sharp-eyed old prelate remarked that ostrich feathers "exist to tickle the eye, to nurture the pride, to corrupt the innocent heart." And the amazed Princess had to listen, till her cheeks got as rosy as the feathers in her hat.

SOCIALIST FOR INSURANCE.

If the Socialists can have their way, Austria will follow England with a national insurance scheme. A proposal which was recently tabled is to be taken up shortly and it is suggested that a delegation should be sent to London to investigate the operation of the English State insurance system and talk it over with Lloyd George, its author.

PRIZE FOR BEST WIFE.

A lady in Prague offers a prize of 1000 crowns to the wife whose husband gives her the best indorsement for prudence in house-management and frugality of speech. The donor of this unusual prize is herself a deaf-mute.

COACHING BECOMES FAD.

Coaching has been taken up by the younger officers of the military establishment in Vienna. In August there is to be an international coaching tournament and already a good number of entries have been received from German and Belgian owners of fast harness horses. Austrian horses bear a good reputation for speed and endurance, but the increasing use of the auto has latterly reduced many of the best Vienna stables.

Parents Shocked.

BABY BORN WITH BLUE BODY AND GREEN HAIR.

BY EMIL VANDRASSY.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND BY WIRELESS FROM CHICAGO TO THE TIMES.]

VIENNA, June 15.—A simple couple in the Austrian Alps were grievously shocked the other day when a baby boy was born to them with bright blue body and green hair. Doctors from all parts of the country have gone to examine the child, which is perfectly healthy and happy and apparently unconcerned over the fact that it has aroused so much curiosity.

The mother can give no reason which would suggest a natural explanation of the phenomenon. But the father blames the color of his child upon her inordinate love of blue and green finery. The peasantry of the neighborhood, which is adjacent to Saalsburg, the birthplace of Wolfgang Mozart, insist that the babe is possessed by the devil and that it should be destroyed. It will most likely be adopted and reared by one of several biological institutions now bidding for possession of this new "blue boy."

BANKERS DODGE MANUEL.

Vienna is now the scene of the latest attempt to seat the deposed King Manual upon the throne from which he was divorced by the people of Portugal. Three unsuccessful efforts have been made to secure advances from Austrian bankers on the doubtful security of Manuel's personal property in the kingdom which disowned him and turned republic. The crown jewels, estimated to be worth about $7,000,000, were included in the offered mortgage, which nobody seems to be anxious to take up.

While the administrators of the estate of the house of Braganza claim that the government of Portugal has no right to touch a penny of it, the property being mostly derived from Moorish, Indian and other gifts to dead Portuguese Kings, the Viennese bankers evidently think that the old saw still runs true: "They may take who have the power and they may keep who can."

GYPSY QUEEN IS DEAD.

Zillia Tetzlitz, queen of the largest gypsy tribe, died near Prague after crowning her successor. She was over 90 years of age, insisted upon being arrayed in her jewels and most gorgeous finery when the doctor told her she had only an hour or more to live. A woman kept a mirror constantly before the queen so that she could enjoy looking at herself. When she was a young girl, Zillia Tetzlitz was a famous beauty and many proud Austrians wanted to marry her. She preferred the life of the nomad, however, and after the death of her gypsy husband, many years ago, ruled the tribe alone. Her wealth is estimated at over 1,000,000 kronen.

LOAF OF BREAD A CURIO.

A loaf of bread baked during the investment of Vienna by the first Napoleon has just been presented to a museum here. It still looked good enough to eat, notwithstanding its great age. It was found during the siege in the hands of the man who made it. A shell had killed the baker while working at his oven and a relative kept the loaf as a memento. Beautiful Setting for Bright Assembly of Elite.

Ideal weather and a setting perhaps the most picturesque in the city marked the opening of society's "party season" at the home of Mrs. J. T. Fitzgerald at Western avenue and West Adams street Wednesday afternoon. The 100 guests added the crowning touch of feminine charm in the most exquistie of summer dresses. Mrs. Fitzgerald, in a handsome creation of white lace over pink satin, with a garden hat bright with sprays of wisteria, received her guests in a cosy Italian nook on the second terrace. She was assisted by Mrs. Emma Porter Mahinson, attired in a Parisian gown of black chiffon, embroidered in white beads and fashioned over white satin, Miss Esther Palliser of London, in a dainty combination of satin, veiled in a darker marquesitte and Miss Mary Olive Gray, of Salt Lake, who wore blue figured satin and real lace. Assisting in attractive little bowers elsewhere on the grounds were Mrs. Erasmus Wilson, charming in a lingerie gown finished with a real lace coat and large hat with plumes; Mrs. William Irving Hollingsworth, imported electric blue satin with tunic effect of hand-embroidered net, finished with a corsage of Cecil Brunners and maidenhair; Mrs. Henderson Hayward, Callot model of canary satin veiled in French blue marquisette; Mrs. Samuel Jackson Whitmore, white lingerie with garnitures of black tulle and satin, black and white hat with wreath of flowers; Mrs. Benjamin Johnson, white lingerie, hand-embroidered with bands of black satin, jaunty coat of pale blue satin and real lace; Miss Pauline Vollmer, large garden hat and gown of white lace and chiffon; Miss Florence Clark, white lingerie with white hat faced with pink and adorned with roses; Miss Margaret Goetz, pale lavender satin with trimmings of deeper lavender chiffon and velvet; Mrs. J. THE STATE CONVENTION.

Organization of a State Symphony Orchestra Matter of Discussion Among Teachers.

Charles Farwell Edson returned Friday morning from a hurried trip to San Francisco in the interests of the State Teachers' Association State Convention which will open Monday week, July 8. He states there is great enthusiasm among the best teachers of the State for the State organization, and he found much to his delight that the members were much interested in the organization of a State Symphony Orchestra as the first step toward making this a great musical center. He met Mr. Seeger at Berkeley. He is a young, talented enthusiastic musician who has recently been appointed to the chair of music at Berkeley. He is intensely interested in building up the musical situation in California and feels that there is a wonderful opportunity here in the West for great artistic development.

The State Association has very comprehensive plans being worked out under President Bretherick and they will be properly brought up and developed at this State convention. He hopes before the next convention is held that every county in the State will be represented by a Teachers Association.

Th following is what one of the San Francisco dailies has to say regarding Mr. Seeger:

"Professor Charles Louis Seeger, Jr., recently appointed to the chair of music at the University of California, arrived in Berkeley yesterday. He has come two months ahead of the time required for the beginning of his work in the university, in order to study the new field and to get acquainted with the Pacific Coast before taking up the active duties of the professorship.

"He is accompanied by his wife, a young violinist, who has won much distinction in New York musical circles. Professor and Mrs. Seeger are residing at Cloyne Court.

"Already successful as a composer and with experience as a director in one of the prominent musical cities of Europe, Professor Seeger is by education and personality well equipped for the important position at Berkeley. He is young and enthusiastic, and President Wheeler regards him as a man of great promise.

"He received his university education at Harvard and then studied in Germany, where his musical education was thorough. For some time he was assistant conductor in the Cologne Operahouse. Seven of his songs have been published in New York, and others will be issued next fall.

"President Wheeler has been giving study to the musical prospects of California, and great care was exercised in selecting a man to undertake the work of building up a music department that seems destined to be the greatest in America.

"There were more than 1000 students in the music classes at the University Summer School last year, and this large enrollment is taken as an indication of the great demand for musical education on the Pacific Coast."

HENRY O'MELVENY IN ENGLAND.

Henry O'Melveny is at present in England, and having a royal time. As is generally well known, Henry is a bonvivant and as disciple of Isaak Walton, and is one of the most ardent devotees of trout fishing in Los Angeles. The following is an extract from a London letter to a friend:

"I am enclosing the bill of fare of The Old Cheshire Cheese—said to be the present oldest inn in London. Doubtless others claim the honor, but it was a charming place. It shows ample evidence of being as old as it claims. Doubtless you have been there, but if not I'll remind you it contains the chair Dr. Johnson was accustomed to sit in while at the Inn, and a copy of the first edition of his dictionary."

"Garrick and Boswell were constant frequenters. The walls are covered with portraits, etchings, drawings and verses commemorative of scenes and incidents in the life of the club.

"The ground floor is arranged somewhat like pews in churches, a stall with a table at which four on a side sit on benches.

"'Ye Pigeon Pie,' was delicious, I never tasted such crust on a meat pie before, but truth compels me to state that there was more beef than pigeon in the pie; but it was good beef. The chops were a revelation and the ale delicious.

"The cooking on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, the Nord Deutscher Lloyd, we came over on, was pronouncedly German.

"I mailed you some menu cards. Judging from this one experience (doubtless unfair) I would say the Germans cannot do three things:

"First. Wait on the table with that completeness and foresight which seems to be natural to the French.

"Second. Make a cocktail. I suppose no one can make a cocktail like an American bar-keeper.

"Third. Make a French salad dressing. What was offered to us in this line was laughable.

"I do not know whether I can send you a note of observation from time to time or not, but if possible will do so. Tomorrow I start on a tour of Hampshire, Devonshire, Somerset, etc., taking it leisurely. I am going to put a wreath on the tomb of Richard Jefferies—the John Burroughs of England; I am too going to visit the grave of Gilbert White of Selborne, the father of all "outdoor" lovers, and I am going to see the burial place of Isaak Walton, and when I have thus paid respect to their memories, I am going to wheel at my leisure, through the most beautiful part of England, have some strawberries with Devon clotted cream, and wish I had all my good friends with me."

DISPUTED WATER RIGHTS.

Government Will Be Asked to Determine the Amount Used by Ranchers and Amount Necessary.

PORTERVILLE, June 22.—Two alternative proposals have been suggested by the committee of the Tule River Water Users' Association as a means of arbitrating the many disputed water rights on the river, and a special meeting of the organization members has been called to choose between them.

It is suggested that the government reclamation service be asked to furnish an irrigation expert to determine the amount of water customarily used by the ranchers and organize a users' association on the same general lines as those which are insisted upon by the United States offificials as a preliminary to the government reclamation work.

Officials of the Tulare County Power Company have proposed a joint association of the various ditch companies and the power company and an issue of irrigation bonds for the purpose of constructing a system of reservoirs in which to restrain the flood waters of the early spring. At any rate it has been agreed that there are to be no more law suits and all disputes will be arbitrated whatever the outcome.

See a Perfect Machine

The Motor Truck and the Roadbed of the Valentine Monorail System, through reciprocal and mechanical perfection, really and truly become one great instrument for rapid transportation at 100 to 150 miles an hour, with safety and comfort.

The Valentine Car takes curves and climbs grades with the ease and suppleness of a trout swimming up stream. Maintenance and operating expenses are so far reduced over present systems that fares will be reduced most materially, say 30 to 50 per cent.

A Keen Interest

Each one of the several thousand representative citizens of Los Angeles and surrounding communities, who have visited our demonstrating room in the past six weeks, have expressed themselves most cordially in favor of this project. Every one of the visitors after looking at the Valentine Car in motion on its own track, left with an assurance that the enterprise would be doubly welcome.

It has only been six weeks since the Valentine Monorail Car was installed in the basement of the Consolidated Realty Building for demonstration purposes. But the unhesitating testimonials showered on us by those visitors, is conclusive proof that the management of the Monorail Rapid Transit Company will have the moral as well as the financial support of this city and its suburbs.

"The Rapid Transit News"

This encouragement was so indubitably strong that we decided to issue at once, "The Rapid Transit News," the first edition of which is now ready for distribution. A copy of it should be in the hands of every progressive man and woman interested in the welfare and advancement of Los Angeles and its surrounding territory. "The Rapid Transit News" specifically covers all the details and advantages of the Valentine Monorail System, as compared and contrasted with present methods. Its success, like the prosperity of Los Angeles, is beyond question.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST PHYSIC.

OTHERS MAY COME AND GO

BEAR IN MIND STANLEY
Is here to stay for all time.
HIS $3 READINGS,

$1. $1. $1. $1.

Between Second and Third streets,
Near Angels' Flight,
247 S. Hill st. 247.

BEFORE YOU GO INTO ANYTHING OF IMPORTANCE OR UNDERTAKE ANYTHING SERIOUS —IN BUSINESS, OR LOVE, OR MARRIAGE, OR BEFORE YOU MAKE ANY CHANGE — YOU SHOULD CONSULT THE MASTER MIND OF PHYSICS.

ALWAYS CONSULT THE BEST. IT IS THE CHEAPEST IN THE END. IT IS BETTER TO CONSULT NO PSYCHIC THAN ONE WHO IS NOT ABLE TO HELP YOU.

A foolish weakling only will pay for a reading that gives no benefit. Stop and think.

DON'T STRUGGLE WITH A BURDEN YOU CAN DIVIDE.

A TROUBLED MIND BEGETS A MORBID CONSCIENCE.

SYMPATHY, CONSOLATION AND TIMELY ADVICE HEAL THE WORST OF WOUNDS. BE ADVISED AND RELIEVED OF ANXIETY.

Realizing that this city has been overrun with pretenders, and that many of its best citizens are anxious to visit a genuine psychic, Mr. Stanley's many years' residence with his large clientage should be proof enough of his ability.

He has met every advertised promise, and wishes to not be measured by any other standard than his own.

If you contemplate consulting a psychic several things should be taken into consideration—ABILITY, the HONESTY of methods, the FAIRNESS of dealings, the HIGHER degree of work, the ACCURACY of each prediction, the COMMON SENSE used with it, the INTEREST taken in each case, the RESPECT shown to each caller, the fact of SECRECY in consultation, the FEE charged for services.

BYRON L. STANLEY

fully appreciates that in this day of sensational advertisements there are more false claims and misrepresentations chaperoned through the columns of the daily press than the most hypential tongue could utter in a lifetime, until one cannot be blamed for doubting almost everything they read. Therefore he says to you—come to him this very day and let him give you a complete reading, telling you every hope, fear or ambition, better than you could explain yourself. He will tell you the bad as well as the good; keeping nothing hidden from you. He will tell you everything upon matters of love, marriage, divorce, business, health; in fact, he will read your life like an open book.

OFFICE HOURS 10 TO 7:30.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigation along psychological lies, that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial condition, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

(Daily and evenings; Sundays, 9 to 5.)

SKIN CUT TO RIBBONS.

Powerful Negro Horse-Trader Meets His Match First Time in Sixty Years and Knife Is Used.

For the first time in his long career as a horse-trader, Tom Thomas, a powerful negro living at No. 112 South Alameda street, was worsted in a knife duel at First and Alameda streets, last night and subsequently was removed to the Receiving Hospital with the skin of his head and neck almost cut into shreds. Gashes aggregating nearly two feet in length were sewed up by Dr. Webber before the negro's head began to assume its normal aspect and while he will be terribly scarred it is believed that he will recover.

Although 60 years old, the negro is said to have quarreled with Lewis Washington, a negro teamster living at No. 351 East First street, over the affection of a young negress, and in the fight, which followed Washington is alleged to have used his knife with telling effect. The alleged assailant was locked up and asserted that he had acted in self-defense.

FEDERALS TO TAKE JUAREZ.

Garibaldi Outlines Plan of Attack on Border City.

After Capture Will Move in Force on Chihuahua.

Orozco Ships Gold in Bars to Be Ready.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO, (Tex.) June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Juarez will be taken by the Federals within ten days, according to the detailed plan of campaign which Gen. Giuseppe Garibaldi, commander of one division of the Federals now assembling at Agua Prieta, has given to the public.

Gen. Garibaldi arrived here today with Vice-Governor Eujenio Gayou of Sonora, to meet Gen. Augustin Sanjines, who is coming from Ojinaga to attend the conference which will be held at the Mexican consulate. Juarez, Garibaldi says, will be the destination of the Federals under the general command of Gen. Sanjines, and with Garibaldi, Blanco and Rivera in command of the three separate divisions.

Chihuahua will be the ultimate destination of the Federal troops, he says, but first Juarez must be taken in order to rid the border of the rebels and to make it possible to round them up in the State of Chihuahua and in the city of Chihuahua.

FIRST A BOMBARDMENT.

To take the town, it will first be bombarded by the Federal battery of artillery, which is now at Agua Prieta in command of Gen. Blanco and in charge of cadets from the Mexican military school at Chapultepec.

The fields pieces will be placed on the Juarez Mountains, to the southwest, and will shell the town. Garibaldi, who will have command of 500 picked sharpshooters, all mounted and armed with long-range rifles, will harass the rebels as they leave the town for the South, as the United States troops will be lined up on the border to prevent their crossing.

Complications with the United States are feared, as Orozco has made an open threat that if a Federal attack comes, he would not be responsible for the acts of his men in firing into American territory. Should this be done, Texas rangers and United States troops, with an understanding with the Federals, will cross the border and put a short end to the firing.

As soon as Gen. Sanjines arrives in Agua Prieta, which will probably be Sunday night, the 2000 troops will start overland, draggin, the heavy fields pieces with them to Juarez, Garibaldi says.

OROZCO SHIPS GOLD.

Desperate because his revolution is falling, Orozco is trying to get all the ready money possible before he is forced to leave.

He had a large shipment of gold and silver ore sent in from the mines in the Santa Eulalia district, which he has seized.

He ordered the Guggenheim smelters at Chihuahua to smelt the ore, so he could transfer the gold and silver to his father at Juarez. The smelter refused and Orozco promptly issued a manifesto giving them until Sunday morning to smelt the ore or have the smelter closed down and 5000 men thrown out of work and forced into the rebel army.

Five ingots of pure gold arrived in Juarez from Chihuahua Friday night and will be transferred to this side by Col. Orozco for the use of Orozco should he be forced to leave the country. The ingots are guarded by fifty picked guards.

APPEALS TO UNITED STATES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) June 22.—Gen. Orozco the rebel chief, today demanded of the American Smelting and Refining Company at Chihuahua, according to advices reaching here, that they purchase five carloads of gold ore from him and on their refusal he threatened to close the plant. The company is reported to have appealed to American Consul Letcher.

"CLEVELAND? NEVER AGAIN," SAYS FISHER.

"Do I want to go back to the Cleveland team?" asked Gus Fisher of the Beavers yesterday.

"Well, not for me," he continued. Some fellow up north printed a story about what I said of the Naps a week or so ago but I didn't say all that fellow made me say. I didn't know the fellow was a reporter or I would not have talked as much as I did, but at that I suppose the majority of the statements I made were true. However, I have said all I intend to say."

That was enough, for Fisher roasted the Cleveland management to a turn.

DRUG MANAGER ARRESTED.

Andrew Rouseyrol, manager for the Viole Lopizich Drug Company, No. 220 North Main street, was arrested by Inspector Boden last night, charged with selling morphine to an habitual user of narcotics. The establishment had been under suspicion for some time, and Edward Graham, a prisoner at the City Jail, was induced to make the alleged purchase in the presence of the inspector. The prisoner subsequently gave bail for his appearance in Police Court.

GREAT HIGHWAY GAINS VICTORY.

South Wins Contention at San Jose Meeting.

Counties Committee Increases Representation.

Good Roads Made Keynote of Closing Session.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN JOSE, June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With a harmonious session this morning, an auto demonstration on the streets this afternoon, auto trips to the various towns and points of interest in the valley and trolley rides over the "Blossom Route" to towns reached by the railroad, the semi-annual convention of the Counties Committee of the California Development Board came to an end here this evening.

The last formal session was held at noon in the Victory Theater.

Yesterday's disagreement over the question of giving the south adequate representation on the committee to push the building of a national system of highways, to be completed by 1915 was amicably settled this morning, when, on motion of Dr. James B. Bullitt of San Jose, a committee was appointed to take charge of the work. This action followed another resolution declaring it to be the sense of the convention that the California Development Board be required to work with its best assets to get a national system of highways built by the opening of the exposition.

It was pointed out that thousands of people who would otherwise not come to California in 1915, but would take trips about the New England and mountain States, would come to this State and see the exposition and the rest of the world as well if the road could be completed in time.

Various individuals in the committee suggested names to the Resolutions Committee which nominated the following fifteen men to have charge of the work of getting the road:

W. H. Crocker of San Francisco; John S. Mitchell, Los Angeles; D. W. Carmichael, Sacramento; J. N. Gillett, Berkeley; Charles D. Blaney, San Jose; John Perry, Stockton; Robert Newton Lynch, Petaluma; I. W. Hellman, San Francisco; Frank L. Brown, Oakland; H. A. Jastro, Bakersfield; F. M. Smith, Oakland; Dr. James B. Bullitt, San Jose; F. W. Jackson, San Diego; Senator Francis G. Newlands, and Robert L. Fulton, both of Nevada, and John Brisbane Walker, director of exploitation of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Good roads were the keynote of the session today and five addresses were made by as many leading exponents of the better highways idea. Dr. James B. Bullitt, father of the county good roads agitation now going on here, delivered an address this morning on methods of financing county road building. He favored the bonding plan as the only fair and feasible method of getting the money. The convention adopted a resolution favoring that plan and urging all the counties to adopt it in their good roads campaigns.

Interdependence of rural and city communities makes the bonding method fair and equitable, Bullitt told the delegates.

Co-operation among the counties, to the end that the whole State may have good roads, was urged by R. R. L'Ommedieu, who declared that if each part of the State does its work well the whole community will be benefited.

J. A. Marsh of San Francisco discussed "California's Two Greatest Assets—Her Scenery and Her Roads." He said the State's scenery brings people to see, and good roads keep them there to settle and help make the State prosperous.

Frank L. Brown of San Francisco, a director of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, spoke on the exposition.

John A. Fox of San Diego described the forthcoming California-Panama Fair at San Diego, telling of the plans of its promoters and what it will stand for in California's development.

With the selection of Oroville as the next meeting place, the convention was adjourned for six months.

KILLED IN AUTO SMASH.

San Francisco Business Man Driving to the Beach With Hollywood Girl Crushed Under Car in Accident.

By the overturning of his automobile in a ditch near Inglewood yesterday afternoon, M. A. Fletcher, 35 years old, a business man from San Francisco, was caught under the wreckage and sustained injuries which resulted in death at the Emergency and General Hospital a few hours later.

Miss Marine Saylor of Hollywood, who was riding with Fletcher, escaped with a few bruises and was taken to her home.

According to information given by the injured man before his death, he was taking Miss Saylor to Venice, where they expected to dine. A short distance beyond Inglewood the machine suddenly became unmanageable and swerved from the road into a deep ditch. In descending the embankment the machine was overturned and came to a stop, resting on the driver's chest. Miss Saylor was thrown clear of the falling automobile and thus escaped.

The wounded man was unconscious when taken in a passing machine to the hospital, where his injuries were at once pronounced dangerous by Dr. Byron, the house surgeon.

After rallying several times Fletcher died about 10 o'clock last night, while in a state of profound coma. The body will be held until the family of the dead man can be located.

Danger Averted.

RESULT AT CHICAGO ENDS CRISIS, SAYS PRESIDENT.

Pre-convention Campaign Is More Fraught With Threatening Ideas and Important Issues Than Election Campaign to Follow, Declares Mr. Taft—Guarantees of the Constitution Were at Stake.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHIN[illegible] 22.—President Taft tonight made the following statement:

"A national convention of one of the great parties is ordinarily important only as a preliminary to a national campaign for the election of a President. The Chicago convention just ended is much more than this and is in itself the end of a pre-convention campaign presenting a crisis more threatening and issues more important than those of the election campaign which is to follow between the two great national parties.

"The question here at stake was whether the Republican party was to change its attitude as the chief conservator in the nation of constitutional representative government and was to weaken the constitutional guarantees of life, liberty and property, and all other rights declared sacred in the bill of rights, by abandoning the principles of the absolute independence of the judiciary essential to the maintenance of these rights. The campaign carried on to seize the Republican party and make it the instrument of reckless ambition and the unsettling of the fundamental principles of our government was so sudden and unexpected that time was not given clearly to show to the people and the party the dangers which confronted them. It was sought to break the wise and valuable traditions against giving more than two terms to any one man in the Presidency and the danger from its breach could not be measured. The importance of the great victory which has been achieved cannot be overestimated. All over the country patriotic people tonight are breathing more freely that a most serious menace to our Republican institutions has been averted.

"It is enough now to say that whatever may happen in November, a great victory for the Republican party and the United States has already been won.

"The party remains as a great, powerful organization for carrying out its patriotic principles as an agency of real progress in the development of the nation along the constitutional lines upon which it was constructed and has ever been maintained, and its future opportunity for usefulness is as great as its achievements in the past."

President Taft said tonight he was much in favor of having his secretary Charles D. Hilles, for chairman of the Republican National Committee. He expressed high appreciation of Mr. Hilles's work in the pre-convention campaign. When asked if he would take the stump this fall, the President replied he considered it likely that he would. He was plainly elated at his victory.

Prophet With Honor.

TAFT AND SHERMAN WILL WIN ELECTION--M'KINLEY.

"We Knew We Had the Votes and Were Not Worried," Declares the President's Campaign Manager. Third Party Clamor Will Wear Itself Out—Jollification Is Held at Headquarters of Taft Forces.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Wearing the same smile that he wore throughout the last few strenuous days of the convention, Congressman William B. McKinley, who managed the victorious campaign for the President, said tonight:

"Just tell the people that I am a very truthful gentleman. Everything came out just as I have predicted all along. We knew we had the votes and were not worried much."

"I want to say," he added, "that Taft and Sherman will win in November."

Mr. McKinley said that the Taft forces "don't take any stock in Roosevelt's ability to get up much of a third party."

NOT WORRIED BY CLAMOR.

"That clamor," he said, "will wear itself out, without us doing anything to stop it. We are not bothered."

When Mr. McKinley entered his headquarters after the convention a crowd which jammed the corridor welcomed him.

"Hurrah for the little fellow," the crowd shouted, as it surged about him.

"Thank you," he smiled, and he went into his office and calmly began opening his numerous telegrams which were waiting him.

While Mr. McKinley was composed the other Taft leaders were not.

James Kealing of Indiana, who has been active in the President's behalf, was particularly jubilant.

"It's all over but the shouting, and we are sure going to do that," he said. "The result shows that bluff and bluster won't always go."

William Barnes, Jr., of New York, who has been fiercely opposing Col. Roosevelt, was also particularly happy.

"I am satisfied," he said, smiling, "but not surprised."

For the first time since the convention opened there was real jubilation and enthusiasm in the gold room of the Congress Hotel, the headquarters of the Taft forces. Bands played in the balconies, men and women singers sang, and speakers from every State in speeches scored Roosevelt.

The jollification in the gold room lasted until late and the Taft adherents spent most of the night celebrating all over town.

In the closing minutes of the convention a resolution was adopted giving the Republican National Committee power to remove any member who refuses to support the party nominee.

This resolution, which is aimed at Roosevelt members who have threatened to support Roosevelt, was included in the report of the Rules Committee laid on the table during the day. Under the resolution the committee may name the successor of any member who bolts. Heretofore vacancies on the committee have been filled by the State Committee in the member's home State. The National Committee has had no authority to expel a member.

The convention confirmed the selection of the new members of the committee from the various States.

Announcement was made that the new committee will meet at 11 o'clock Monday morning. It is probable the new officers will be elected.

WAS IT ACCIDENTAL?

Attendant of Shooting Gallery Punctured Through Intestines by Italians, Who Make Their Escape.

While handing a target rifle to a prospective customer, Grover Wiggins, a clerk employed at Dixon's Shooting Gallery, Main street, between First and Second, was shot through the abdomen late last night, and was taken to the Receiving Hospital, where an operation was performed in hopes of saving his life.

Spectators assert that the man who pulled the trigger was an Italian, who, with a companion, entered the place a few minutes before. When it was ascertained that Wiggins had been injured, George Lenzee, another attendant, and John Hanifan, a spectator, attempted to overpower the Italians, but the latter succeeded in shaking themselves loose and escaping in the crowd.

The police are searching for the two strangers to learn whether the shooting really was the result of carelessness or otherwise. The injured clerk is 23 years old, and lives at No. 911 Maple avenue.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

Audubon Society of California Takes Steps to Protect Shore Birds Now on Game Lists.

The protection of shore birds, many of which appear on the game list, is one of the serious tasks which the Audubon Society of California has set itself for the coming year. At the annual meeting of that organization at the Chamber of Commerce, yesterday afternoon, a committee was appointed to draught proper legislation to this effect and present it to the Legislature through an interested Assemblyman.

The extermination of the English sparrow was also one of the subjects that received considerable attention. A colony of them has been unroofed by the society at the Santa Fe depot in Los Angeles and another colony has been found at Pasadena. The game warden has been notified and has promised to see to the extinction of these unwelcome visitors to Southern California. They are declared a menace to the other bird life of the State.

Recognizing the possibilities of a zoological garden at Griffith Park, a resolution to the City Council was drawn up, espousing the abolition of the unsanitary dens existing at this time in Eastlake Park, which were declared a disgrace to the city, and the provision of natural runs and caves for the animals in the large mountain park.

The election of officers left the entire presiding staff intact and named only a few new directors and members of the Executive Committee. David Starr Jordan was named president; Prof. Charles F. Holder, who presided over the meeting, vice-president; Dr. Frederick W. D'Evelyn, second vice-president; Mrs. Harriet Williams Myers, secretary; Mrs. Kathryn H. Chambers, treasurer. The new directors include Thomas Trenor, Mrs. C. E. Foote, Mrs. F. O. Wood and Mrs. E. H. Husher.

The annual report of the secretary showed an excellent increase in membership in the society for the protection of birds and also new interest awakened in many of the schools toward bird life. Miss Gretchen L. Libby, educational assistant of the State Fish and Game Commission, presented a lecture on "The Bird Life of California," in a very interesting manner, using a number of beautiful-colored lantern slides in the talk.

ONCE TOO OFTEN.

In attempting to display his prowess as a strong man to win a trivial bet, H. F. Miller, a teamster living at No. 134 South Main street, nearly severed three fingers of his right hand last night by crushing a beer glass in his palm. A piece of the flying glass penetrated the left wrist inflicting a severe gash in one of the arteries, and for a time it was feared that he would die from loss of blood before he could be removed to the Receiving Hospital. Miller said that he had crushed glasses on many occasions, but had never before met with an accident.

CHILD SHOT IN MOUTH.

While playing in the yard in front of her home, Dorothy Smith, the 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Smith of No. 431 South Wellington street, was shot in the mouth last night by some one as yet unknown to the police, and was taken to the Receiving Hospital in a serious condition. The missile lacerated the tongue and imbedded itself in the lower part of the jaw. Police Surgeon Webber, said that an X-ray examination will have to be made to determine the exact location, and the child was sent to the Children's Hospital for further treatment.

PAST WEEK BUSY ONE.

Seven Deals Aggregating Over Two Million Dollars Reported in "Times" in a Single Issue.

No less than eight big real estate transactions were reported exclusively in The Times during the past week, seven of them on Thursday, alone. These include the leases by R. D. Bronson and the Sun Drug Company of valuable sites on Seventh street and Broadway, both of which are to be improved with modern thirteen-story buildings. All of the transactions reported, taking in selling and leasing considerations and adding the cost of contemplated improvements growing directly out of the deals in question, represent over $2,000,000.

Perspective pictures of both the Bronson and Sun Drug Company buildings appear in this section. An important deal of the week was that concluded by Bryan & Bradford by which R. B. Baker leased to a local capitalist for fifty years a lot on the west side of Spring street between Eighth and Ninth which is to be improved with a six-story building. The rental consideration involved in this contract was $480,000.

On Wednesday there was reported the sale by Mrs. Emily Childs to G. H. Bauer of Chicago, through the agency of A. T. Jergins & Co., and for a consideration of $90,000 cash, of forty-five feet at Twelfth and Main. This site is to be handsomely improved at an early date. Forty feet on West Ninth street between Broadway and Hill was sold to S. C. Graham for $65,000, W. M. Harker being the agent in the deal. The selling figure of $1625 a front foot indicates the growing demand for Ninth-street property for business purposes.

One hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars was paid on Wednesday for eighty-seven feet on the north side of Seventh street, between Flower and Figueroa streets, the buyer bing a local investor. It is understood that the site will be handsomely improved. On the same day Edwin J. Bowes, Jr., president of the Bowes Realty Company, acting for clients, and in connection with John Grosse, purchased from I. N. Huntsberger and others, fifty feet on the north side of Seventh street, 100 feet west of Grand avenue, for a consideration of $122,000. The new owners may improve the property within a short time.

A noteworthy deal in suburban acreage was concluded on Wednesday when Dr. G. Edgar Smith transferred to W. D. Wilson, through the agency of Bryan & Bradford, forty acres at the corner of Western avenue and Ninty-second street, the consideration being $60,000.

BIG TRACT TRANSFERRED.

Nearly Million Paid by Los Angeles Syndicate for Large Santa Ynez Valley Ranch Holdings.

A tract of 32,000 acres in the Santa Ynez Valley, about seventy miles north and west of Santa Barbara and fourteen miles from the coast, has been bought by a Los Angeles syndicate headed by F. H. Edwards. The consideration is reported at approximately $30 an acre, or about $960,000 for the whole property. The Santa Ynez Land and Development Company sold 22,000 acres of the holding and 10,000 acres were sold by the Roman Catholic Bishop of Monterey and Los Angeles.

The tract is a part of the old College ranch of 42,000 acres, 10,000 acres of which was purchased a year and a half ago by the Santa Barbara Land and Water Company, of which Henry E. Malmgren is president. This piece has since been colonized by Danes and converted into an exceedingly productive region. The entire district is adapted to the cultivation of beans, alfalfa and potatoes, and apples thrive over almost the whole of the tract.

Famous In a Day For the Beauty of Her Hands and Arms

A Free Prescription That Does Its Work Over Night—You Can Prepare It at Your Own Home.

"It's my own discovery, and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results," answers Miss Grace Benson, when her friends asked her about the marvelous change in the appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you will take my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Just think of it! It did all this in a night.

It affords me a world of pleasure to tell anyone else just how such remarkable results were brought about. I give you, absolutely free, the identical prescription which has removed every defect from my hands and arms. You can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription, which can be prepared at your own home, is as follows:

Go to any drug store and buy an ounce bottle of Kulux Compound. Pour the entire bottle of Kulux into a two-ounce bottle, and quarter ounce of witch hasel and fill with water. Mix this at home, then you know that it is the genuine article. Apply night and morning. The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin transparent, removes all discolorations, such as tan, sun spots, freckles and coarse pores, roughness and wrinkles, and, in fact, every blemish the hands and arms are heir to. It also produces a marvelous effect on the neck and shoulders.

If the neck is discolored from being exposed to the sun or from wearing high collars, this prescription will immediately relieve that condition. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this prescription will work a wonderful transformation in twelve hours at the most. Thousands of women are using this prescription with just the same results that I have had."

BRAWLEY WINS THE START.

By Surpassing Other Valley Towns in Contributions It Achieves the Honor of the Finish Also.

BRAWLEY, June 21.—Brawley has raised a purse of $1100 for auto race prizes. With a purse of $1100 Brawley won the right to the start and finish of the race on the Fourth of July.

Much rivalry existed between the citizens of El Centro, Imperial and Brawley for the honors of the big race. Approximately $3000 was raised by the five towns of the valley, Brawley, Imperial, El Centro, Holtville and Calexico, and the entrance fee of $50 for each car will be added to this amount. The purse will be divided on a basis of 65, 20, 10 and 5 per cent. Peter P. Hovley, of Brawley, president of the Imperial Valley Automobile Association, was mainly instrumental in raising the Brawley contribution.

Among the entries are George R. Wade, of Brawley, who will drive his rebuilt Buick. Fred Fuller with a Reo is looked upon as a most dangerous driver and with a car especially prepared for the race, is expected to be among the leaders from the start. Walter K. Bowker, of Calexico, manager of the famous C. M. ranch, has entered a Chalmers, "40," and a Knox. Clarence Conant, Drummond Houston and Fred Waters will be in line at the start.

The course will be laid out through the five cities of the valley. Philo Jones of Brawley, Fred Waters of Imperial and Bert Winters of El Centro comprise the committee of arrangements. J. V. Wachtel and F. B. Fuller of El Centro have been selected as committee on finance. Brawley secured $1100, Imperial $966, El Centro $460, Calexico $250, Holtville $250.

FACT AND COMMENT.

"Your articles are always good; hit the nail square on the head," a follower of these comments, to have your efforts bear fruit must follow them up until the you strive for is effected. Cutting down weeds is all right, but we are not walking in the are solely interested with the walks. Take a walk out West street, commencing at Figueroa and ending at Westlake Park, other side of the street, and you encounter sidewalks that have been cleaned in years. This is true in front of vacant lots. rainy weather it is necessary to in single file, hugging the edge of walk and stepping carefully from dear spot to another. In many the trip afoot is made still aggravating by the constant necessity for stooping and dodging to having your face 'swiped' by low, overhanging branches of trees and palms. I select street as a horrible example. there are many other streets just bad. Stick a pin into the department that has control of the sidewalks trees and keep sticking it in."

The above communication is one of number received by the Fact and Comment man during the past week all of which were inspired by the comments on the subject of weedy lots in last Sunday's issue. Improvement associations by dozens have adopted resolutions the ream on the same subject. The city, too, has never really done its part toward carrying out such provisions as have existed. And the property owners, the individual violators of the laws, the ones to whom the greatest blame attaches, after all, have not, to their shame and to the shame of the city, risen to the occasion. It has been thoroughly demonstrated, in fact, that the citizens of Los Angeles will have to be made to keep the city clean and presentable, notwithstanding the multitude of reasons why they should be eager to do so without compulsion.

On next Tuesday night, the correspondent quoted will doubtless be overjoyed to know, the City Council will wrestle with a brand new ordinance covering the sidewalk question, together with a separate ordinance providing for the care of trees and shrubs along the sidewalk and curb lines of the residence districts. The writer will in the meantime refrain from "sticking a pin" into any department until the ordinances to be passed upon have had a real test. For the sake of those who have had to do the Indian file, the Fact and Comment man sincerely hopes that a law with steam in it will have been passed and rigidly put into operation by the beginning of another rainy season.

Far in Dead.

The feat of San Francisco in beating Los Angeles in building valuation in the month of March, a stunt which was heralded with great enthusiasm by the Bay City publicity mediums, and which is still warmed over and hashed and re-hashed by the boosters of the northern methopolis, will be about the only excuse the big World's Fair town will have for crowing over us this year. Los Angeles eclipsed San Francisco by substantial margins both in April and May and the Bay City is due to receive a real shock when the totals of June are announced here, for it is almost certain that all previous records both for the number and valuation of building permits issued will be broken by the figures for the present month in the Southland metropolis.

From January 1 to June 1, inclusively, the Chief Inspector of Buildings in this city issued 6253 permits for new buildings whose aggregate valuation was $11,725,937. The figures for the corresponding period in the Bay City were 2278 permits and $10,306,711. To date for the month the valuation total is considerably in excess of $2,500,000 and the building officials confidently expect a total for June of over $3,000,000. It is a lead that San Francisco will experience some difficulty in overcoming. One of the San Francisco papers had the crust to suggest not long ago that the way to boost San Francisco in the national building column was to embody in the Bay City figures all the contracts recorded in San Francisco county, statistics that would include street work and a hundred and one things that are not taken into account in the statistics of Los Angeles and other large cities. The Fact and Comment man is "laying" for any such stunt as that.

HIGH JINKS BY THE SEA.

University Club Members go to Del Mar to Take Part in Annual Midsummer Outing.

About 200 members of the University Club bubbling over with good fellowship, left Los Angeles yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock on a special Santa Fe train for Del Mar, where they will participate in the club's mid-summer high jinks today.

Many of the leading business and professional men of the city are members of the happy party.

An informal banquet was held last night at Stratford Inn and latest wireless reports say that it was a happy affair.

The big doings come off this morning when Heine Seaver's "Sloe Dutch" baseball team hooks up with Tim Horan's "Shanties," the pride of Brewery Gulch.

C. E. Richards, president of the club, will handle the indicator. He emphatically denies that he will wear a suit of harveyized armor during the game. He declares that, as a member of the Harbor Commission, he is perfectly at home in a fight

After the baseball scrap the members will take part in an athletic programme, including running races, broad jumps, sack races and boxing bouts.

Willie Bassett is chairman of the committee in charge of the affair and was ably assisted in preparing the programme, including running races dozen of his club associates.

The clubites will return to this city on their special train at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Progress.

SIGHTLY TRACT TO BE PUT ON MARKET

NEW TOWNSITE PROJECTED BY ALASKA CAPITALIST.

Property Half Way Between Glendale and Pasadena, in Picturesque Sycamore Canyon Section—Investment Half-Million—Electric Railway Being Promoted.

A new and significant development in the high and sightly region to the north of this city and which promises to hasten appreciably the day when Los Angeles will have realized its dream of expanding from the mountains to the sea is assured by an important transfer of suburban acreage which came to light during the past week. The transaction, which was concluded about two months ago, involved the sale by the La Sierra Water Company to Wilson Foster, a newcomer from Alaska and a mining man known throughout the great Northwest as the "Klondike Quartz King," of 1650 acres of the old San Rafael rancho, about half way between Glendale and Pasadena and which includes Sycamore Canyon, a continuation of Sycamore road, in Glendale, together with the valley, creek, mesas, benches and slopes on either side of the canyon for a distance of about two miles.

With the property Foster acquired water rights, land concessions and other assets of considerable value. His total investment, he stated yesterday, including the cost of the land and the assets mentioned, together with the amount to be expended in the laying out of a townsite and in other improvements, will approximate $500,000.

The townsite contemplated will occupy a meadow near the head of the valley and which has an elevation of about 1000 feet. It will be known as Paradise Park. The new town will be about one-half mile from the city limits of Glendale and about three-quarters of a mile from those of Pasadena. The stakes of the subdividers are to be driven at once.

Foster has tendered a sightly five-acre piece, grown thickly with sycamores and lying at the side of a mountain brook, which winds its way through the property, to the Federation of State Societies and Provincial Organizations, of which he is a member. The site is designed for a clubhouse and for picnic purposes. In all parts of the property building restrictions will be enforced and the townsite itself will be laid off with good streets and other improvements, bonds to the amount of $500,000 being issued to cover the cost.

RAILWAY BEING PROMOTED.

The active promotion of an electric railway to connect Glendale with Pasadena and to pass directly through the center of the property by way of Sycamore Canyon, has been started by Foster and others, and those interested state that the project has every assurance of success. The line contemplated is to intersect the regular Glendale line of the Pacific Electric near its northern terminus at Casa Verdugo, and is to be continued on to tap the Southern Pacific, the promoters expecting thereby to open up an extensive market communication between the Van Nuys and Owensmouth districts in the San Fernando Valley and Paradise Park and vicinity. Such a communication would necessitate the continuation of the proposed Glendale-to-Pasadena line for only a little less than a mile west of Brand boulevard.

Another transit scheme, which is being considered independently of the above project, is a plan to continue the present Glendale-Eagle Rock line into Paradise Park by means of a tunnel connecting Eagle Rock Valley with Scholl Canyon. This plan would make the distance from First and Broadway to Paradise Park about eight miles by electric railway. Foster has also started the active promotion of an electric elevated railway of a mono-railway type that is in successful use in the northern part of this State, and which is designed to give a direct route to his new townsite.

Foster came to make his home in this city last October and a few days later bought the tract which at present bears the name of Klondike Park and which has just been subdivided into lots. The subdivision, which is just south of Griffith Park on the Glendale line and within the city limits of Los Angeles, is now being highly developed, one of the features being a sunken garden 500 feet in length, with a series of artificial cascades.

COMPLETES DREDGING TASK.

Government Makes Inner Harbor East Basin Available for Commerce for Nine Thousand Feet.

Dredging has just been completed in the channel in the east basin of the inner harbor. This work was begun in February, 1911.

A channel 200 feet wide on the bottom and with a depth of at least twenty feet at low tide is now available for commerce from the turning basin northeast to the extreme corner of the east basin, a distance of about 9000 feet. There it joins with the channel of he Consolidated Lumber Company, leading to the wharves of that company and of the Pacific Lumber Company.

The channel extends beyond the lower end of Mormon Island and the entrance to Wilmington, and along the tideland frontage on the north side of the east channel. This area is part of that which is involved in the tideland suits, awaiting decision in the Supreme Court.

This channel was dredged by the government. The contract for it and for a similar channel in the west basin was let to the Tacoma Dredging Company, but was sublet to the Standard American Dredging Company, which has been doing most of the work in the harbor. This concern dredged a total of 1,108,570 cubic yards in completing the east channel, at a cost to the government of $99,467.35.

The Westward Trend.

TO ERECT FINE LOFT BUILDING.

Desk Company to Have Stately Home.

Structure to Occupy Leased Site on Seventh.

Will Be Largest Building of Type in City.

Following the exclusive announcement in last Thursday's Times of the consummation of a lease between the Standard Fireproof Building Company, as lessor, and R. D. Bronson, as lessee, by the terms of which the latter is to secure a quarter-century tenure of the thirteen-story store and loft block to be erected on the north side of Seventh street just west of Grand avenue. The Times is authorized to publish the perspective of that building which appears on this page. Bronson stated yesterday afternoon that he would pay total rental of $1,115,000 for the lease closed and that he would take possession of the building immediately upon its completion.

The plans for the structure, which will be by far the largest and finest loft block ever projected in Los Angeles, are now nearing completion in the offices of John C. Austin and W. C. Pennell, associated architects. The building will occupy a lot 70x108 feet in size and will be of Class "A," fireproof construction throughout, the frame being of steel, fireproofed with concrete.

The front of the building will be of mat glazed polychrome terra cotta, the prevailing tone being a light cream and the ornamentation varying in color from light cream to deep copper. The style of the structure is Italian Renaissance. The marquises over the entrance and all of the store fronts will be of cast metal. All of the glass used will be of the best American polished plate.

The block will be carried to the full height allowed by the city ordinances, namely 150 feet, and will have a full basement, with a sub-basement under a portion of the building. The first story will be utilized for store purposes and the twelve upper floors for lofts. The building will be served by two passenger elevators and one large freight elevator, together with a sidewalk elevator communicating with the basement and sub-basement.

The property on which the Bronson block will be erected was acquired under a ninety-nine-year lease by Shirley G. Ward, from Mrs. Leona P. Wood about four months ago, Bryan and Bradford acting as agents in the transaction. The Standard Fireproof Building Company was incorporated with a capital stock of $200,000 for the purpose of handling the building project. The members of this incorporation are Shirley G. Ward, president; Jeff P. Chandler, secretary; Leo S. Chandler, treasurer. C. A. Sheedy and R. B. Wheeler.

Two and a half years ago R. D. Bronson, who is president and treasurer of the Bronson Desk Company demonstrated his faith in Seventh street by leasing the seven-story, fireproof Eshman building. Since acquiring the Eshman block, values have so far advanced that Bronson has been enabled to sub-let the entire structure with a net profit to himself of approximately $200,000, distributed over the next ten years Bronson, in fact, is the first of the leading business men to attempt to turn the tide of business to Seventh street.

During the time that the new building is under construction, the Bronson Desk Company will occupy a sixty-foot store on the Van Nuys estate immediately south of the new Van Nuys building at Seventh and Spring. Horace J. Prince, of Black Brothers, was instrumental in consummating both the lease with the Standard Fireproof Building Company and that on the temporary site.

ACTIVITY IS NOTICEABLE.

Important Sales Reported in Area Bounded by Pico, Washington, Hill and Figueroa Streets.

The noticeable activity in the section bounded by Pico and Washington, Hill and Figueroa, has resulted in numerous sales recently. Among them is one of a lot 50x131 feet in size, on the south side of Sixteenth street, between Hill and Grand, reported by Charles F. O'Brien Company, the buyer being an eastern investor, and the consideration, $12,000. The new owner is contemplating the erection of an apartment-house.

The same firm reports the sale of the San Remo apartments on Bixel street, near Sixth, for $28,000. Eastern investors are the buyers of this property, which nets more than 8 per cent. on the selling price.

TO DRAFT NEW LAW.

The Building Ordinance Commission appointed three weeks ago by the City Council to redraft the building ordinance of the city met in the Story building and named several committees to handle the various phases of the work.

The present ordinance was framed ten years ago and although it has been amended from time to time it fails to meet present-day requirements. The commissioners declare that many important changes will be made in the present building laws. Following are the committees: General Arrangement: R. B. Young, C. E. Richards, Octavius Morgan, Sr.; class "A" steel: Morgan, Albert C. Martin, J. F. Hall, C. L. Peck, George C. Sutton; class "A" concrete: Martin, Edward Maybery, Morgan, Richards, Hall; class "B" and "C:" Young, J. H. Bean, J. A. Crook, Richard Sutton; class "D," Bean, Brook, Young, Peck; theaters and halls: Morgan, Young and Peck; fire escapes, Maybery, Hall and Sutton.

FOR SALE—

A TOWNSITE, NOT A TRACT.

We are not selling an addition to some other tract or community, but our Verdugo Project is the development of a townsite proper.

Its location is strategic. It is at the junction point of three important residence valleys, and only 11 miles from Broadway.

It is also the junction point of the trolley line, the county paved boulevard, the State highway, and two other important boulevards. This makes a "five point" hub center. The strategic location absolutely forces this spot to be a community center spot.

The greatest money made around Los Angeles has been in the transforming of the raw land into a high-class residential community. Especially is this so when the property is so situated as to make it a strategic location for a center spot or townsite.

At Verdugo you can secure your home at the lowest wholesale figure, and at the same time share in the tremendous profits in the building of the "Throne City." Real opportunity means action.

Call today for folder and arrange for auto trip to the property.

OLD
GRAND AVENUE.

The great central thoroughfare. Look at its position, HALF WAY BETWEEN MAIN AND FIGUEROA, FIRST THROUGH STREET LEADING OFF FROM SEVENTH WEST OF BROADWAY. GRAND OLD GRAND AVENUE has the through car lines, lots of car lines. Eleven fine buildings to be erected on GRAND AVENUE THIS YEAR. Grand old Grand avenue intersects and cuts out Figueroa at Santa Barbara avenue. Every real estate man of experience knows just what is in the wind for Grand avenue. I offer the large southeast corner of Grand avenue and 14th 60 ft. corner; also 75 feet, only 250 feet south of Pico, on east side Grand. This lot runs through to Palm st. This is really a continuation of Olive st. Don't forget that Grand and Pico is the future center of business. We can all take off our hat to the man who had sense enough to pay $102,500 for the corner of Grand and Pico last week. I will sell on easy terms, or lease, straight 99-year lease. I own ten such pieces, between 4th and 14th, Olive and Flower. Also the very finest manufacturing site, 7 acres, on Alameda st., S. P. and Santa Fe switch. Also several of the very finest apartment sites, for sale cheap, or 99-year lease. One piece fronts on three streets. DO NOT FAIL TO SEE ME if you want gilt-edge property.

A POSITIVE SNAP—Owner is compelled to sacrifice this property in order to save a much larger one. The property is well worth from $2850 to $3800, but owner must positively raise some money immediately, and if it can be sold immediately we can deliver it for $2950. There is a straight loan on it for $1750 which runs two years yet, so it can be seen that it must have been appraised at at least $3600 in order to secure a loan of that amount. It has the advantage of being —WITHIN WALKING DISTANCE.
IS A SPLENDID SITE FOR APARTMENT HOUSE.
—IN A GOOD RENTAL SECTION.
—IS OFFERED AT 20 PER CENT. UNDER VALUE—

Why, we have not got even a vacant lot within so short a distance from business as is this for $3500. It is but once probably in several years that one would run across a bargain such as this. The lot is 50x114.3, though one side has a depth of 127.19 feet. There is a house of six rooms, that is always occupied, and brings in a rental of $20 per month. Come in and get particulars. We know it is a SNAP, and you will know it also, when we tell you all about it. Even if you don't want an apartment site to build on; even if you don't want the house to live in; even if you are not looking for any property; even though you should offer all these objections, you no doubt would like to invest a few dollars with no possible chance to lose them, with the positive assurance that you do not even have to wait for an increase in the value of the property for you, get it now at least 20 per cent. under value.

FOR SALE—

WE DARE
DO AN UNUSUAL THING.

In order to absolutely convince folks of the matchless climate at Verdugo, "The Throne City," we are this week going to inaugurate our "Special Moonlight Trips" to the property.

We are determined to show the soft, velvety atmosphere found at Verdugo—so different from the lower elevations.

We want you to see for yourself the rugged mountains at twilight and eventide, with the ever-changing coloring and shadows.

We want you to drink in our balmy evening air surcharged with the pine and chapparal of the mountains.

Therefore, we have arranged this week for special moonlight auto trips to the property. These trips are for business. We are frankly trying to show the real charm of this valley in the evenings.

In order that you may feel under no obligations, we have set a fare of 50c for the round trip.

Auto leaves office sharp at 7:30 p.m., but you MUST make your reservations in advance.

There's a reason why we dare adopt this novel plan of showing our property in the evening as well as in the daytime. The evening hours are the real home hours. These are the real hours of your life. We want you to know our country at this time of the day.

We challenge Southern California to produce a better climate than Verdugo.

Come and know for yourself.

INVESTOR'S
NOTICE.

The transformation of raw undeveloped land into high-class retail subdivision property has been tremendously profitable around Los Angeles.

Large increase in values always follows improvement and population.

The Verdugo Project embraces the formation of a club of homeseekers and investors who will buy up a large tract of undeveloped land. They will also provide for high-class improvements on the property. They may take up a part of the land themselves, if they so desire, and then share in the large profits arising from the retail sale later on.

The investor may either keep his principal in first mortgage gold bonds, drawing 6 per cent. per annum, or can convert these bonds into land and enjoy increase in values on the land, but in either event will participate in the large retail profits as mentioned before.

For the conservative investor it is a guaranteed 6 per cent. investment, assuring large additional profits, the amount of which will depend solely as to whether Los Angeles and surrounding community will continue to grow or not.

We invite careful analysis of the entire project.

Doesn't it interest you sufficiently to cause investigation?

VERDUGO,
THE THRONE CITY.
Your Ultimate Home Place.

The phrase, "Throne City" is not just a pretty sounding name, but there is a reason for it. Verdugo has an elevation of 1200 to 1400 feet. From there you look down over Glendale and across Los Angeles to the Pacific Ocean, with Catalina in the distance.

In the "Throne Chair" of all Southern California, this situation is at the junction point of three important residence valleys, and only 11 miles from Broadway. It is not an addition to some other tract, or community, but is a townsite proper. It has a predestined location for a truly important commercial and social center. Verdugo, the "Throne City" is an absolute certainty.

We have told you a whole lot about the magnificent glory of Verdugo Heights townsite. Nature has proclaimed it the "Throne City." She has made the hills greener and the climate more balmy and delightful, and given the territory a beautiful little babbling brook (a mighty asset in Southern California.)

It is ultimately the homeplace of the cultured folks, who love and appreciate Nature and better Southern California climate.

Wouldn't you like to have a share in the transforming of this beautiful spot, from the raw land into the high-class retail residential community?

We have just completed the purchase of 1920 acres in the same locality. We offer this to YOU in 10-acre tracts at $30, $35 and $40 per acre. You cannot duplicate these lands in this district in 40-acre tracts at less than double our price.

Monthly payments can be made covering a period of three years, or terms arranged to suit.

These lands are in a settled district of prosperous homes, where lands with water are being sold by another company at $175.00 to $250.00 per acre. About 2000 acres in this district are already under cultivation and owners this year are realizing from $800 to $1200 an acre on their FRUIT and VEGETABLE crops.

WATER SUPPLY ABUNDANT.

Unlimited supply of pumping water abailable at low cost, also plenty of rainfall for grains, potatoes, etc. APPLES, PEACHES, PLUMS, APRICOTS and other fruits from this district are becoming famous for their SIZE, COLOR and especially their FLAVOR.

THE SOIL.

Is a rich granular silt, the accumulation of countless ages, washed from the snow-capped mountains in the background, the depth of this soil ranges from 50 to 175 feet, the land is level with a gradual fall to the lake, making it ideal for drainage and irrigation.

NO SMUDGING NECESSARY.

Elevation 4000 to 4300 feet, large fresh water lake 1½ miles distant, also an ideal town, with churches, schools, business houses, packing-house, etc., near at hand on railroad.

If desired we will arrange to plant your land for you. These lands offered combine two essential features from the viewpoint of the purchaser.

First, it is an ideal residential district.

I HAVE A GOVERNMENT CLAIM OF 160 acres of as fine land as there is in Riverside county, a few hours' ride from Los Angeles. The leading nurseryman in this State, and an acknowledged expert on soil says that there is no finer citrus fruit land in the State. An engineer of national reputation has gone over the valley in person and has reported upon the feasibility and practicability of an irrigation scheme. The entrymen are now organizing a mutual irrigation company to put into effect the engineer's plans. Does this look good to you at about $10 per acre? If so call at 1020 STORY BLDG., from 2 to 5 p.m.

FOR SALE — I HAVE SPENT MANY weeks examining the offerings in the various citrus districts of Southern California and after a careful search and comparison of values, I can truthfully affirm that here follows the most exceptionaly opportunity to be found today:—

For $11,000, of which $5000 may run on mortgage, I can deliver a 10-acre grove of 15-year-old Washington navels, which have not had sufficient fertilizer, but which, nevertheless, produced 7100 field boxes this year with less than 6 per cent. loss from frost. Located within 2½ miles of three packing-houses at San Fernando. Soil is a deep, rich, sandy loam. Complete cement irrigating system. Fifty shares water stock free. This water costs nothing, but is not enough quite to irrigate. Balance water to irrigate is available under deeded right, and the cost has never exceeded $20 in any one month. There are 2000 budded late Valencias nursery stock in prime condition, a family orchard, 903 Washington navels, a 5-room, plastered house, with cement cellar, a Walker portable house with cement cellar, besides barns, poultry houses, sheds and requisite outbuildings, making a complete double home place, as well as producing grove. Now mark well, in addition to the productive possibilities which are limited only by the amount of care and fertilizer you are willing to give, this grove is located just 730 feet from the new boulevard and electric line and the construction camp is now in sight of it, with certainty that electric cars will be running into Los Angeles, 22 miles, soon. What will the cars do to the price of this grove? If you want a pioneer's profit on the safest investment there is, and have $6000 handy, come, look into this opportunity. Believe me, you will be astounded, as I was, at the comparison with prices elsewhere. If investment is too small for you, I have one that requires $20,000 cash, to submit to you.

FOR SALE—
THE BIGGEST BARGAIN
IN FROSTLESS FOOTHILL BELT.
10-acre full bearing navel orange grove, located in thriving city, with electric cars to Los Angeles. Situated on high ground overlooking most beautiful valley in the State, also fine mountain view. It is absolutely frostless and groves in this immediate vicinity have recently sold at $3500 per acre and none less than $2500. It has more water stock than necessary and a tremendous crop of fruit is set for coming season.

This grove is owned by non-resident who cannot give it proper attention and the price has just been reduced from $35,000 to $30,000 for quick sale and on the ridiculous terms of $5000 cash and we believe the balance can be paid at the rate of $2500 per year. You can buy this place, take off large crop in seven months and then resell at BIG PROFIT; or you can keep it and pay for it out of the crops.

This is a genuine bargain; a pick-up pure and simple. It will sell on sight, for there is a sure profit of $5000 in less than 6 months on an investment of a like amount.

Remember the location, climate, soil and water conditions are perfect and that the price is away below the market in this great district, and the terms are unheard of.

Orange groves are so good and so profitable that the price is high, terms are "stiff."

Many a man wants an orange grove and hasn't the money to get started.

Why not consider this plan?

Buy land at Tehachapi, where prices are low and terms are easy, and where you can make from the start your living besides paying for the land.

Plant apples and pears and bring them into bearing. You can then SELL your orchard and have money enough to buy the best of orange groves.

PAN-AMERICAN OIL COMPANY, THE POSSESSOR OF SOME GUSHERS AND THEN SOME.

We have been advised by B. M. Howe, superintendent of the Pan-American Oil Company, that the Midway Fields Oil Company's well (located a short distance from Pan-American well No. 1,) was still flowing between the 4½ and 6-inch casing, at the rate of from 1000 to 2500 barrels per day of 26 gravity oil.

Mr. Howe describes the performance of this well as one of the finest that he has ever seen and he has been in the business for many years, right in the heart of the gusher territory. It is therefore easy to believe that this must be a gusher. Mr. Howe is sanguine in his belief that Pan-American well No. 1 will open up the same gusher sand as the Lakeview, which was also encountered by the Consolidated Midway Oil Company on Fractional Section 29, in their famous 60,000-barrel well, and the K. T. and O. on Section 31, 12-23, which was a monster gusher. They placed in the tanks from this well 49,000 barrels of oil in 32 hours. That means oil territory, the most prolific oil sand in the State of California.

The El Dora which is a lessee of Pan-American Oil Company have drilled two wells into the same sand on Section 32, 12-23. The Midway Northern and Maricopa Northern, and the American Oilfields Company, Ltd., have all penetrated the same stratum and are all located on Section 32, 12-23, in the same section that Pan-American Oil Company is operating upon. The Pan-American Oil Company holds under lease in this famous section more land than the Midway Northern and Maricopa Northern Oil Company combined.

Mr. Howe in his report states that instead of finishing up Pan-American well No. 1 at the point where they had encountered oil, in as much as the Midway Fields' well positively demonstrated that this same gusher oil sand was within a short distance beyond the present depth of Pan-American oil, he had therefore concluded to drill deeper into the bowels of the earth and penetrate this monster producing oil stratum—and, as he states, "Get that seventy cent oil for the benefit of Pan-American stockholders."

In order to avoid accidents he is changing over his rig from a rotary to a standard, and will complete the same with standard tools—which any operator of knowledge and experience will readily concur is the proper thing to do.

It is readily conceded by all who know, that Mr. Ben Howe is one of the best field men in the business.

With a gusher so near in sight, and a monster gusher at that, and with people in charge of the work on Pan-American Oil Company who are thoroughly competent, and the price of the stock at its present low figure, it is certainly in our opinion one of the best buys on the market today, and should enable our clients to make big profits therefrom for many years to come. We therefore unhesitatingly recommend and urge upon each one who has some money to invest, to put at least a part of the same into Pan-American Oil Company's stock. We invite strictest investigation. We invite you to go into the field and visit the property and be convinced—as seeing is believing, we have seen it and we know that we are advising you to the best of our ability to get in just at the psychological moment.

We have an option on a small block of Pan-American Oil Company's stock that we can deliver at 15 cents a share.

This option was secured prior to notice of advance to 20 cents a share.

We shall sell this block at 15 cents a share as long as it lasts.

First come first served.

PAN-AMERICAN OIL COMPANY.

Following telegram from Field Superintendent just received:

"MARICOPA, CAL., June 17, 1912.

'Pan-American Oil Co.,

"Los Angeles, Cal.

"Midway Fields Oil Company, section four, eleven, twenty-three, Maricopa, struck big oil sand at 2767 feet last night. Oil flowed over derrick. Oil tests 25½ gravity. This well close proximity to Pan-American well No. 1. I expect strike same gusher sand at early date.

"B. M. HOWE, Superintendent,
"Pan-American Oil Co."

This telegram shows that Pan-American investors are in one of the great oil companies of California. Furthermore, oil of 25½ gravity means better than 60 cents a barrel.

The price of Pan-American stock is still only 15 cents. Better see us today.

SUBMARINE STOCK.
Is now selling at $10 per share.

Submarine stock was first sold at 10c per share, then at 20c, then at 50c and when first advertised was at 75c per share. Everybody remembers how fast this stock rose in value, first to $1.00, then $1.50, then $2.00, $3.00, $4.00, $5.00, $6.00 and $7.00 per share. On March 1, 1912, this stock, which was selling at $7.00 per share was withdrawn from the market. On June 14, 1912, this stock was again placed on the market at $10 per share, because we desire to give every one a chance to become a stockholder in this company. There is but one kind of stock in our company, but there are two kinds of stockholders in all companies—INVESTORS and SPECULATORS. An investor buys stock on the merit of the industry or speculation, while a speculator speculates on the stock.

The speculator who bought this stock at 75c may sell it for $1 and make a big "speculator's" profit. If you can find this stock for less than $10 per share, take it, for Submarine stock is the best buy on the market, no matter where you get it, whether from the company or from the street. Our first Submarine Boat is nearing completion under the expert workmanship of the best shipbuilders on this coast. It is well worth your while to see them shaping the steel plates and then riveting them on, driving the rivets at the phenomenal rate of 100 per hour. Just get a pass from the office.

FOR SALE—LAND, SUBDIVISION AND BUILDING BONDS.

We are specialists in the sale of land subdivision and building bonds of approved security. We offer only such of these issues as our appraisers and legal department have thoroughly looked into and can safely recommend to our clientele. Two issues now being offered are sold to net 6½ per cent. and 6¾ per cent., respectively; bond buyers will do well to look into them before purchasing other issues. If we have not what you wish, we will procure same for you upon your order.

In purchasing bonds from this house you will be relieved of all the numerous details incident to appraising property, looking after payment of taxes, insurance, etc., and you may also have the full assurance that we will not offer any security which we ourselves have not looked into or invested in. Send for circulars describing real estate first mortgage bonds.

AMALGAMATED OIL AT $80 PER SHARE is ridiculously low. Company's 175,000 barrels monthly production in Fullerton and Sherman fields equals 400,000 in northern territory. Sherman field well No. 31, deepened 175 feet, came in 5000 barrels strong, gives every hope of similar results in many old wells there. Monthly dividends now equal 15 per cent., on $80 and occasional extra dividends increase this income. Company has comfortable surplus and no debts. J. H. PICK AND DRILL—
The most important improvement last week on the Pick and Drill 300-foot level, is in the south crosscut, where, within the past few days, sulphide copper has been gradually adding to the gold values. Remember, this is SULPHIDE COPPER, and below the water level, at that. Do you know what this portends? Are you keeping in mind that on the 300-foot level the main copper ledge shows the magnificent width of 168 feet? Do you know that copper mines are so valuable that capital is constantly in search of them? If you are a mining man I do not have to tell you this; you know it. And it does look now, to a certainty, that Pick and Drill, in addition to being an important gold mine—which is now a well-proven fact—will also prove to be a large copper mine. In the light of present-day conditions in this mine, no man who is seeking a good mining investment, where safety and large profits are assured, can afford to pass this stock up. One of these near by days it is going to jump out of sight—mark my word. Buy the stock today; not for a paltry 10-cent "scalp," but for great big profits and permanent dividends.

[Special Service to The Times by [illegible] ton & Co., Members N. Y. Stock Exchange, 128 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch to The Times.] The cotton market [illegible] off at the opening today [illegible] with lower cables and continued [illegible] weather, but around 11.40 for [illegible] good demand was encountered [illegible] slight rally. Hutton's Liverpool [illegible] ents advise that besides a [illegible] there is 1¼d a pound profit between [illegible] and cotton, and that shipments [illegible] so largely sold ahead that [illegible] "scramble" is expected for the [illegible] eries of the new crop. The market [illegible] ing much resistance. Weather [illegible] will cause extensive short covering.

Logan & Bryan say:

"Weather conditions during the [illegible] tinued highly favorable to the [illegible] the cotton crops. Rains where [illegible] fair and warmer weather in the [illegible] tions, following a period of [illegible] cessive rainfall and low temperatures. As a result the market has [illegible] high level reached previous to [illegible] ditions when the crop was threatened by adverse weather, but the decline has been nominal and attended with no [illegible] of strength that is to be accounted for by a strong spot situation and a [illegible] of desirable grades, causing [illegible] the better grades and staple to [illegible] than usual.

"This condition has deterred [illegible] selling that otherwise would have [illegible] under the influence of recent favorable development. The day's market was [illegible] and narrow, prices [illegible] cables and indications for good [illegible] Sunday, selling off [illegible] the usual support that has been [illegible] market on every decline and the [illegible] erings that follow on the appearance [illegible] support the market rallied and [illegible] practically all the loss."

SAN FRANCISCO EXCHANGE.

Mining Stocks Improve, Giving Best Market the Past Week—Goldfields and Tonopah Advance.

[Special Service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 22.—[Exclusive to The Times.] The market was stronger this morning, and trading better distributed. Atlanta closed 2 points up, Merger 3, Florence and Con. were unchanged. The Manhattan stocks closed steady and unchanged from yesterday.

The Tonopahs were stronger and in much better demand. Jim Butler gained 2, Midway 4, Montana sold at 2.55; Mizpah Ex. closed at 1.47½ bid, North Star was up 2, Rescue 1, Tonopah Ex. 10, West End 10.

The market was full of buying orders for the Tonopahs. Stocks in the outlying camps closed unchanged.

The Comstocks were quiet and gains and losses, which were small, were about equally distributed. It was the best Saturday's business the exchange has had for some time.

Florence has shipped about 150 tons of ore, averaging $150 a ton, from the new strike in the virgin ground on the 250-foot level. In addition, several hundred tons of rock, ranging from $50 to $100, has been stored underground in the old stope. All ore running less than $100 is being stored in the stope.

Last week the Montana milled 1990 tons of ore, with a recovery of 90 per cent.

THE COPPER INDUSTRY.

[Furnished by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, 118 West Fourth street, Los Angeles.]

No London metal market Saturday.

Within the past few days two companies have increased dividends—Phelps-Dodge and Ahmeek. The former has declared an extra dividend of $2 a share in addition to the regular rate of $2.50 quarterly, while the latter has increased its rates from $4 to $5 a share, this representing the third successive increase by this company since dividends were initiated in April, 1911.

The raising of dividend rates which is now in progress emphasizes the strong position of the coppers and reflects the advance in metal prices, though only to a small degree, for the real effect of the higher metal quotations has not yet been felt. With the maintenance of the present metal prices a large majority of the dividend-paying copper companies may be expected to join the ranks and increase their rates.

During the month of May, Ray Consolidated produced approximately 3,150,000 pounds of copper. The tonnage handled during the month amounted to 128,300 tons, or an average of approximately 4100 tons a day.

Four units of the Ray concentrators were operating, the output representing slightly over 1000 tons a unit. The grade of ore going to the mill is steadily increasing and for the present month should average from 1.75 per cent. to 1.80 per cent. The average grade treated during May was approximately 1.73 per cent. and on this an extraction of around 70½ per cent. was made.

The mine is being rapidly placed in condition to supply the tonnage for the concentrator and that treated for June will show a considerable increase over May. By August 1 the concentrator should be handling 5000 tons a day.

The feature of the Ray Consolidated situation which has been responsible for considerable "inside" buying of the shares is that mill troubles have now been eliminated and the Ray mill is now showing a recovery of 72 per cent. with four units in commission, turning out about 3,000,000 pounds of copper a month, which permits of earnings of about $2 a share.

Two additional sections will go into commission this fall and the last two sections early next year, by which time the mine will be in position to meet the full mill requirements.

Boston News Bureau says:

"Consulting Engineer E. P. Jennings of the Utah Metal Mining Company is in Boston and speaks most confidently of the possibilities of that proposition. He says:

" 'Our big tunnel, to have a total length of 11,460 feet, is now about 50 per cent. completed. This tunnel enterprise should serve the company, not only as an outlet for its own ore, but should also provide important revenues in transportation tolls from other shippers in the camp.

" 'Only those who have visited Bingham have any adequate conception of the difficult transportation problems which must be met, and a transportation tunnel through the mountain giving easy and quick access to the new International smelter, for instance, at Tooele, should attract large tonnage of ore, and on all such shipments the Utah Metal Company should derive a revenue of at least 25 cents a ton on shipments of anywhere from 1500 to 2000 tons a day.

" 'The difficulties which the mines of Bingham have in securing dumping ground should also be a factor in favor of the Utah Metal Company in affording these mines a convenient outlet for their waste ore. But the tunnel is not only a transportation project. It is just now nearing the point where it should make important ore disclosures. In fact, on the north side we have already struck small seams of ore. A telegram went out yesterday ordering a 300-foot crosscut to start from a point 1300 feet from the north entrance to cut the fissures of the Mountain Maid claim, which at a point 200 feet above showed heavy mineralization. This crosscut will probably be completed in not exceeding forty days. Silver-lead ore of a high grade was formerly shipped from the Mountain Maid.

" 'Sixty-six hundred feet from the Tooele end we propose to crosscut to the Julia S. fissures, which lie 800 feet to the west and are known to be rich ore-bearing fissures. The Bingham and New Haven people have for a long time been extracting ore from these fissures.

" 'All this crosscutting is with a view to opening up the property so as to put it in shape for production when we shall have cut the other fissures that lie in the path of the tunnel, and within the next 3000 feet.

" 'The company also owns an important water supply, which should be a big factor in its favor should there be a determination at a later date to build a concentrating mill, a plant of which this district stands in great need.

" 'The Utah Metal Company has important possibilities, which should begin to make themselves felt within the next few months.'

"Our special correspondent at Houghton, Mich., wires us as follows regarding recent underground developments at the Superior Copper property:

" 'Shaft is sinking to twentieth level, and is now bottomed about 100 feet below eighteenth level. Crosscuts will be run to new lode from nineteenth and twentieth levels. No station will be cut until twentieth level is reached.

" 'New west lode was discovered several months ago by diamond drill from crosscut at thirteenth level. It runs parallel to old Superior lode about 100 feet distant.'

"Lateral openings in No. 4, 5 and 6 shafts are all running into good ground. In No. 5 shaft all levels from the tenth to the thirteenth are looking well. In No. 6 shaft, levels six, seven and nine are in good ground, both north and south. The eighth level has thus far encountered only fair ground. The seventh level is showing up the best in No. 6 shaft.

"The ground being opened in No. 1 shaft is fairly good. In No. 2 shaft the openings are the poorest of any in the Mohawk.

"All shafts are now sinking, with the exception of No. 3. Nos. 1 and 2 are down about 2200 feet; No. 4 is bottomed at the seventeenth level; No. 5 at the thirteenth level, while No. 6 is several feet below the ninth level.

"Mohawk is stamping about 2700 tons of rock a day, or about the same as the daily average of the past few years. Nos. 1, 2, 4 and 5 shafts are hoisting about the same tonnage of between 13,000 and 14,000 tons a month. No. 3 is producing about 9000 tons a month, and No. 6 about 8000."

ADVANCE FORCED BY THE SHORTS.

WHEAT ASCENDS MATERIALLY ON CHICAGO MARKET.

Closing Prices Are from Three-eighths to Seven-eighths Higher. Corn and Oats Are Dearer and Provisions Pull Through Without Appreciable Change.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, June 22.—In attempting to guard against possibility of an upheaval of prices Monday, when the Chicago Board of Trade will not be in session, wheat shorts competing today forced a material advance. The market closed steady at a rise of ⅜ to ⅞ over last night. Corn finished ¼ @ ⅜ to ⅝ up. Oats were dearer by a shade to ⅜ @ ½ and provisions varied from 2½ decline, to 5c increase in cost.

September wheat ranged from 102⅞ to 103⅞ @ 104, with last sales 103⅞ @ ⅞, a net gain of ⅝ @ ½.

September corn swung from 71¼ to 72⅝, closing steady ¼ @ ⅝ net higher at 72 even. Cash grades were only in slight demand. No. 2, yellow was quoted at 75¼ @ ¾.

September oats ranbed from 40¼ to 38⅞ @40, with the close at 40⅛ @ ¼, just ⅛ over last night.

Provisions averaged about steady. In the end, changes either way did not exceed five cents.

CHICAGO AFFAIRS HOLD ATTENTION.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET FEELS UTTER STAGNATION.

Trading Is Light, Price Changes Being Nominal, but With Downward Tendency—Many Issues Not Quoted—Loans Show Decrease. Reserves Show Nominal Increase.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 22.—For complete and utter stagnation today's two-hour session on the stock exchange has not been exceeded in several years. Attendance of members was unusually light. Affairs at Chicago again engrossed attention to the exclusion of all other matters. Trading in the first hour amounted to scarcely 35,000 shares and the total for the session was 81,000. Price changes in the speculative favorites were nominal but with a downward tendency. Various issues were not quoted at all.

The bank statement showed an actual loan decrease of almost $12,000,000. The reserves showed a very nominal increase.

The bond market was steady with total sales par value, $987,000.

Panama 3s lost 1-8 per cent. on call, on the week.

NEW YORK, June 22.—[Exclusive to The Times.] The usual Saturday dullness prevailed and the aggregate dealings were not large. British American and one of two other issues were fairly active. The market closed quiet, with prices generally firm.

Boston coppers showed continued strength, and advanced today. United States Smelting and Osceola were the features, making new high records on this movement. It is expected that the next dividend on Smelting will be increased. Isle Royale continues favorable.

Weekly Financial Review.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury Building, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, June 22. — [Exclusive to The Times.] Stock market during past week has been almost entirely under the influence of political considerations with the day to day fluctuations governed in great part by the tenor of the advices received from the seat of the Republican convention. As the week closed, a feeling of hopefulness became rather pronounced owing to the fact that it appeared as if the intense agitation between the various contenders for honors had reached such a stage as permitted the conclusion that destructive radicalism is not likely to be the keynote of the party.

The Democratic convention will doubtless receive close attention next week and therefore the securities market for at least a few sessions longer will probably be dominated by political advices.

The decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission in connection with the rate on coal the latter part of the week, seemed to open a new question as far as the coal roads were concerned, especially as it was announced some time ago that the commission on its own motion would carefully look into all matters surrounding the mining and carrying of coal by the railroads which in the end may have as great effect as the case now being considered by the Supreme Court, decision on which has been expected for some months.

Advices as to the state of trade on the whole are favorable and reports from agricultural sections denote a satisfactory prospect.

As the mid-year settlements approach, it is anticipated that there might be a slight hardening of money rates, particularly abroad. The decline of late in consols and rents has been ascribed to be an unsatisfactory condition of investment markets abroad, but as far as domestic investment demand is concerned, it has been noted within the past few days that the inquiry for issues of fixed maturities has broadened somewhat. Still the betterment so far has not been of an extent to warrant the conclusion that new corporate financing on a large scale can be successfully conducted at this period.

The action of the Canadian Pacific in awarding a $10,000,000 contract for the double tracking of a portion of its lines is rather suggestive of the difference in attitude on the part of our neighbors and ourselves with regard to railroads. It has been pointed out quite often that our railroads cannot make improvement on a large scale under the present oppressive methods now being pursued by the various regulating committees, but it is hoped that a complete change will take place within the near future, as a result of the rather clear indications in many quarters that regulation has been carried to the extreme.

THIRTEEN-STORY BLOCK PLANNED.

Sun Drug Company to Erect Broadway Skyscraper.

Lot Secured Under Fifty-Year Ground Lease.

Building Projected Will Cost Quarter-Million.

Following the exclusive publication in last Thursday's Times of the news covering the lease by the Sun Drug Company of a site on the west side of Broadway between Seventh and Eighth streets, The Times is authorized to publish a perspective drawings prepared by Architects Train and Williams of the thirteen-story store and office building which will be erected by the big drug concern on the property. About the only detail of the transaction not previously mentioned in The Times is the fact that the deal was handled in its entirety by George Brockwell, with Robert Marsh and Company.

The lease was secured from the John Norton estate and involves a lot 60x165 feet in size and 139 feet south of Seventh street. The lessees are C. Laux, F. N. Drake, J. F. Duane, F. I. Owens, F. S. Devoin and Henry Blumenberg, Jr., of the Sun Drug Company. The term of the lease is fifty years and the total rental consideration is given at $1,750,000.

The building to be erected will cost approximately $250,000 and will be of the most modern steel frame construction. It will be handsomely faced with brick and terra-cotta and will be a distinct addition to the metropolitan skyline of South Broadway. The first floor will be occupied by the Sun Drug Company and the twelve upper floors by offices.

Making Money.

HANDSOME PROFIT ON INVESTMENT.

SYNDICATE GETS GOOD PRICE FOR SITE ON MAIN.

Lot for Which Ninety Thousand Was Paid Six Years Ago Sells at Hundred and Thirty-five Thousand Dollars—Important North End Sale Reported.

A consideration of $135,000 was paid yesterday by C. A. Hammel for 86x130 feet to an alley at Nos. 945 to 947 South Main street. The agent in the transaction was Frank M. Vail, of the business property department of the Wright, Callender, Andrews Company, and the sellers were members of a syndicate represented by the same company. The property is improved with a two-story brick building which is rented for $5000 a year and which is occupied by the Chanslor-Lyon Motor Car Company. The sellers paid $92,000 for the property in 1906, and are consequently realizing a profit of $43,000 on the original cost price, besides having enjoyed a good income from the holding for the last six years. Hammel, who is engaged in the oil-burner business, buys the property as an investment and will ultimately use the building for his own business.

Vail also reports the sale for the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, as trustee, to a local capitalist, represented by the Los Angeles Investment Company, of 28x150 feet, improved with a two-story brick building, under lease at $6000 a year, for $80,000. The deal was partly in the nature of an exchange for residence frontage in the Wilshire district. Vail also reports the sale for John H. Lane to the Charles F. O'Brien Company of 50x130 feet, improved with a small cottage, on the south side of Sixteenth street between Hill and Grand, for $11,500.

The sale of the southeast corner of Washington street and Grand avenue, 150 feet on each thoroughfare, for W. W. Mines and Charles G. Andrews, to a local investor, is reported by Thomas C. Bundy & Co., as agents in the transfer. The property, which sold for $90,000, was purchased by Mines and Andrews for a client about three months ago, the Huntington Land and Improvement Company being the seller. It is understood that a good profit has been realized by the quick turn. Another sale reported by Bundy is that of a lot on the east side of Olive, between Tenth and Eleventh, improved with a four-flat building, for Ralph C. Hamlin to a local investor, the consideration being given at $50,000.

A sale of considerable interest to property-owners in the northern portion of the business section is that involving the transfer by Henry W. Taylor, Jacob Samuels and Edward I. Talbot, as trustees for the Huff Estate, to Morris Windt, of 49x120 feet on the south side of Second street 165 feet west of Broadway and adjoining the California building on the west. The consideration is given at $58,000. The property is improved with a three-story brick building which is devoted to hotel purposes.

DESIRE TITLES FROM COUNTY.

MOVEMENT TO URGE USE OF TORRENCE LAND ACT.

Club Women, Led by President of Outlook Club, Plan Campaign of Education With Hope of Interesting Property Owners in General Registration of Realty.

It is among the possibilities that titles to Los Angeles city and county realty may be issued in the comparatively near future under the Torrence land act, instead of through the various abstract and title companies, as is now universally the case. A plan is being formulated to bring about a campaign of education as to the provisions of this act, with the hope that there may be started a general demand for its application.

And one of the odd features of this movement is that it is being backed by club women of this city. Mrs. J. F. Scherfee, of No. 1505 Arlington street, is the prime mover in this plan. She is president of the Outlook Club, and a member of the Board of Governors of the Woman's City Club.

Mrs. Cherfee some time ago became interested in the provisions of the Torrence land act, whereby the original deeds to properties may be recorded with county officials upon application of the owner and thereafter the deeds and instruments affecting the title to such land are kept on file at the county offices and from these offices there may be issued at any time a certificate of title backed by the county.

She interested other club women in the discussion of what she believes are advantages over the present prevailing system of securing certificates of title from abstract and title companies, and they have now in process the formation of plans for a general campaign of education on this line.'

These club women believe that the demand for the application of the provisions of the act depends simply upon educating property owners to its use, and it is proposed to not only take up discussions in various clubs of the city, but to form a series of local clubs in various parts of the city, and possibly throughout the county, for the especial purpose of urging the alleged advantages of the use of this law.

Although the Torrence Land Act has been in existence since 1897, it has been invoked in but few instances. In Imperial county last year there was on application for the registration of land under this act, and this was said to be the only application of this character in Southern California. The Commonwealth Club of San Francisco has taken up this subject and is urging the general adoption of its provisions in handling of real estate titles in the bay district.

C. C. Reynolds, a member of the City Board of Freeholders, which body is framing a new city charter, is advocating a plan whereby the city itself can enter the business of furnishing certificates of title to real properties within the city, but the provisions of the Torrence Land Act are so much on the same lines as suggested by Reynolds that other members of the Board of Freeholders believe if any move of this kind is to be made there should be invoked the use of the machinery thus provided.

Heretofore there have been a number of applications for registration of land in San Francisco under this act, and the constitutionality of the act has been caried to the State Supreme Court and from thence to the United States Supreme Court, which has sustained it.

The lack of its general application appears to have been due to the initial expense and the fact that, it not being in general use, property owners are loath to have their lands so recorded for fear a buyer might not be satisfied with the certificates of title provided for under the act.

The promoters of the club campaign believe that within a few months they will be able to arouse public interest in the act to such a degree that there will be many applications for the registration of land under the act's provisions.

Chief Orders Officers to Prevent Salivation of Sidewalks And Make Arrests if Necessary.

Orders have been issued by the Chief of Police to all patrolmen to put a stop to expectorating on the sidewalk.

"This nuisance must stop," said the Chief yesterday. "People who persist in it will be taught a lesson which we hope will deter them from the habit in the future."

The orders of the Chief are to warn ordinary infractors of the ordinance. In instances of a flagrant violation of the sanitary law, the Chief demands that the culprit be arrested and duly arraigned in court.

Here's a Man Who Reads the Minds of Others and Has Grown Rich and Famous by Doing It.

Prof. Bert Reese, accompanied by his wife and C. J. Platt, an oil operator of New York, is passing a few days at the Alexandria. Reese is rated one of the authorities of America on telepathy, and has written extensively of this subject. He is the man who worked out several problems with Edison and also assisted in researches of other scientists of this country and Germany on the subject.

While at the Los Angeles Athletic Club yesterday, where he was entertained by a number of friends of this city, Reese showed a number of weird and almost uncanny examples of what telepathy can do, naming among other things, the various sums of money in the pockets of those seated around the table, discussing their ancestors and otherwise proving the feasibility of telepathy when properly applied.

Reese is here looking after oil properties in which he is interested with a number of New York capitalists. He is a metallurgist of wide reputation and this added to his faculty of divining places and things through the minds of others, has brought him not only name but wealth, according to his friends.

I'm talking to you, not with the inflated adjectives of the professional real estate "booster" but just as a man who's discovered the secret of HOME building.

"I want you to go out to Michillinda—and build that home of yours in 'Millionaireville.'"

For you to build at Michillinda does not mean that you'll have just a piece of ground with a house on it. It means that you'll have a home—in the biggest and most complete sense of the word.

Why this sense of peace, of permanence, of security and of freedom—this "HOME" feeling should be so distinctive at Michillinda—I don't know.

It may be the bigness of the outlook on those mighty Sierra Madres and out across the peaceful San Gabriel valley.

It may be the calm, cool shadows of stately oaks, of sycamore and of orange trees.

It may be your nearness to the splendid estates of those Los Angeles millionaires who have found the ideal setting they wanted for their homes. (H. E. Huntington's estate is just a few steps away.)

It may be the clearness and freshness of the air out here—in high-up Michillinda.

At any rate—it's there—this HOME feeling. You'll recognize it your first trip.

Mihicllinda will get you as it did me.

And when you feel why Michillinda was just made for home building—when you see for yourself the wonderful beauty of it—its picturesque location — its graceful, winding boulevards—its water garden—and realize your nearness to the advantages of the San Gabriel Country Club and to the "show" estates of Southern California—when you fully appreciate the modern conveniences of Michillinda and its excellent car service—(25 minutes out, via Monrovia and Glendora flyers)—

When all this has been impressed on you—

You'll want to know about the size and price of Michillinda lots.

And when I show you beautiful wooded lots, 90x200 feet, for as little as $1500——————!

It's a fact!

But to appreciate the unusualness of these prices you've first to see the unusualness of Michillinda.

I want you to see it—if for nothing more than to prove to you my sincerity when I tell you to build that home of yours out there—in "Millionaireville.'

So call me up—Home F4205 or Main 2961. Tell me when I may run you out there in my car.

Or come around and we'll talk it over—905-6 Security Building.

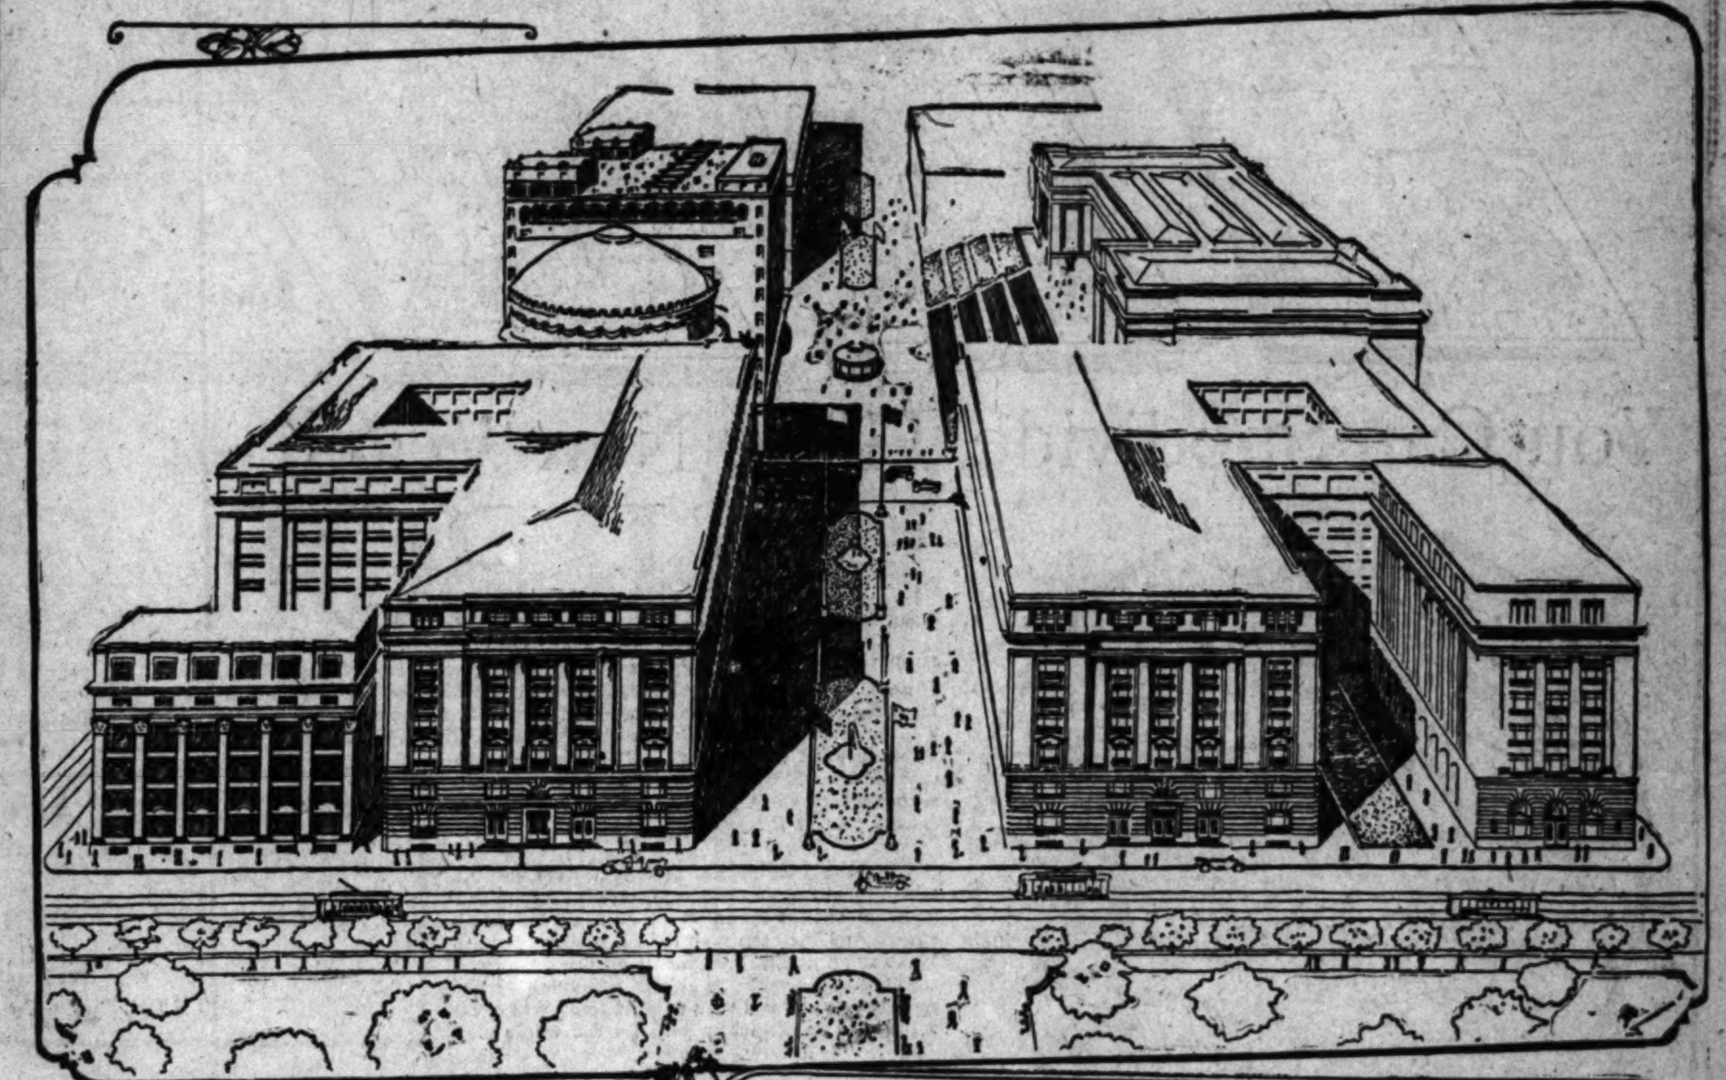
Brand New Suggestion for Civic and Art Center in Heart of Los Angeles.



On Paper.

NEW CIVIC CENTER IDEA INTERESTING AND UNIQUE.

Local Architect Works Out Plan Providing for Proper Approach to Normal Hill and for Future Grouping of All Public Buildings — Wants Los Angeles Mall to Rival Washington's.

AN INTERESTING and original suggestion for the treatment of the Normal School hill and for the future grouping of all public buildings in Los Angeles is offered The Times by Frederic M. Ashley, with the Los Angeles Investment Company, who has made a careful study of the municipal problems growing out of this city's headlong strides in population and material wealth. Sketches illustrating his ideas are reproduced on this page.

Ashley confesses to having been one of those originally favoring Central Park as the proper location for a central library and admits a complete change of heart in this regard since the recent improvement of the park. He also declares that the developments of the past five years have made the Mulford Robinson suggestions for the handling of the library site out of the question. He holds that the water board building is just where it ought to be and that the construction of its foundations makes inadvisable the widening of Fifth street west of Olive.

Instead he has placed the approach to Normal hill directly through the center of the block, just west of Olive street and bounded by Fifth and Sixth streets, extending it as a wide and sightly mall from Olive to Flower. In so doing sight has been lost of the fact that the plan would involve the acquisition by the city of the whole of the property owned by St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral, an exceedingly valuable holding, which is not for sale, but the suggestion is none the less interesting.

NUCLEUS ESTABLISHED.

"In the Pacific Mutual building at Sixth and Olive and the water board building at Fifth and Olive," says Ashley, "we have the nucleus of a beautiful civic and art center. The mall I suggest would look directly onto Central Park and would constitute a really magnificent approach to the library site on the Normal School hill. From this mall a great flight of steps would lead to a broad terrace, above which the building is to be situated.

"These steps would have frequent landings, with circular seats at either end, possibly adorned with statuary, similar in idea to that of Sieges Allee in Berlin. The terrace above would be surrounded by a balustrade surmounted by statuary. On either side of the steps would be green terraces to give color to the scheme.

"In the center of the mall and directly in front of the library would be constructed a bandstand in which would be given municipal concerts. Seats for 10,000 listeners would be provided on the steps of the terraces approaching the library. At the center of the staircase would be a tunnel leading to the elevators in the library and facilitating access for all who did not care to climb the hill.

"For the library I have suggested great colonades on the north and south sides, which can be used as outdoor reading rooms and which would connect directly with the main reading rooms. The approaches by Grand avenue and Fifth street would lead almost to the terrace level, which could then be reached by a short flight of steps."

AUDITORIUM ALSO.

Ashley places the municipal auditorium south of the library, fronting on both Sixth street and Grand avenue, and adjoining the magnificent new Bible Institute building on the east. Directly west of the Bible Institute and occupying the area north of Sixth and between Hope and Flower space is reserved for any public building for which need may arise in the future.

The City Hall of the future is given frontages on both Olive and Sixth streets and is made to enclose the Pacific Mutual building on its north and west sides, ample provision being made for sufficient court space. The postoffice is to be moved bodily from its present site and incorporated into the group at some point along the suggested mall, the present Federal building being given over entirely to the government's customhouse and court business.

Reminded that the suggested mall should, like that in Washington, be made the grand approach to some one building of a crowning architectural importance, Ashley facetiously suggests that the block bounded by Flower, Fourth, Beaudry and Sixth streets be held for the future capital of the State of Southern California. The area in question, like the whole of the area included in his suggested scheme, he holds will undoubtedly be required sooner or later by the city or State or county and should be acquired while it may be bought at a comparatively reasonable figure.

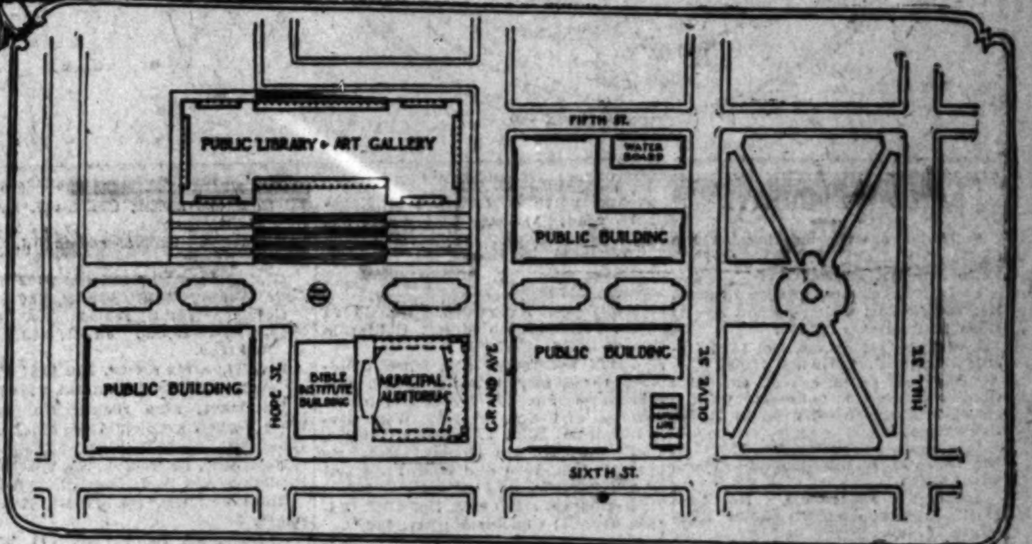
Ashley aptly illustrates his idea by the story of the Roman Sibyl who offered nine books for sale. When the King refused to buy, she burned three of the volumes and offered the remaining books at the same price she had demanded for the nine. Again her offer was rejected. Three more books were burned and the three remaining volumes offered at the original price of the nine. The King bought the last three books and found them to be of inestimable value. "Will Los Angeles get the nine volumes or the three?" he asks.

WINDSOR SQUARE.

A model boulevard, typical of the thoroughfares that are being laid out through the tract is nearing completion in Windsor Square, the residential park projected and handled by R. A. Rowan & Co., on Wilshire frontage. Plans are nearing completion for the four homes to be built in Windsor Square by members of the Janss family. Several costly mansions already have been finished so far as exterior work is concerned and the list of prospective builders is such that the tract will have been highly developed by early fall. Some of the best-known of the lot buyers and the prices of their home lands are Walter G. Chansler, $24,450; Irving H. Hellman, $31,500; Louis M. Cole, $29,250; James R. Martin, $20,000; Charles S. Hall, $10,000; the Janss family, $65,000; Louis Isaacs, $18,000; Mrs. George D. Rowan, $15,632; Willis G. Hunt, $10,500; William Crawford McKnight, $10,500; Mrs. Jeanette C. Donovan, $12,000; D. W. Shanks, $10,000 and A. H. McFarland, $12,500.

RUSHING RAILWAY.

In order to handle the increased passenger traffic daily going to Owensmouth, a second motor bus has been put in use between the Hanna-avenue terminus of the Pacific Electric line, and the main section of the town, by the Janss Investment Company. The latest bus has a capacity of twenty-five passengers. The Pacific Electric is rushing its extension into Owensmouth, the line following the $500,000 boulevard through the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands.



Interesting Idea for Treatment of Normal Hill and Its Approach.

How Frederic M. Ashley, with the Los Angeles Investment Company, would handle a perplexing municipal problem by utilizing the whole block directly west of Central Park, as well as the Normal grounds, for the grouping of future public buildings.

SAN MARINO AND HOOPER.

ESyndicate Pays Cash for Valuable Corner—Site May Be Improved With Large Apartment-House.

Maud H. Lacey has sold to a syndicate of local buyers whose names have been withheld, the northwest corner of San Marino and Hooper streets, for $32,500. The deal was on a cash basis and was handled by the business property department of the Los Angeles Investment Company.

The corner has a frontage of 456 feet on San Marino and 135 feet on Hooper street. It is declared to be an excellent site for an apartment-building, but the purchasing syndicate asserts that no plans have been made for the development of the corner.

ADD TO TOWNSITE.

W. I. Hollingsworth & Company have added fifty acres to their Harbor City development, in the shape of half and three-quarter-acre residence sites. The excellent street grading, which is characteristic of Harbor City proper, will extend through the addition, which joins the town site on the south. Side walks will be installed as soon as possible and shade trees will be planted. W. I. Hollingsworth Company report the following sales at Harbor City: C. L. Stancliff, one lot, $750; B. O. Boothby, one lot, $650; John Bower, two lots, $1550; R. G. Manley, two lots, $1600; Dr. W. V. Coffin, one lot, $500; E. Oliver, one lot, $500; B. H. Vance, two lots, $1100; Thomas Nash, two lots, $1275; F. L. Morris, one lot, $650; George Hanson, one lot, $650; Harry Pitts and Fred Bowen, one lot, $600; Herman Fanning, one lot, $600; Matilda Olson, one lot, $775; Millie A. Curl, one lot, $600; Robert L. Culr, one lot, $600; Samuel A. Curl, one lot, $600, and Minnie M. Covey, one lot, $750.

SEEKS NEW IDEAS.

R. C. Gillis, multi-millionaire horseman, who is declared to have the finest pedigreed stables ever gathered in the West, has just left for Europe to look up certain architectural effects that he expects to embody in a magnificent home to be built on the brink of Santa Monica Canyon, overlooking Brentwood Park. Gillis has already built stables that have cost more than $10,000 and a servant house is being finished that is as handsome and as costly as many so-called mansions. Gillis has a site commanding a sweeping outlook over the beach cities, the ocean and adjacent valleys.

Andrew Chaffee, banker, has purchased seventy acres of land near-by on which to develop a magnificent country estate. All of this land will be utilized as a private park. Men are now at work constructing a huge reservoir to irrigate the rare plants and trees. Within a short time plans for the Chaffee home will have been completed.

LARGEST IN SECTION.

What is declared to be the largest reservoir ever built in Southern California to supply water to any single tract, is nearing completion at Yorba Linda, under direction of the Janss Investment Company. This retainer has a capacity of 6,278,000 gallons of water. It is built on a hill, or rather within a hill, for the knoll has been hollowed out, embarked with reenforced concrete, and in this way so carefully concealed that it cannot be seen unless one climbs to the top of the hill.

On another knoll, considerably higher, has been constructed another reservoir, with a capacity of 750,000 gallons. This is an auxiliary supply to reach the very highest acres in this citrus section. The larger container is one hundred feet in width, more than 600 feet in length and has an average depth of seventeen feet.

NEW BUSINESS CENTER.

Several modern business blocks have been recently completed and occupied in the Vermona Square subdivisions and several are contemplated. Henry E. Conradi has started the erection of a new building containing stores on the ground floor, with modern apartments above, on the corner of Normandie avenue and Forty-fifth street. A combination store and residence building is being constructed by Jacob Kemp on the corner of Forty-seventh street and Normandie. A handsome new store building has been recently completed by A. B. Lundeen at the southeast corner of Forty-fifth street and Normandie avenue. Plans are being prepared for the erection of a big building at Normandie avenue and Fiftieth street. The Home Telephone Company has just purchased from the Southwest Land Company a lot near the corner of Arlington and Vernon avenues for the purpose of erecting one of its mission style exchange buildings to take care of the rapidly-growing demand of the residents of New Vermont Square. An automatic exchange will be installed and will be presided over by a man and his wife, who will have apartments in the building.

HERMOSA BEACH.

The Haneman Realty Company reports the following sales at Hermosa Beach: To J. L. Mack, lot on Eighth, near Speedway, $825; Thomas C. Marlowe, corner on Ocean Front, $1850; W. Phelps, lot on Ocean Front, near Nineteenth; also Ocean Front lot near Seventeenth; William T. Bolton, Ocean Front lot near Nineteenth; James H. Hill, lot on Manhattan avenue, near Nineteenth; Theodore Hopping, lot on Ocean Front near Eighth, $1400; E. A. Futcher, lot on Ocean Front, near Eighth, $1400; C. A. Averill, lot on Hermosa avenue, near Twenty-fourth; E. R. Alderson, lot adjoining above; Paul S. Honberger, corner Nineteenth and Ocean Front; W. C. Smith, lot on Ocean Front; Thomas C. Marlowe, lot on Ocean Front near Tenth, $1560; also lot on Ocean Front near Second; Clifton J. Platt, lot on Thirteenth, near Speedway; A. S. Haneman, lot on Ocean Front near Fourteenth; Dr. Paul G. White, corner Sixteenth and Hermosa avenue; W. Wilson, lot on Eighth near Speedway; J. B. Eckstrom, lot on Twentieth near Speedway; Alex Larson, lot on Ocean Front near Second; L. Burdette, three lots on Ocean Front, near Twenty-seventh; G. W. Pollock, two lots; J. B. Warder, three lots; Thomas J. McCormick, five lots.

WEST HOLLYWOOD TRANSFERS.

N. A. Ross has sold in the past ten days in his West Hollywood boulevard tract, situated west of La Brea boulevard and east of Formosa avenue, south of De Longpre avenue, four houses and two vacant lots for a total of $17,000. J. A. Manington purchased a lot on Detroit avenue, north of Fountain, for $1000 cash and will erect a home at once. The other purchasers were J. N. Field, Ella Williamson, E. Gussman and J. Harding. The same agency sold in La Park tract in Huntington Park, two lots to J. N. Field for $1200, and eight lots to W. F. Kerr for $6000. Twenty acres of orange land in Riverside were sold to De Luxe Groves and Water Company for $7000, through the same agent.

REAL BEAUTY SPOT.

White peacocks, alabaster urns and fountains, and a series of fine terraces will make the new home of A. Mattison at Beverly Hills a real beauty spot. Mattison and his wife are here from Gibson, Ill., and are making their temporary home at the Beverly Hills Hotel, where they may keep in close touch with progress of landscape and architectural work on their suburban residence, which will be a happy combination of Italian and California designs. The semi-tropical idea will be carried out generally throughout the place. Mattison let contracts during the week for the erection of the house, which is to cost at least $15,000 and which will be one of the finest homes in the vicinity. The property is situated on Lexington drive almost directly across from the Beverly Hills Hotel. Another home to be completed this autumn at Beverly Hills will be that of Mr. and Mrs. Amasa Spring, who will return from the East shortly to take possession of their new Canyon drive dwelling. This house has been built at a cost of $10,000 and is in the Swiss chalet style.

REDONDO
SAN PEDRO

Directly south of, and adjoining the present townsite of Harbor City, lie 50 acres of deep, rich, fertile, productive land, which we have just added to Harbor City, in the shape of half and three-quarter acre residential plots. The improvements which are being installed in the present townsite, water, graded streets, etc., will be extended to include this addition. And these 50 acres should, within a very short time, become the choice residential part of the locality.

With the tremendous industrial development which must come to Harbor City, property in this addition should be in great demand for home sites. And the man who is in a position now to make small monthly payments on these big, well situated lots, should be able to subdivide in the near future and sell each subdivision for as great a price as he originally paid for the whole plot.

If you haven't seen Harbor City, you have neglected what is undoubtedly the most strategically situated piece of real estate in Los Angeles county. The commercial and industrial growth of San Pedro directly affect it.

It is located within a short distance of San Pedro, with a five-cent car fare to that point. It is well above and overlooking the harbor. It is on the good roads boulevard, and on the Pacific Electric trolley line to San Pedro.

He who buys property there now is in a fair way to make a start toward fortune building. He who overlooks this profitable tract will be in direct line for membership in the Lost Opportunity Club.

See Harbor City today. You will enjoy the trip. Take the San Pedro via Gardena car line at the Pacific Electric depot, direct to the property. If you cannot go today, write, telephone or call for booklet descriptive of the many opportunities for profit to be had at Harbor City.

WATER PROBLEM SOLVED.

New Wells Reach Record Depth and Insure Permanent Supply for Large Crescent Bay District.

SANTA MONICA, June 22.—It is believed the water problem has been finally solved in the southern end of the city. In sinking two new wells the City Water Company has established a record for depth and President G. M. Jones says the developments so far have satisfied him beyond the shadow of a doubt that he has struck the great underground lake or river which geologists and government experts have from time to time and in official reports stated would be found underlying the Santa Monica basin.

The two new wells are about a mile from the ocean's shore, east on Marine street. Each is 100 feet deeper than any of the old wells. Clay was not reached until a depth of 250 feet had been attained. This means an addition of 100 feet to the depth of the gravel basin heretofore prospected. The wells are eighteen-inch ones, being the largest bored holes in the vicinity. The quantity of water is apparently unlimited. Immense pumps have been at work since the flow was at first struck and the water level has not been lowered at all.

The sand is now being blown out, and as soon as this work is over some tests will be made. The water is of fine quality. It will be added to the local supply just as soon as the connections can be made. A carload of pipe is on the way and a large pumping plant will be installed.

Three new apartment buildings for the southern end of the city is not a bad record for one day, especially as they are all to be built for one man —H. Weiman. The trio will be at the corner of Marine and Lake streets. One is to cost $6000, and will front on Lake. One will front on Marine, and will cost $5000. The third one will be on Marine and is to cost $2000. All are to be modern in every respect.

Mrs. R. P. Buck has let the contract for a $8000 residence at No. 347 Seventh street. A permit has been issued by the Santa Monica building superintendent for the construction of a $2500 bungalow at No. 1124 Eleventh street, for Mrs. M. O. Spellman.

Plans have been accepted and work will be started within a few days on the erection of a $80,000 brick block at the corner of Third and Oregon on the Junipher property. The building will contain an elevator, being the first to be installed in a Santa Monica office building.

G. M. Jones has leased his three-story Marine-street apartment-house for a period of ten years to J. B. Collins, who recently arrived at the seaside to make his home. The new manager was for a number of years a business man at Butte and Anaconda, Mont.

BUY TEHACHEPI TRACT.

The California and Arizona Land Company has purchased from T. P. and William Cuddleback a tract of 800 acres in the Tehachepi Valley, adjacent to the new town of Monolith. The property is in an apple and pear belt. Judge Robert G. Hill, the president of the company, yesterday stated that the company had purchased all of the land adjacent to the proposed new town, excepting such as is used by the city of Los Angeles, in operating its cement plant. The company is now surveying and laying out a new town site for Monolith. The rest of the land will be cut up into five and ten-acre lots. It is at Monolith that the city of Los Angeles built its cement plant three years ago, at a cost of about $1,000,000. Three hundred and fifty men are engaged in the operation of the plant, and the pay roll is about $10,000 per month.

THE M'CARTHY TRACTS.

The McCarthy Company's sales in its various tracts are as follows: Dudwig M. Paglia, bungalow, No. 870 West Seventy-third street, in the McCarthy Company's Florence Avenue Heights tract, $2400; B. T. and F. H. Deiffenbaucher, eight-room bungalow and lot in the McCarthy Company's Orange Grove tract, Arcadia, $2850; J. R. Robey, lot in the Orange Grove tract, $650; O. S. Wilson, lot in the McCarthy Company's Van Ness avenue Square tract, $2250; Dora M. Hall, five-room bungalow, No. 849 West Seventy-fourth street, near Vermont, in the McCarthy Company's Florence avenue Heights tract, $2500.

Eastern Capital Pours Into Santa Monica As Well As California Gold

Constant Procession of Eastern Travelers to the Crescent Bay City. Fortunes Represented In Its Homes and Investments. Elmer Cole Property Magnet of Much Eastern Wealth

A great Caldron is Santa Monica, in which is being assimilated the wealth, the energy, the talent, the ambition and the brain power of many of the civilized countries of the world, our own Eastern States contributing not a little of the best of their possessions in this direction.

For centuries the trend of civilization has been ever westward. In ancient times, what we now consider the distinctly eastern portion of the world, Asia, was the zenith of civilization. As time advanced, the lure of the West beckoned on, and Eastern Europe became the seat of power, later giving place to Western Europe. Then, not so very long ago in the history of this old world, America loomed up on the horizon as another beacon light, to show the way to a still more western clime, and the human tide moved on.

For many years it has seemed that the Eastern States, being the cradle of the young government, would always hold the bulk of its population. But the overwhelming "Call of the West" that started in the blood of the ancient Asiatics, coursing through many vein 'till obeyed, still calls on, and our eastern brothers, be they wealthy or among the less fortunate in wealth, recognizing it to be the call of lifetime opportunity, financial aid in health and pleasure advantages, are gladly answering to its call.

"Westward" has seemed the watchword of this migrating train of humanity from its advent up to the present time. Through the earlier centuries, freedom from the tyranic rule of some despotic kingdom frequently actuated the desire to move on. Later, as especially emphasized in the formation of our own government, it was religious freedom that was mainly responsible for the unrest. In our own country it is the freedom of ease; freedom from the whirl, the hustle and the grind of the "big city," freedom from the biting cold of freezing winters and the overpowering heat of blighting summers, that is calling the endless chain of migrators to this true Paradise of the universe, Santa Monica.

Nearly every transcontinental railway coming to California brings its quota of homeseekers and investors to the Crescent Bay City; until like some "wonder story" read from a fairy book, the history of Santa Monica for the past few months is a story of continuous transformations.

Today vast areas of bean, barley and other crops will sweep about one on all sides, a few weeks in the future, and an almost incredibly few weeks at that, and the same district will be the scene of many pretty homes, superb paved boulevards with their cement walks, curbings and charming parkings of trees.

Though the majority do not seek Santa Monica from the moment of their entrance into California, that is, the majority of the entire number coming to California; it is safe to say that more of the whole number of travelers go directly to Santa Monica than to any other home place in proportion to the respective populations, and the majority of those who do not seek Santa Monica at once either go or plan to go there eventually. Again it is the "Call of the West" that lures steadily on, so that even Eastern and Middle California are not sufficiently satisfying, and the population moves on until it reaches the limit of western bounds in Santa Monica, where the old ocean "calls a halt."

Picturesque Subdivision.

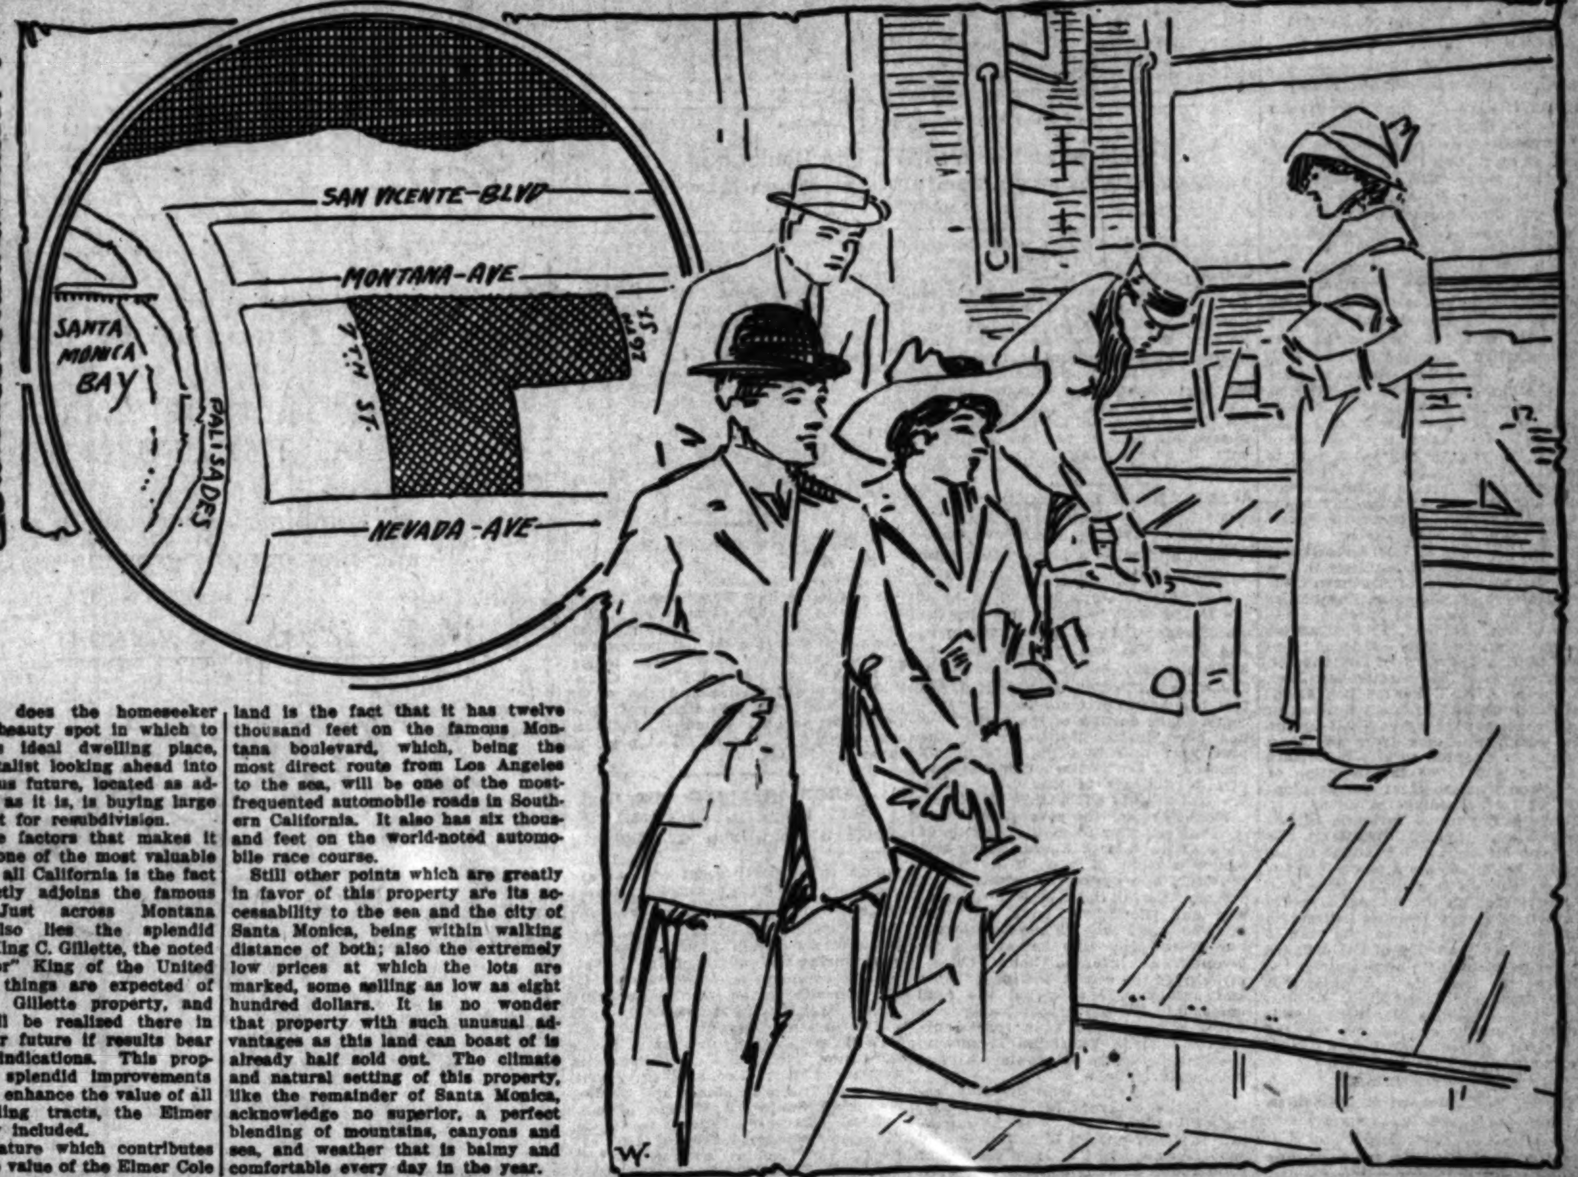
One of the most ideal portions of Santa Monica, and, in fact, one of the most picturesque spots to be found anywhere, is a tract of land lying directly between the much-talked-of Montana boulevard and Nevada avenue, also between Seventh and Twenty-sixth streets. This property is owned by Elmer Cole, and is the magnet attracting much of the eastern wealth invested in California lands.

Not alone does the homeseeker choose this beauty spot in which to establish his ideal dwelling place, but the capitalist looking ahead into its tremendous future, located as advantageously as it is, is buying large portions of it for resubdivision.

One of the factors that makes it regarded as one of the most valuable properties in all California is the fact that it directly adjoins the famous Palisades. Just across Montana boulevard also lies the splendid property of King C. Gillette, the noted "Safety Razor" King of the United States. Big things are expected of the King C. Gillette property, and doubtless will be realized there in the very near future if results bear out present indications. This property and its splendid improvements will naturally enhance the value of all the surrounding tracts, the Elmer Cole property included.

Another feature which contributes largely to the value of the Elmer Cole land is the fact that it has twelve thousand feet on the famous Montana boulevard, which, being the most direct route from Los Angeles to the sea, will be one of the most-frequented automobile roads in Southern California. It also has six thousand feet on the world-noted automobile race course.

Still other points which are greatly in favor of this property are its accessability to the sea and the city of Santa Monica, being within walking distance of both; also the extremely low prices at which the lots are marked, some selling as low as eight hundred dollars. It is no wonder that property with such unusual advantages as this land can boast of is already half sold out. The climate and natural setting of this property, like the remainder of Santa Monica, acknowledge no superior, a perfect blending of mountains, canyons and sea, and weather that is balmy and comfortable every day in the year.



At Our Gates.

OVER THE GREAT BOULEVARD.

Fifteen Mile Speedway Through the Fertile San Fernando Valley—A Monument to Private Enterprise Connecting Van Nuys With City.

BY AN OLD SETTLER.

How many people in Los Angeles have seen the half-million dollar boulevard, that private enterprise constructed for fifteen miles, in the center of the San Fernando Valley, at the very gates of Los Angeles, as a preliminary step to the subdivision of 47,000 acres of land to home builders and the establishment of three towns. That is faith and enterprise for you unequaled anywhere—faith in a million population for Los Angeles in the near future. In addition to the half-million-dollar boulevard, which is designed to last for centuries, even as Roman built roads, the promoters [illegible] center for thousands of beautiful homes have constructed fifty miles of graded roads and as all roads led to Rome, so all of these roads lead to Van Nuys, the center of all activities taking place in a valley containing 100,000 acres of fertile land.

If the reader is a stranger and has not taken an auto ride over Van Nuys boulevard to the San Fernando Mission and thence, but a short distance, to see the work being done in connection with one of the largest earth moving operations in the world, he has missed one of the most interesting trips out of the city; if the reader is an "old-timer," even as I am, he should take the drive as soon as possible and have his eyes opened to what is going on right under his nose and find a new and lucrative field for his activities for the next decade. I promise a series of surprises.

We left No. 810 South Hill street at [illegible] sharp, two auto loads of us. We made our exit from the city through the Third-street tunnel, proceeded north on Flower street and [illegible] boulevard, thence on Hollywood boulevard to Highland avenue, where we wound around through the [illegible] hills which divide the city of Los Angeles from the San Fernando Valley on the north. Speeding along we soon entered Sherman Way, which extends northwest for [illegible] miles. The boulevard varies from 110 to 130 feet wide, is perfectly constructed, seemingly to last forever, and we bowled along at the rate of thirty miles an hour between highly cultivated farms and beautiful country villas and bungalows of [illegible] architecture—and, strange to say, all of this intensive horticulture is being produced without irrigation.

Imagine my surprise at this. As familiar as I am with all of the lands north and south of Sacramento, I never dreamed of so large a body of land in Southern California at the very doors of this city that is [illegible] and can be brought under cultivation without artificial moisture. It is claimed by some that the development of what is known as the [illegible] tract is awaiting the distribution of aqueduct water. This is not so, in fact. Go and see for yourself. I am sure that the [illegible] of irrigation would ruin [illegible] be of no improvement [illegible] and would injure [illegible] of fruit. The soil for over 30,000 acres is a fine sub-irrigated silt or river bottom, collected by the erosion of ages from the surrounding hills, and when cultivated draws moisture to the surface by capillary attraction. It is ideal for the culture of sugar beets, potatoes, beans and vegetables of all kinds, and the yields are extraordinary. Van Nuys is destined to supply greater Los Angeles with its vegetables.

It seemed as though a piece of Ventura county had slipped over the hills into Los Angeles county. I saw, probably, the largest beet field in the world—over 8000 acres. The beets are very large for their age and will yield a large tonnage per acre. The stand of beets was perfectly even as far as the eye can reach, showing that the land is even and unspotted. We dug potatoes planted in the latter part of April, having four large potatoes to the vine, which an experienced farmer estimated would go 200 sacks to the acre. All other vegetables that I saw showed the same prolific yield.

The most astonishing development witnessed was the town of Van Nuys. Ground was broken there sixteen months ago and today there can be seen over 200 houses, all of tasteful architecture, costing $1000 to $25,000 each. There is not a single shack allowed in the town. All of the trades are represented and the business blocks are of pressed brick, many of the buildings being two stories. There is a bank having $100,000 deposits, a two-story hotel and a newspaper. The telephone company and the Pacific Electric Railroad Company are also putting up buildings, making Van Nuys headquarters for their operations in the valley. The Pacific Electric Company has a large construction gang in the field and is pushing its line rapidly connecting San Fernando with Van Nuys.

The townsite property is being largely purchased in blocks of ten lots comprising two acre farms. In our party Mr. Russell, a hard headed eastern farmer and prospective buyer, expressed some doubt concerning values. Mr. Whitsett convinced him with figures, for instance, the ten-lot piece we were looking at, on Broadway, was held at $2700 with the requirement that at least, a $1500 residence be built. "If this land were planted to potatoes," said Mr. Whitsett, "with a yield of 200 sacks to the acre, the result would bring 15 per cent. on the entire investment, while the lots will double in value in less than three years." Mr. Russell was evidently convinced, as he purchased next day.

Some idea of the magnitude of the work on the aqueduct can be gained by a visit to the San Fernando dam. Work is progressing systematically upon an earthwork dam to be about a hundred above bed rock and fully half a mile long, which will make a lake covering several thousand acres. From the hills back of the reservoir a magnificent view of the valley is obtained. It is almost completely surrounded by mountains and low lying foothills, giving a superb climate protected alike from the chilling ocean breeze, and the winds from mountains and desert, yet with a change each twenty-four hours or a blended climate between sea, mountain and desert temperatures. The vast area of fertile land, almost as level as a floor, stretches in panoramic view before the beholder, and a conception of the development that is to be, when aqueduct water is available, conjures a vision of wealth and happiness to the thousands of people.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

Labor-Saving Machinery.

[Washington Star:] Some new labor-saving machinery that will enable high-priced American workmen to compete with the cheaper hand labor of Europe is to be tried by the Department of Agriculture in the new "bulb garden" at Bellingham, Wash. The department has been at work there for two years experimenting with tulips, hyacinths and all sorts of bulb plants such as are commonly imported to this country and which for years Holland has had practically a monopoly of growing. There are several million dollars a year spent for these imported bulbs and the Department of Agriculture figures that the money had just as well be kept at home.

The bulb garden at Bellingham has proved a great artistic and horticultural success, but commercially the Europeans still have the best of it. When the bulbs are propagated the bottom of the bulb has to be scooped out and the shell planted. Little bulblets, from twenty to forty to a plant, spring from the old stock, and these in turn are taken off and planted.

The expert foreign workman, with a special knife, can scoop about three bulbs a minute. But the department has devised a machine that will handle about sixty a minute with unskilled labor.

The same is true in planting the bulbs. The European method of hand planting has already been replaced by a machine that plants and covers the bulbs as fast as a pair of horses can walk.

The domestic-grown bulbs are, if anything, superior to the imported. It remains only to see whether machine-aided labor can bring the price of production down to a point where the American bulb gardener can do the necessary work cheaper than the foreigner.

Great Power Dam.

[Review of Reviews:] So quietly that even the newspapers hardly know about it, even after it is half-finished, there is being built in the Mississippi, in the most violent stretch of the great river, at the foot of its impassable rapids, the greatest power dam in the world, creating the largest water-power plant in the world, to energize the largest single electrical installation in the world; and this is being done in the very center of the agricultural area of the United States to change with one move on the economic chessboard the dominant production of the first farming States in the Union from corn and chickens to manufactured products. So large is this water-power development that when it is completed, early in 1913, it will shift the manufacturing center of the United States and greatly change the map of industrialism in this country.

Cloth from Seaweed.

Within the last few months there has been perfected in England a method for using the fiber of the Posidonia australis, found in the Southern Seas.

Samples were submitted by the Board of Trade to a Manchester University demonstrator, who experimented therewith and reported that the raw fiber seemed to have fragments of sea debris among it—some seedlike objects and very minute shells, which all came away in the process—and the limp, straggling fiber, after treatment, was soft, pliable, strong, much like wool in its disposition to curl and twist, and easy to spin in its raw state. It takes dye well, except with respect to green, when the result is usually cloudy. Also it requires a mild bleach, to avoid making the fiber tender.

It is treated on long-fiber machines, so that the varying lengths of the Posidonia can be fully and fairly taken up in the sliver or roving. Woolen spinners generally spin their fiber in an oily state and afterward get rid of the oil. In the case of the new fiber this would involve some risk of damage. It should be spun without oil.

When the fiber is ready for spinning, brushing or combing is used rather than the rougher process of deviling. Brushing or combing gives immediate parallelization of the filaments, whereas deviling involves thorough breaking up and disintegration of the fiber. After the raw material has been treated for two hours, plus the time of drying, it is ready for the spinners. One man can prepare a ton a week.

The manufacturers say that the estimated cost of delivery and preparation of the raw material, ready for the spinner, is 2 cents f.o.b. and after spinning, weaving and dyeing charges have been added the finished fabric, 52 inches wide, can be put on the market at 12 to 14 cents per yard.

Flameless Gas Heater

[New York Times:] Prof. W. A. Bone, F. R. S., Livesay professor of coal, gas and fuel industries at Leeds University, in a lecture at Leeds described a new method of gas heating without flame which, he believes, may work a revolution in fuel economy and have very important industrial effects.

Prof Bone is one of the greatest living authorities on the subject of combustion. The new process has already been put into practical operation at Leeds. Hot surfaces promote the combustion of gases in contact with them, and it is on this property that the process is based.

An explosive mixture of gas and air in proportions for complete combustion, or with the air in slight excess, is caused to burn without flame in contact with the surface of a red-hot porous solid, such as a block made of particles of firebrick bound together by some suitable means.

The new process, in the form of "diaphragm heating," may be used for cooking purposes, such as grilling, roasting and toasting. A porous diaphragm, made as already described, is mounted in a casing with a chamber for introducing gas at the back. The front of the diaphragm remains uncovered. The gas, under slight pressure, is made to flow through the porous diaphragm and is ignited as it issues at the front surface, giving a white flame.

In flowing the gas is gradually mixed with air until the proportion for complete combustion is obtained. The white flame diminishes in size and loses its white color. Then it returns on to the surface of the diaphragm, which soon becomes red hot. All signs of flame disappear, and there remains a tensely glowing surface, a wall of fire, but without flame, from which radiates general heat.

The diaphragm may be maintained at any temperature up to about 1500 degrees Fahrenheit, according to the rate of supply of gas.

In addition to "diaphragm heating," the process is adaptable to the heating of furnaces, the raising of steam in multi-tubular boilers, and the melting of metals, such as, for instance, type metal for newspaper purposes.

A variety of combustible gases other than coal gas can be used in the process. Prof. Bone states that his invention is economical and easy to control.

CHURCH PLANS PLEASE.

TO FOLLOW MISSION TYPES.

SAN DIEGO, June 22.—The plans for the new house of worship that is to be erected by the First United Presbyterian Church of this city, and which have just been completed by the architect, A. Burnside Sturges of Los Angeles, indicate that the structure will be one of the handsomest of its kind in San Diego. The edifice will occupy the site of the present church at H and Twenty-second streets, the latter structure being converted into a Sunday-school department for the time being.

The auditorium portion only of the new church will be erected at this time, about $15,000 being available for the purpose. The building will be of frame, with a plastered exterior over metal lath. The mission style will be followed, a beautiful tower on the lines of the early California architecture being a feature. The floor of the audience-room will have a seating capacity of 250, and opening from it will be a choir-room, lobby and the pastor's study. The basement will contain the heating plant, dining-room, kitchen and amusement-room. The Rev. A. F. Kilpatrick is the pastor of the church.

WHITTIER ACRES.

Sales in Whittier Acres in the Whittier district are reported by the Charles F. O'Brien Company as follows: Ten acres, set to Eureka lemons, to Dr. J. Mattocks for $10,000; five acres in Eureka lemons to J. Janes; five acres to C. F. Pierce; five acres, in Eureka lemons to W. P. W. Martin. The laying of cement irrigating pipe for all of the eastern end of Whittier Acres is nearly completed and water will be turned in within a few days. The pumping plant is now in place.

VICIOUSNESS OF BEES.

Will Swoop Down Upon An Intruder and Sting Him to Death Unless He be Rescued.

[New York Sun:] Very formidable is the concerted power of bees by the million. This is shown in the experience of a British military expedition in Africa, for the party was attacked and routed, several of the pack donkeys being killed by bees.

The swarming foes were first encountered on a precipitous mountain, where they had doubtless dwelt and multiplied undisturbed for years, since the place was sacred to an evil spirit so dreaded by the tribesmen that they never ventured to visit it.

While resting in a shady spot the commanding officer and his party looked up to see a swarm of bees streaming in and out of a large crevice in the cliff. As the hole was close to one of the worst portions of the ascending ledge strict silence was enjoined on all the men.

The Europeans in the party removed their boots in order to get a secure foothold, and the whole party crept quietly along the face of the precipice. But cautious though they were there was sufficient noise to attract the attention of the suspicious bees. Soon an angry cloud swarmed out. A false step on the part of the men would have been fatal, but there was no time to think of their footing with the furious swarm at their heels.

Fortunately no one slipped, and the van of the expedition, scrambling frantically upward from their little enemies, safely reached the summit of the mountain, while those in the rear bolted downward in the opposite direction and awaited them below. But those on the mountain top had next to think of their return. Luckily for them the domestic habits of bees are as orderly as their methods of harvesting and architecture, and the men had only to wait until after sunset, which is the bed hour of all bees, to slip quietly past unmolested, although the task to which such a delay reluctantly forced them, of descending dangerous craigs and pathless slopes in the dark, was more perilous than pleasant.

Far more tragic was an attack in a less dangerous spot, for in the sudden scattering of the caravan before the stinging hosts a sick man failed to make his escape and was left behind. He was missed, and the commanding officer with two natives went back to search for him beneath the hollow tree whence the bees had issued.

The party set to work quartering the ground near the tree. The bees swarmed down upon them and it was impossible to avoid being stung. All the men could do was to keep the insects from their eyes. After a short time it became too hot for the rescue party and they left. It was becoming too hot for the officer also when he stumbled upon the native for whom they were searching, and picking him up he ran for it.

The unhappy man, who wore only a loin cloth, was frightfully stung. His body, owing to the innumerable stings left in him, instead of presenting a smooth surface of clear black skin, appeared to be covered with a close brown fur. He died in about five hours.

GOOD FIGURE FOR LATE CROP.

Market Tone Encouraging Over Wide District.

Townsite Rumor Excites Whole Woodville Section.

Two Thousand an Acre Is Paid for Fine Tract.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PORTERVILLE, June 22.—Realty dealers are surprised at the manner in which the interest in orange land has kept up during the past week. It is almost universally the case that after the hot weather of the Central California district sets in, the market quiets down decidedly and remains in a rather quiet condition until early in the fall. It is probable that the excellent Valencia crop, together with the exceptional prices that are being received for fruit, has had considerable to do with maintaining the tone of the market.

Col. J. L. Watkins, who is a well-known Oklahoma investor and booster, has become a Central California orchardist. He has purchased a ten-acre tract of oranges in the Exeter district, the young trees being sold to him at $800 per acre. It is the intention of Col. Watkins to further improve the property and make this his winter home. The property was purchased from John L. Taylor.

Wilbur O. Dow of Los Angeles has sold a portion of his holdings in the South Pixley district to Southern California investors. Thomas Hamberger of San Luis Obispo has purchased ten acres of the property, F. S. Rawlins of San Francisco has secured ten acres, M. R. Woodward of Los Angeles, ten acres; A. R. Helbert of San Jose, ten acres; J. N. Baker of Los Angeles, ten acres, and Thomas Bullock of San Francisco, ten acres. All of the land which was sold from the Dow holdings is adapted to alfalfa culture and it is said to be the intention of the new owners to start the development of their holdings at once.

W. R. McReynolds, formerly of Los Angeles, who made a fortune in the Maricopa oil district, has added to his orchard holdings here a piece of property on the Zante hillside, the land being situated on the proposed extension of the Scenic Heights boulevard, upon which work is to be started shortly. The tendency of the orchard owners to build their homes along the sides of the foothills is a noticeable and a significant development, and already the properties along the Scenic Heights reminds one of the wealthy and older settled residence cities of the Southern aCliforna country.

BUY FINE TRACT.

Dr. W. E. Blanchard of Marseilles, Ill., has purchased in company with his son-in-law, F. A. Brown, of Los Angeles, a thirty-acre tract of fine orange lands in the Terra Bella district. Of the tract purchased, ten acres is the property of Mr. Brown and twenty is in the name of Dr. Blanchard. The latter expects to make the Central California district his home during a portion of the year and during a visit here this week the new owners made the preliminary plans for the development of water, with a view to putting the entire thirty acres out to citrus fruits.

A. Fleishman and E. J. Myberg, both of Los Angeles, have negotiated options on a tract in the Terra Bella district. The size and location of the property has not been given out, pending the purchase of adjoining acreage. It is stated that Fleishman and Myberg are acting for a syndicate of Los Angeles capitalists who expect to purchase a large tract of land suitable for orchard property and that they will subdivide and market the holding.

BIG SALE RUMORED.

Officials of the Big Four Railroad, it was announced this week, have negotiated for the purchase of the Mountain View ranch, one of the pioneer alfalfa and dairy properties of the Woodville district, with a view of converting 160 of the 320 acres of the holding into a townsite. The railroad officials refuse to deny the story. The land is the property of Major H. M. Russel and the tract attained some notoriety last fall when it was the bone of contention in a rather sensational lawsuit which was tried in the Los Angeles courts. The major spent several days this week in Tulare conferring with the railroad officials and it is generally believed here that the property has been transferred. As other of the officials of the road are known to be negotiating for other property along the proposed line of the new road, it is to be expected that the transactions will be kept as quiet as possible for the present.

has taken possession of her property in the Terra Bella district, purchased recently, and has started the development of her twenty-acre place. This week the well on the property was brought in and tested out, showing a fine flow of water with a lift of seventy-four feet. Work has also started on the planting of seven acres of early navels for the present season.

J. G. Anderson, a contractor and builder of the sound cities, has added to his holdings of orange lands and orchard property by the purchase of the C. B. Jackson grove of twenty acres in the Lindsay district. This property, which is considered one of the best of its age in the Lindsay foothill district, was purchased at $2000 per acre. This addition gives Anderson forty acres of the finest five-year-old trees in this district, as his original purchase was that of twenty acres of young stuff adjoining the Jackson property. The original twenty, the McLees grove, was purchased at $2000 per acre, also, but the later purchase included a modern bungalow home, which was valued at about $6000.

Realty men are greatly interested in the railroad enterprises which are planned for the Woodville and Poplar districts, and upon which, it is said by the promoters, work is to be started this month. The Porterville-Western, from Porterville to Woodville, will traverse some of the finest dairy land in California, and the line from Tulare to Woodville, a branch of the so-called Big Four, will reach a fine dairy district, also, which only needs transportation to make it the equal of anything in California.

The Woodville and Poplar districts are underlaid with a vast underground lake, which is reached in some places at as small a depth as twenty-five feet, and which is never deeper than seventy-five feet. In the district there are many wells which are developing 100 inches of water and there is scarcely a ranch in the district which is now watered in any way except by pump. There are three ditches through the district as well, however, making the country one of the best watered alfalfa sections in this State.

Prices of the Woodville and Poplar lands have gone aviating in the past few days, and, where almost any of this land could have been purchased six months ago for $125 per acre, it is now being held almost universally at $200.

WATER RATE LOWERED.

Order of Trustees Will Save Glendale Subscribers Large Aggregate Sum of Money.

GLENDALE, June 22.—By order of the Board of Trustees of this city the water rate of $1.50 per minimum of 800 cubic feet was cut this week to $1.25 per 800 cubic feet minimum. The rate for water in excess of 800 feet has been cut from 10 cents to 7 cents. This cutting of the water rate has been under discussion for the past year and is being strenuously opposed by the water compaines supplying residents of this city. The law will go into effect July 1.

E. D. Goode, who several days ago received an offer from the citizens of Glendale to raise a liberal bonus and secure a right of way if he would construct and operate an electric line commencing at the corner of Broadway and Glendale avenue and running southeasterly to the yellow car line on the Glassell ranch, where the 5-cent fare is granted, has in his reply agreed to accept the proposition and immediately construct the road unless the Pacific Electric company offers some definite plan for an extension of their line from Tropico to Glendale along Glendale avenue within thirty days.

Peter L. Terry, who recently received the contract for the improving of Verdugo road from the northern to the southern city limits, and who is completing a long section of good roads in Tropico, has just been awarded the contract for the improvement of Sixth street from the easterly line of this city to Glendale avenue. The contract price is $18,000. Work, which will be started at once, will be rushed to completion.

The members of the Congregational denomination are erecting at the corner of Third street and Central avenue a bungalow church which will cost about $4500. Two lots were purchased by this church at a cost of $2500, it being the intention of the members to erect in the near future an edifice to cost at least $20,000. The main room of the building is 28x42 feet in size. It is expected that the first service will be held in the building on June 30.

Lots in the Verdugo Canyon tract have been sold to the following: Dr. E. M. Spates, Hon. Stanley R. Pratt, Mr. Willis, Clifford R. Pratt, W. M. Bowen and W. M. Sherlock.

Parker & Sternberg, local real estate men, are just completing at a cost of $25,000, a four-storeroom, two-story brick business block on Brand boulevard, between Third and Fourth streets. It is the largest business building in Glendale, being 100x100 feet in size. The front is faced with green tile with copper trimmings. Upstairs there will be eight office suites of two rooms each, also four three-room suites of housekeeping rooms with baths.

The Pepper Tree Inn has been sold by N. C. Kelley to a Los Angeles investor for a reported cash consideration of $20,000. The transaction involved $100,000 worth of Los Angeles improved income property, it is said. Kelley has also sold to Mrs. Mary J. Smith and Mrs. Winifred A. Caliborne of Los Angeles, eight lots in Central Park, between Fountain place and Melrose avenue, for a cash price of $5450. He has also sold to A. J. Hartfield a lot in the same tract for $1000.

J. N. Richards has sold the double corner at the northwest side of Louise and Mountain avenues for a cash consideration of $3300. W. H. Andrews has purchased a six and one-half acre piece of land lying between the Drahn place and the Arthur Campbell property, the price being in the neighborhood of $3000 per acre.

The Pacific Electric Railway Company has decided to spend $26,000 in lowering the grade of its tracks running through this city. For the past several years this grade has been three feet above the grade of the street, with several of the cross streets closed. This action on the part of the railway company was hastened by the fact that the Glendale City Trustees threatened to interrupt the traffic of the company over Fourth street and Sixth street, across which the railway company has no franchise. In order to secure this franchise the company will have to bring the grade to that of the street.

Sleds Used in the Yukon.

[Wide World Magazine:] The Yukon sled, while not a thing of beauty, is built to stand all kinds of hard wear, or, as the Irishman said: "It will last forever, and after that can be used for firewood." The sled is about eight feet long, is made of any kind of hard wood, lies close to the ground, costs from $10 to $14, and makes a trail sixteen inches in width. Another pattern is known as the basket sleigh, and is to the Yukon sleigh what a three-masted schooner is to a coal barge. In length it is from eight to fifteen feet, is made of birch, oak or hickory, cuts a trail twenty-two inches in width, costs from $40 to $200, is raised a foot or more from the runners, and in the best examples is lashed together with rawhide. The basket sleigh, as its name implies, is fitted with a basket, into which the load is placed, and from the back of the basket a pair of handles project, to be used in guiding the sled on the trail. It happens that a Yukon sled will be fitted with a home-made imitation of its more costly brother. In very cold weather runners are best, but in ordinary circumstances steel or brass [illegible] used.

Reclaimed San Joaquin Delta Turned Into Ranches.

Water Pumped Out to Drain Thousands of Acres.

The ability of a Los Angeles man, backed by Los Angeles capital, has resulted in the near completion of one of the largest and most important reclamation projects ever conceived.

Land reclamation, ordinarily, especially in the West, entails distribution of water, on the soil in an arid or semi-arid region. Reversing the common practice, Lee A. Phillips of Los Angeles has been the active main-spring in a project that has so far resulted in the reclamation of 58,000 acres of overflow land, redeeming this great acreage from absolute uselessness to almost unbelievable value as far as productiveness is concerned.

Phillips has had a close and valuable ally in George Shima, an Americanized Japanese, who is so modest that he dislikes to have reference made of him as the "potato king," although he can write a check for six figures. Last year Shima is reputed to have sold his potatoe crop at an excess gross of $1,000,000.

North and east of San Francisco in Contra Costa and San Joaquin counties is an area of approximately 150,000 acres of land which constitutes the delta of the San Joaquin River. The far-famed delta of the Nile or that of the mighty Mississippi hasn't anything on the lower San Joaquin, when it comes to eccentric meanderings. The various branches and ramifications of the stream follow courses that would put a severe kink in a snake's back.

The down stream on its course to the sea meets daily the incoming tide from the Pacific Ocean. At certain points in the channel a log thrown in the water would never reach the sea but would be buffetted between the back tide-water and the down-stream current unless by some sudden spurt it is fairly launched into the out-going current to the ocean.

BEGINNING OF THINGS.

Eons ago, probably in the wake of the Paleozoic age, the "tule" grew in the ooze and slime of the ocean or river bed. In the centuries that followed, the decaying "tule" and its fruit formed a great peat bog, furnishing to the present age a wonderfully productive soil, capable of growing rich crops.

In the cultivation of the reclaimed area the farmers have a distinct advantage in absolute control of the water. If there is overflow on the land, pumps take it off. The water in the river channels being above the level of the land protected by dikes, water is siphoned from the channel for irrigation purposes.

Previous to ten years ago there had been considerable reclamation work done on the San Joaquin delta, but it had been of a haphazard and non-systematic character. Phillips began his project by perfecting a comprehensive plan of development. Great dikes were built 300 feet from the bank of the stream, the big dredgers cutting—for most of the distance—a new channel, leaving a strip of land outside to protect the levee against damage from the wash of waves. The dike has a crown width of twenty feet, a base of 110 to 125 feet, and a slope of four to one. The tops of the dike are five feet above the highest known flood-water mark.

When the levee is brought to the height of five feet it is smoothed and graded and the contour record taken to record settlement or shrinkage. These are repaired by the big dredgers used in building the dikes. There are eight of these machines, the length of boom ranging from fifty to 150 feet, enabling the movement of dirt from a point equal to the length of the boom from one side to a point an equal distance on the other side.

The magniture of the reclamation work can be realized when it is stated that 100 miles of levees have been built at a cost of $7000 to $12,000 a mile.

DRAINAGE CANAL.

Following the enclosing of a tract by levees, a main drainage canal twenty-four feet wide and ten feet deep is built through the center, with lateral canals every mile. Centrifugal electrically-driven pumping plants are installed for draining the water off the land. These pumps are capable of handling 60,000 gallons a minute. After the drainage system is installed and the land drained it remains idle for two seasons to "sweeten" the soil. Then the "tullies" are burnt off and the land is plowed for the first crop, which is generally potatoes, then for two seasons other crops are planted, and the third year potatoes are again planted.

Water is siphoned from the river channel for irrigating the crops. There is a ditch four feet wide and five feet deep around each 40-acre tract, connecting with the main drainage canal. Sub-irrigation is accomplished by small ditches 100 feet apart, each one foot wide, and one foot deep. Capillary attraction carries the water from one ditch to another. The land produces all forms of garden truck: celery, beans, onions, asparagus, barley, oats, cherries, produce and all small berries.

Starting from the dock at Stockton the new river steamship, Captain Weber, carried on its initial trip last week a party of San Francisco, Los Angeles and Stockton men, guests of Phillips on a tour of inspection. The boat wound its way through the tortuous channels covering 87 of the 120 miles that would be traversed if all of the holdings of Phillips and his associates had come under observation.

GREAT TRACTS RECLAIMED.

The various tracts that have been reclaimed by Phillips and his associates were visited. These include the Rindge tracts, 21,000 acres, the holdings of the Empire Navigation Company, 11,000 acres; the Equitable Investment Company, 6000 acres; the Holland Company holdings, 10,000 acres, and Phillips's pride, the Orwood tract, with 2600 acres.

These lands are in different stages of reclamation, all except 6000 acres being under cultivation. There was 8000 acres in one field of potatoes and 4800 acres in another. One field of onions contained 1400 acres, and there was a 1000 acres in one field of asparagus. The Empire Company re-

Phillips of Los Angeles has been the active mainspring in a project that has so far resulted in the reclamation of 50,000 acres of overflow land, redeeming this great acreage from absolute uselessness to almost unbelievable value as far as productiveness is concerned.

Phillips has had a close and valuable ally in George Shima, an Americanized Japanese, who is so modest that he dislikes to have reference made of him as the "potato king," although he can write a check for six figures. Last year Shima is reputed to have sold his potatoe crop at an enormous gross of $1,000,000.

North and east of San Francisco in Contra Costa and San Joaquin counties is an area of approximately [illegible] acres of land which constitutes the delta of the San Joaquin River. The far-famed delta of the Nile or that of the mighty Mississippi hasn't anything on the lower San Joaquin, when it comes to eccentric meanderings. The various branches and ramifications of the stream follow courses that would put a severe kink in a snake's back.

The down stream on its course to the sea meets daily the incoming tide from the Pacific Ocean. At certain points in the channel a log thrown in the water would never reach the sea but would be buffetted between the back tide-water and the down-stream current unless by some sudden spurt it is fairly launched into the out-going current to the ocean.

BEGINNING OF THINGS.

Eons ago, probably in the wake of the Paleozoic age, the "tule" grew in the ooze and slime of the ocean or river bed. In the centuries that followed, the decaying "tule" and its fruit formed a great peat bog, furnishing to the present age a wonderfully productive soil, capable of growing rich crops.

In the cultivation of the reclaimed land the farmers have a distinct advantage in absolute control of the water. If there is overflow on the land, pumps take it off. The water in the river channels being above the level of the land protected by dikes, water is siphoned from the channel for irrigation purposes.

Previous to ten years ago there had been considerable reclamation work done on the San Joaquin delta, but it had been of a haphazard and unsystematic character. Phillips began his project by perfecting a comprehensive plan of development. Great dikes were built 300 feet from the bank of the stream, the big dredges cutting—for most of the distance—a new channel, leaving a strip of land outside to protect the dike against damage from the wash of waves. The dike has a crown width of twenty feet, a base of 110 to 180 feet, and a slope of four to one. The tops of the dike are five feet above the highest known flood-water mark.

When the levee is brought to the height of five feet it is smoothed and rolled and the contour record taken to record settlement or shrinkage. These are repaired by the big dredgers used in building the dikes. There are eight of these machines, the length of boom ranging from fifty to 150 feet, enabling the movement of dirt from a point equal to the length of the boom from one side to a point an equal distance on the other side.

The magnitude of the reclamation work can be realized when it is stated that 100 miles of levees have been built at a cost of $7000 to $[illegible] a mile.

DRAINAGE CANAL.

Following the enclosing of a tract by levees, a main drainage canal [illegible]-four feet wide and ten feet deep is built through the center, with lateral canals every mile. Centrifugal electrically-driven pumping plants are installed for draining the water off the land. These pumps are capable of handling 60,000 gallons a minute. After the drainage system is installed and the land drained it remains idle for two seasons to "sweeten" the soil. Then the "tullies" are burned off and the land is plowed for the first crop, which is generally potatoes, then for two seasons other crops are planted, and the third year potatoes are again planted.

Water is siphoned from the river channel for irrigating the crops. There is a ditch four feet wide and five feet deep around each 40-acre tract, connecting with the main drainage canal. Sub-irrigation is accomplished by small ditches 100 feet apart, each one a foot wide, and one foot deep. Capillary attraction carries the water from one ditch to another. The land produces all forms of garden truck: celery, beans, onions, asparagus, barley, [illegible], cherries, produce and all small fruits.

Starting from the dock at Stockton the new river steamship, Captain Weber, carried on its initial trip last week a party of San Francisco, Los Angeles and Stockton men, guests of Phillips on a tour of inspection. The boat wound its way through the tortuous channels, covering 87 of the [illegible] miles that would be traversed if all of the holdings of Phillips and his associates had come under observation.

GREAT TRACTS RECLAIMED.

The various tracts that have been reclaimed by Phillips and his associates were visited. These include the Rindge tracts, 21,000 acres, the holdings of the Empire Navigation Company, 11,000 acres; the Equitable [illegible] Company, 6000 acres; the [illegible] Company holdings, 10,000 acres, and Phillips's pride, the Orwood tract, with 2600 acres.

These lands are in different stages of reclamation, all except 6000 acres being under cultivation. There was [illegible] acres in one field of potatoes and [illegible] acres in another. One field [illegible] contained 1400 acres, and there was a 1000 acres in one field of [illegible]. The Empire Company recently sold to Shima a tract of 3200 acres for $500,000, Shima having realized in one year sufficient profit to pay for the land.

The Orwood tract of 2600 acres, the personal holdings of Phillips, has been reclaimed six years. It contains 1000 acres of asparagus in one field, besides other crops such a general garden produce and alfalfa. The asparagus field is perhaps the greatest feature of the big project, and is supplemented by an asparagus cannery.

"Back East" nearly every farmer had an asparagus bed about the size of the front bedroom, upstairs. Imagine a 1000-acre bed, each of the rows 2900 feet long. It takes three years after the roots are planted, before the first crop is produced. Its care and methods of cultivation are unusual, but the product is valuable, being worth from $125 to $150 an acre a year. The stalks are cut underground, which yields the white stalk asparagus used in canning.

MAY CUT IT UP.

Ultimately this new agricultural empire of nearly 60,000 acres will be divided into small tracts and sold. Meanwhile the stockholders are realizing comfortable dividends. The properties are owned and controlled by Los Angeles capitalists who have gone afield for this investment.

West Side.

WELL PROVES OF BIG IMPORTANCE.

ASSOCIATED IN ELK HILLS EXTENDS AREA.

New Producer Drops in Output, but Tests Twenty-nine Gravity. Is Now Sanded, but May Resume at Any Time—West Side Field News.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BAKERSFIELD, June 29.—Later reports from the Associated Oil Company's well No. 2 on section 24, 30-23 in the Elk Hills places the output at a much smaller figure than the first rumor that reached Bakersfield about a week ago. The well, according to last account, reached a flow of 500 barrels a day and then sanded up. It is being cleaned out and may resume at any moment.

It is reported that the well, which is 2700 feet in depth, passes through more than 1000 feet of oil sand and shale and that the oil is 29 gravity. If these statements are substantiated, the strike is a very important one, even if the flow is not so large as first announced. Five hundred barrels of 29 gravity oil makes a valuable well, and the depth of sand promises a long life for the producer.

Section 24 is in the extreme northern part of the Elk Hills district and the present strike is the first of any considerable importance in that district. It cannot be said that the well proves any large extent of territory, for the development of the Lost Hills and Belridge districts shows that the dip of the formation may be steep at that distance from the main range of hills, and the Associated well is so deep that any considerable further depression would carry the oil-bearing formation too far down to be profitably exploited. On the other hand, the same formation may be found at shallower instead of deeper levels under other portions of the Elk Hills, and there is likely to be a revival of interest in the Elk Hill property as a consequence of the Associated's strike.

BEST WELL AT PRESENT.

The Pacific Crude Oil Company's well in North Midway that attracted State-wide attention by burning for three days a couple of weeks ago, is flowing between 6000 and 7000 barrels of oil a day and is reckoned as the largest single producer in the State at the present time.

The General Pipe Line Company, which filed deeds to its right-of-way from the Sunset field to the Tejon Pass a few days ago, is expecting its first consignment of pipe by the Santa Fe shortly.

PREPARES FOR GUSHER.

The California Midway is down 2900 feet in its well on section 32, 31-23, and is making preparations to handle a gusher which it expects to develop within the next 300 feet. Special care will be taken in cementing the casing to hold down gas pressure.

The Panama Oil Company, which was organized a couple of months ago to take over the property of the Midnight and Daybreak oil companies on section 30, 12-23, has finished its well No. 2 on the Midnight property and is getting a flow estimated at 6000 barrels a day. The oil is 21 gravity and the well promises to continue its profitable work as the flow so far has been increasing. The well sands occasionally, but is started again with the bailer. Well No. 2 was finished at 2745 feet, and well No. 1 is now cemented at 2786 feet. It is 500 feet distant from No. 2 and should be equally as good a producer.

BIG GASSER SANDS.

Pyramid Well Chokes at Opportune Moment, Probably Saving Human Life and Property.

The big gas well of the Pyramid Oil Company which came in last week against the pressure of 400 feet of mud has sanded up. All efforts to bring the flow of gas under control have been of no avail. The heaviest fittings placed on the well were blown out in a few minutes' time. Every hour that the gas continued to flow, the pressure seemed to get greater. It was therefore with considerable feeling of relief, says the management of the Pyramid company, that the well sanded up after it had produced millions of cubic feet of gas without doing any serious damage to property or life.

The derrick and rig are now being repaired preparatory to running in the 4½-inch casing. When this string of casing has been landed in the well it is expected the well will be brought in under perfect control with little or no further trouble. The flow of gas has demonstrated, says the management, that a well of large proportions will be obtained when it is finally placed on production.

No Benefit.

SLIGHT AID OF TRADE UNIONS.

IS LITTLE VALUE TO MEMBERS OR THE COMMUNITY.

Unorganized Laborers Have Received a Larger Advance of Wages Than Have Those Belonging to Unions Despite the Demands for Recognition of Organized Labor.

[New York Journal of Commerce:] In both hemispheres the strike fever is in the air, and the main point of contest is the recognition by the employer of the authority of the trade union as the intermediary between himself and his employes. The London shipowners will have none of it, and the New York hotelkeepers seem to have reached the same determination. So, in these as in other cases, the strike continues to be less a question of hours or wages than the acceptance by the employer of all that is implied in unionism. The quickly succeeding efforts on the part of organized labor to force a recognition of the exclusive right of the union to speak for the wage-earner lend a special interest to a temperate and painstaking study of the subject, by Charles Norman Fay in the June number of the "Atlantic Monthly." Mr. Fay's conclusion is that "existing trade unionism is of no value to itself or to the community and must make way for something better." He bases this on a personal experience of thirty years in the employment of labor in large and small concerns, on his knowledge of the experience of others, and on a broad view of the relations between the various instrumentalities of production as set forth in Congressional reports and government statistics. Some of the deductions made from these latter are sufficiently striking, as for instance the following: "Today, after fifty years of organization, we may say roughly that 70 per cent. of the industrial workers and 90 per cent. of all wage earners remain non-union and may be presumed not to favor strike machines. The enormous majority of wage-workers neither unionize nor strike, but prefer to remain at work and settle their wage questions and working conditions for themselves directly with their employers." Mr. Fay avows his belief in the value of organization for labor, in the right of workingmen, singly weak, to strengthen themselves by union in any honest effort for their own betterment. Proceeding on this conviction, he expected to find that organization bringing to the front the ablest minds among their number, would tend to educate the working people in the economics of labor, to their own good and that of the community. He is compelled, however, to recognize the fact that results have been disappointing, that the management of trade unions appears to have become like that of city politics—an affair of personal self-interest rather than of the public good.

To the claim of the labor leaders that organization is the sole foundation of good wages all the time, Mr. Fay makes reply by quoting from the "Senate Report on Wages and Prices" to the following effect: While from 1900 to 1907 the average price of twenty-five leading commodities advanced 17 per cent., farm labor, entirely unorganized, advanced from 60 to 67 per cent. Ribbon and hosiery mill labor, poorly organized, two-thirds of whose strikes failed, advanced respectively 44 and 36 per cent.; railway labor, highly organized, 33 per cent.; machinists, 30 per cent.; engineers, 20 per cent; miscellaneous, 18 per cent; building trade labor, over-organized, advanced but 33 per cent. cabinet-makers, well organized, advanced but 20 per cent. So, also while union carpenters earned in Philadelphia $21 per week, their pay in Louisville was $18 and in Chicago $27.50. In other words, the different classes considered by the Senate Committee, entirely unorganized, unskilled labor gained most in ate Committee entirely unorganized, unskilled labor, gained most in wages; badly organized labor came next and the best organized and strongest of all union labor, the railway engineers, gained least, while laborers of the same unions at one and the same time in different cities of the same country drew widely different and apparently inconsistent rates of wages for the same work. It seems a pertinent question, how can these contradictory facts be accounted for on the theory that unionism is the foundation of wage scales?

"Very few unprejudiced observers will fail to agree with Mr. Fay that these scales are fixed the world over by local conditions of supply, demand and efficiency. Mr. Fay recites an interesting experience of a strike in his own factory in regard to whose progress he received daily reports from a detective agency which had demonstrated its ability to get accurate inside information. The financial statements which came in twice a month, showed that but one-fifth of the union war fund came back to the men, and this mostly in the shape of pay for pickets, while four-fifths went in salaries and expenses of the organization. The largest single items were the bills of a certain lawyer, "perhaps the most conspicuous champian of down-trodden labor in America, aggregating many thousands of dollars, paid him for defending sluggers and fighting injunctions against violence and intimidation of non-union men."

As to the claim that there is an enormous profit from its daily toil which labor does not get, Mr. Fay makes this telling rejoinder: The census of 1910 placed the total wealth of the nation at some $107,000,000,000, of which about one-quarter was in the land, either made or saved by the nation. The rest was in worldly goods produced by all and saved by some. It amounted to, say, $983 for every man, woman and child in the United States, or about $4500 per family. On the usual capitalistic return of 5 per cent., this would yield $225 per annum, or 61 cents per day per family. That is, were all the brains and property of the country to continue as now at the service of labor working as hard as now, and were each family head to draw 61 cents per day above his average pay, labor would get everything, and nothing would be left for capital, brains and time spent in bringing about the evolution of the commercial situation. Moreover, this whole national wealth of $80,000,000,000 in 1910, excluding land values, was the accumulation of three centuries. But the farm products of that year were $9,000,000,000, the industrial products $15,000,000,000, and the precious metals, $126,000,000, so that probably, all in all, the gross products of the year amounted to $25,000,000,000 in value. Thus the savings of three centuries do not apparently amount to much more in value than three years' products, themselves mostly perishable. Briefly, the world really lives from hand to mouth, its toiling millions consuming at least 97 per cent. of all they produce. A few million of workers of rare industry and thrift, a few hundred thousand of still rarer capacity, gather together the small fraction that remains and concentrate it by the world-wide machinery of modern commerce—"for themselves as they fondly suppose, but really under a mightier intelligence than theirs, mainly for the use and benefit of labor, which works and thinks as little as possible and saves hardly at all."

INJURING OLD MEN.

Union Demands Are Causing the Dismissal of Old and Faithful Workmen and Waste of Experience.

[New York Commercial:] Labor unions are forcing employers to dismiss old men by setting a minimum scale of wages that necessitates the employment of none but the young and vigorous in order to give the manufacturer any returns. This is a great hardship upon those whose physical powers are failing and it is also a serious economic mistake.

In any large and progressive factory, there is plenty room for the old employee, his knowledge of former practices is very valuable, and in experimental work, he can frequently save time and money by pointing out the fact that some device which is being tested was tried and found wanting perhaps thirty or forty years before.

In repair work he also is more valuable than younger men. Long experience enables an old mechanic to advise as to the rebuilding of machines that have not passed their days of usefulness, but merely require to be adapted to modern methods of turning out work. We waste too much good material in this country, and the waste of men is one of our most serious faults.

When Thomas Edison was in Germany not long ago, he was greatly impressed with the way in which the German manufacturers carried on research work and the excellent returns in the shape of profits that they obtain from the careful study of technical details. The most valuable work of this class that is done in Germany today is carried on by men past fifty years of age and many of them attain their highest value to their employer and receive the highest wages when they have passed their sixtieth year.

SEA SERPENT EATS A DOG.

Then Makes for the Owner in a Boat Who Escaped to the Shore Out of Harm's Way.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] The first sea serpent story of the season was brought to Sandusky from Milan where H. E. Loager, former Mayor, said he narrowly escaped the fate of Jonah.

Loager related he was watching the cork of his fishing line from a boat in the middle of the river, a little west of Milan late yesterday afternoon, when he heard a yelp behind him and turned just in time to see the hind quarters of his collie, which had been sleeping on the bank, disappear down the throat of a horned and tentacled monster.

With a swish of its tail that sent a wave rolling high upon the land, the serpent, after devouring the dog, turned and made for the boat, Loager says further. The ex-Mayor admits he was frightened, but not to such an extent that he could not put up a fight. By pulling diligently at his oars he succeeded in making shore from the middle of the river, sixty feet wide at the point in question, and, out of the water, the serpent could not follow him.

Residents of Milan and vicinity share Loager's belief that the serpent is the one seen off the northwest shore of Pelee Island, in Canadian Lake Erie, late last fall.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY, CHEMISTRY.

QUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Iron and Steel Ores.

LOS ANGELES, June 1.—Q.: Will u please find herein some samples iron-ore from a deposit in Southn California. Is phosphorus prest in any of them? In the manufacture of iron and steel are the ores om which the metals are smelted e and the same? Please give me me enlightenment on the ores.

"PANHANDLE."

A.: Phosphorus is present in all of e samples to such an extent that n smelted from ore represented by e samples would be "cold-short." ly the native oxides and carbonates iron are used in the steel industry. ron minerals are classified as sulhides, oxides, carbonates, silicates, c. The ores of iron are generally rouped under four heads: (1) ematite: Including all the anhyrous sesquioxides (theoretical perentage of iron, 70.) This is known cally as red hematite, specular ore, ay ore, fossil ore, oolitic ore, etc.) Brown ore: Including hydrated esquioxides, such as limonite, gothite d turgite (theoretical percentage of on, 59.66.) This is known locally as rown-iron ore, brown hematite, bog e, limonite, etc. (3) Magnetite: Incding magnetic oxides (theoretical ercentage of iron, 72.4.) Magnetite known generally as magnetic iron e. (4) Iron carbonate: Including rbonates of various types (theoretil percentage of iron, 48.2.) Iron rbonate is known locally as spathic n ore, kidney ore, black band ore, derite, etc. Hematite has always en predominant as an iron ore, and present constitutes almost ninenths of the iron ores produced. own ore and magnetite are far bew it in importance, each furnishing present about one-twentieth of the tal iron-ore production. The production of iron carbonate is insigniant in comparison with that of the her ores, constituting only about e-thirtieth of one per cent. of the tal."

Salines.

LOS ANGELES, June 1.—Q.: Will u please tell me what this sample ntains? It was found in San Berrdino county, near Calico Mounns; is it of any value?

J. G. B.

A.: The sample represents material rather doubtful value. It consists gypsum, sulphur, soda and magsia, with a trace of niter.

Crystallized Calcite.

PARKER (Ariz.) June 1.—Q.: der separate cover I mail you some mples that I call fluorspar. They ere taken from my claims four miles om Parker on the Arizona side of e Colorado River. Please correct e on the mineral if I have not corctly named it.

L. B. F.

Kind Words.

LOS ANGELES, June 1.—Q.: Wish thank you for your information ven me about the little samples of ck sent to you from San Bernardino unty. We prospectors surely apeciate your kindness.

J. F.

Calcite.

SANTA MONICA, June 1.—Q.: aving noticed your kindness to stunts I venture to ask you to oblige e by giving the geological names to ological samples. No. 1 is from near atsworth Park, and a man there lled it a dolerite; The fossil is om the Malibu rancho, and Nos. 2 d 3 from the beach at Santa Mona.

G. M.

A.: It is always a great pleasure to in touch with students, and the estions asked by them are such as find in a "quiz" class; furtherore such questions keep us brushed , as it were. Sample No. 1, is in e greater per cent. calcite, and not leryte. Dolerite (doleryte of Dana) an igneous rock, made up of feldsr, augite and iron present. Basalt with its chrysolite omitted) is doleryte, and basalt is of a more pronounced green color than doleryte. he augite present in doleryte, "not aving so tenacious a combination th other minerals, is apt to decomse into greenish earth, which washes t and leaves the doleryte full of les and pores—looks pockmarked. It s the same tendency to crystallize to six-sided columns as basalt, and often mistaken for it." Mineralosts are perfectly right when they fer to doleryte as a feldspathic rock. mple No. 2 scratches glass; it is a mmon variety of agate, with iron ides and manganese carbonate inkish-colored) present. No. 3 sembling agate, but it is nodular calte. "The fossil from Malibu rancho" a lone and singular fossil; it is a licified substance in spiral shape, sembling the coiled formation of a ttened snake-tail; iron oxides are esent, with copper traces, and microscopical pyrite (iron disulphide) is the mass. The sample is probably coprolite.

Hydromagnesite.

LAS VEGAS (Nev.) June 2.—Q.: e send you a sample of what is a ck unknown to me and my partner. effervesces in acid, but we do not ke it for limerock. It being a carnate, it might carry lead. The mple was taken from a small blowt eighteen miles northwest of Rhyote, Nev.

"LEONARD."

A.: Glad to hear from you. The ineral is named at the sub-heading. he sample is in small crystals of aded forms; color white; of vitreous d sub-pearly luster; brittle; hardss 3.5. Sp. gr., 2.15; it is infusible, ves off moisture, and carries fortyo per cent. magnesia with thirtyven per cent. carbonic acid. Traces silica, of iron oxides, and eighteen r cent. of water of crystallization resent.

Gypsum and Quartz.

SANTA ANA, June 2.—Q.: Sample No. 1. This sample was taken om a mountain near Ensenada, ex., and the ledge, on the surface, two and a half to three feet wide; the mineral of any value? Sample o. 2, from a ledge near Ensenada; indly state what it assays. No. 3 also from near Ensenada; is there y gold or other mineral in this orth mining?

H. M.

A.: Sample No. 1 is crystallized ypsum, slightly impure with iron nd manganese; it will, however round to a powder,) answer for a fertilizer. If the substance ere properly burnt it would ake a grade of plaster of Paris. o. 2 is in part chlorite, with microopical pyrite (iron disulphide) sparngly present. No. 3 is quartz (ferginous quartz;) some pyrite is in e rock that resembles native gold looked upon in a straight line, but cillate the specimen, meanwhile observing the golden-colored "colors," nd the "fool's gold" is quickly dected. There is, however, a "color" of native gold in the sample. For assay values you are politely referred to assayers.

Porcelain Jasper.

LOS ANGELES, June 2.—Q.: Will you please classify and name the within sample from a deposit in Los Angeles county?

Calcite and Hydrocarbon.

SANTA ANA, June 3.—Q.: With this I am sending you four samples from the Fort Bridger reservation, Uinta county, Wyoming. Would like to have you name them and also tell me if there is a probability of finding oil in the vicinity from which they came. There are a number of small oil wells about eighteen miles west of the vicinity from which they came.

W. W. H.

A.: We are not favorably impressed with the character of the samples as relating to oil territory, and it is probable that one would not have far to drill (in depth) near the locality of samples without striking a small flow of paraffin oil, which find would probably not be a paying proposition. Sample No. 1 is a blue-green magnesium limestone. No. 2 is a calciferous shale, and in part oolitic limestone. No. 3 is a fossiliferous and oolitic limestone with phosphoric acid present. No. 4 is hydrocarbon, with a trace of gilsonite.

Quartz and Calcite.

LOS ANGELES, June 3.: Q.: Under separate cover I am sending some samples numbered Nos. 1, 2, and 3, which came from a vein of ore located ten miles east of Fenner. You will notice that by wetting sample No. 1 it has a very peculiar odor. Would like to know what it is? Will you please tell me if the samples carry vanadium or other values? These samples are all surface rock.

W. A. K.

A.: No. 1, quartz, with iron oxides and traces of lead, zinc and vanadium. The odor arising from this sample is owing, probably, to the formation of hydrogen sulphide with water and trace of deposed arsenopyrite in the mass. No. 2, magnetic iron with hematite. No. 3, calcite in white plates as coating on impure calcite. No sample indicates a find of value.

Bornite.

NEEDLES (Cal.) June 2.—Q.: Will you kindly tell me the name of the sample of copper ore with this? It is from the Harriet claim, and has been called iron sulphide, but no copper. I am sure it carries copper.

J. E. B.

A.: The sample carries over 40 per cent. copper, and it is named at the subheading.

Porphyritic.

LOS ANGELES, June 3.—Q.: I am sending you under separate cover two specimens, marked J. M. H. 1 and J. M. H. 2. They were taken from a large ledge near Chuckawalla Springs, in Riverside county. A man says they are schist; another man says they are the finest specimens of porphyry. Still another man thinks they are bauxite. As these are men of large experience it is strange they should differ so, and yet, they only judged with their eyes.

J. M. H.

A.: We will add to the evidence of sight the exact tests of chemistry. No. 1 is porphyritic rock, with yellow ferric and ferrous-iron present; vanadic acid a trace. No. 2, calcite coating on the mass; aluminum oxide present in low percentage with iron oxides. This is feldspathic rock also.

Siderite.

LOS ANGELES, June 3.—Q.: This specimen comes from a pockety ledge in Riverside county. Will you please state if it carries bauxite?

W. A.

A.: Bauxite is not present in the mass. The sample is siderite (carbonate of iron.)

Low-Grade Scheelite.

BAKERSFIELD, June 4.—Q.: Please state what kind of metal is in sample No. 1. Sample No. 2, I take to be opal. No. 3, is this Fuller's earth? No. 4, is this tungsten? All of the samples are in lead formation, and within ten miles of Bakersfield.

W. T. M.

A.: Sample No. 1 is a low-grade scheelite, and carries approximately 10 per cent. tungsten. No. 2 is gypsum (variety selenite,) and plaster of Paris can be made from material represented by the sample. No. 3 yes, but it is impure with iron oxides. No. 4 is titanic iron ore.

Molybdenite.

SAN DIEGO, June 3.—Q.: I am sending to your chemistry department some samples of the metal molybdenite in a gangue of quartz, and it is found in large deposits close to the boundary line of California and Mexico, in Mexico. Can the metal be separated from the gangue at a commercial profit? Where can a market be found for the metal?

H. L. S.

A.: Molybdenite is not a metal; it is the sulphide of the metal molybdenum. The sulphide occurs in the sample in minute flakes, and the matrix is a hard, "greasy" quartz. By hand cobbing the flakes of molybdenite could never be separated at a profit. There is but little demand for molybdenite, the price for it is uncertain, and there are many leads of it in Eastern Oregon in which the sulphide occurs in large flakes and crystals. Up to date no purchasers are in the market for the product.

Gold and Mercury.

LOS ANGELES, June 4.—Q.: Appreciating the courtesy you have extended to students, I would be glad to see clearly, the cause of gold being collected from the powdered rock and earth while under water. It seems wonderful that the mercury picks out all of the gold, and the water washes out the impurities. Can you illustrate my uncertain knowledge by clearing up the not-seen-clearly facts?

D. J. F.

A.: You probably refer to the results obtained by the mining boys in the hills in "washing gold" from placers, by panning, horning, sluicing, dredging and so forth. As an illustration, suppose that we are out on a prospecting trip, and we come to a creek with gravel on and near its banks; here we dig down to bedrock and put down a couple of "boxes," say ten feet each in length and fitting the end of one box into the end of the other box. On the bottom of the boxes space a few blocks or strips of boards, say an inch in height across the inside bottom of the boxes and wedge the strips to the "innards" of the boxes; these narrow strips form a sort of chicken-ladder, as it were, and are known as "riffles." The boxes are placed near the "diggings," on a slight incline, and a little mercury is placed above the riffles. Our next step is to run water into the boxes and over the riffles from a trough or spout made of bark or a piece of old tin-spouting; following this, shovel gravel into the sluice, stir the mixture and let the water carry off the earth, sand, oxides, and other "tailings" down stream to the "dump."

Metallic mercury (quicksilver) is a fluid with a specific gravity of 13.6 ordinarily, but when pure it is 14. Gold with a specific gravity of 19.3 will promptly sink into the "bath" of mercury confined in the riffles, while iron oxides with specific gravity from 3.4 to 5, with sand and other matter lighter than mercury will float on the surface of the bath of mercury. The action of the running water on and through the gravel tends to carry all of the gold

—"there is about one real Utility produced to the generation, and each one lays the foundation for an immense fortune"—

A REAL UTILITY HAS ARRIVED

The creation of real Utilities is limited. History does not record the failure of real ones.

We are manufacturing a real NO ICE Refrigerator. Its advent marks an epoch.

It means total obliteration of daily ice man visits—it ends forever the strain of paying monthly ice bills.

This Utility performs every function of the present ice refrigerator—and does not stop there.

It permits the keeping of milk and butter perfectly fresh, even though placed alongside such vegetables as cantaloupes and cabbage.

We have proved these claims absolutely by tests covering more than two years.

Up to the present time this company has been a close corporation.

Now the business has outgrown all expectations and our factory is working night and day.

The present factory is totally inadequate to meet demands for this Utility.

Advance orders, which we are filling as best we can, now run into thousands of dollars—and we are turning away orders daily.

One box placed in Imperial Valley nine months ago has already brought scores of unsolicited orders—and they are still coming.

The profits from present orders alone will pay substantial dividends on the entire issued capital stock.

This company must build a new and modern plant immediately.

For this purpose we now offer a limited amount of our treasury stock at par.

We have repeatedly declined offers looking to the purchase outright of the business, also for the purchase of a controlling interest. We prefer a large number of shareholders for moderate amounts, because this great Utility belongs to the public.

Liberal terms are offered those wishing to purchase our shares on the installment plan, for the reason that the funds can be used gradually as the plant is under construction.

There is no interest charged on such deferred payments.

And there is a fund for the protection of those who find it necessary to quickly dispose of their shares at any future time.

Call and see this great Utility if you can do so. It is worth a trip of many miles.

I.W.W. Strike in Washington Is Dissolving.

Laborers Induced to Leave Jobs Are Returning

No Hint of Trouble Until the Disturbers Came.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Word that the I. W.W. strike on the Northwestern Electric Company's great power dam across the White Salmon River above Underwood, Wash., has been defeated by the action of more than half of the men voluntarily returning to work, was brought to Portland today by J. H. Manning, superintendent in charge of the construction work for Stone & Webster, the contractors.

Two hundred and thirty-five men who were driving tunnels through which to flume the river while the dam is being built, walked out last week on one night's notice, as I.W.W. agitators had gained a foothold in the camp. Of these, 125 have already come back to their jobs, according to Mr. Manning, and the places of the others have been filled with imported men. By tomorrow a full crew will be at work.

"The strike has been purely an I. W.W. affair," said Mr. Manning. "There was no hint of dissatisfaction among the men till the I.W.W. agitators appeared. We are paying graders $2.25 a day, or from 50 to 90 cents more than the railroads pay. Muckers in the tunnel get $2.50, while the men on the drills get $2.75, which is as much as they can get anywhere for this class of work."

Improved Conditions in Factories.

President Hobbs of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers says: "Let us consider the following facts: The modern factory has abolished the sweat shop; the regular life and hours have, of necessity, lessened dissipation; there can be no over-crowding from the very nature of the machinery; labor laws have greatly reduced the hours of work; all sorts of devices lessen hard labor; each new machine not only lessens labor, but enables men to earn their livings in less time; it was the necessity of our mills that first made possible the development of humidification and cooling of air which now gives comfort to the afflicted in our hospitals; the incandescent electric lamp was also a development caused by the demand of the mills for a light which would not vitiate the air and which could be placed where needed; libraries, rest-rooms, lunch-rooms and Y.M.C.A. rooms are found everywhere; a higher standard of living exists; the best sanitary and hygienic conditions known are found in the mills. It will be seen, therefore, that the modern factory life does not injure mentally, morally and physically those who are a part of it, but that the contrary is true, and that the modern factory system has been instrumental in lifting the life of the people to a higher plane."

Moore, who has his plans drawn for a fine home; seventy feet on the corner of Fourth and Cahuenga to Mrs. Louise W. Murphey, who has plans drawn for a modern home; sixty feet on Hobart boulevard, between Third and Fourth, to Floyd F. HOPES TO FOUND COLONY.

C. A. Ross has purchased a block of seven lots on Woodward avenue in the Michillinda tract. Ross, who is a millionaire contractor with extensive property and business interests in Iowa and Kansas, contemplates the formation of a colony of intimates to have permanent or at least winter homes in Michillinda. He paid $14,000 for his property and will build at once according to plans designed by [illegible] & Cline, a beautiful modified mission style home.

The Forbes Company, agents for the tract, also sold during the week a five-acre building site adjoining Michillinda on the west. The buyer is a wealthy Pasadena investor who holds the property for speculation. Mr. Forbes announces the addition of a business department to his present establishment. This will be under the direction of Zuill & Vernon, who were formerly connected with the Ross W. Campbell Company. An important deal transacted by the Forbes company last week was the sale of the property at No. 653 West Twenty-eighth street to an eastern investor for $30,000. The property belonged to J. H. Brown, formerly of this city, but now residing in San Francisco.

MONEY TRUST AND LABOR TRUST.

About Time for People to Get at the Truth and Punish Both or Neither.

[Seattle Times:] Is there a money trust? Is there a labor trust? The two questions go hand in hand at the present moment when they have been given prominence.

One of the first results of the McNamara confessions in Los Angeles was the declaration, repeated from all parts of the United States, that "capitalistic influences" had combined to wrest an acknowledgement of guilt from innocent men.

When labor made an accusation like that it took untenable ground and in a very short time it was forced to back down. The McNamaras are guilty; they have said so themselves, nor is there any capitalistic power on the face of the earth able to compel an innocent man to "confess" to an outrage like that which destroyed the Los Angeles Times Building.

"Capitalistic influences" could have retorted that the fact of the raising of a defense fund of $190,000 was the strongest kind of evidence of the existence of a labor trust. But that conclusion would be no more warranted than the other.

Laboring men all over the United States subscribed to the defense fund because they believed sincerely and honestly that a great wrong was being perpetrated in the name of justice. Their belief and their zeal were so strong as to lead them to extraordinary steps.

In Seattle, it will be remembered, union labor gave one of the largest parades in the history of the Pacific Northwest. In the line marched men, women and children bearing devices like this—"If the McNamaras are guilty, then we are guilty."

What must those laboring people, in their own honest hearts, feel today when they know that the McNamaras are guilty—foully, wickedly, detestably guilty!

Yet on that fatal day in Seattle union labor went to the danger line. It sought to try this great criminal case in the unions themselves; to hold the courts, the final bulwark of American liberty, in disparagement; and in so doing union men, thousands of them, made a wretched and deplorable mistake.

The "money trust"—what of it? The facts and the conclusions as to the labor trust apply even more strongly here. As The Financier says, the money trust is to be investigated by a Congressional committee.

"The testimony offered might be interesting," adds that publication, "but we are frank enough to say that it would not in any way reflect on the intelligence or business acumen of the money trust—if, indeed, this monster is at large."

If the men who loan money are in a money trust, then emphatically the men who marched in the parade and carried banners accusing themselves of dastardly crime are in a labor trust. The case is about as broad as it is long.

It is about time for the public to get at the truth and realize that noisy, violent talk does not make a trust of one kind or another.

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES ON AND OFF AND STRIKES COMING.

IN LANCASHIRE, England, a three-and-a-half-week's cotton mills lockout (forced by a threatened strike because of the employment of two men and two women non-unionists, involving directly 160,000 operatives and indirectly not less than 140,000 more, a total of 300,000 idle workers, came to an end two or three months ago with absolutely no resultant benefit to the 300,000 workers, but on the contrary, there was a direct loss to them of $8,000,000 wages. The four non-union workers were not unionized. In addition, there was a direct loss to the district of $27,000,000 in trade, besides a loss to other interests there of at least $25,000,000. The total loss by this fool strike for that form of industrial slavery called "recognition of the union" was $60,000,000, while the entire Lancashire cotton mills' district is as much, if not more, an "open shop" district than it was before the silly strike began. It was sheer insanity for the 160,000 strikers to force this great wages and other losses on themselves and the district and it was particularly cruel treatment by them of the 140,000 other workers who were forced out of work by the futile and really criminal strike.

But we can get illustrations, true and striking illustrations, practical illustrations of the folly, madness and waste of labor-union wages money without crossing the Atlantic for them. In the past thirty years, American union labor has paid into the get-rich-quick treasury of Gompers and Company, (the American Federation of Labor) the great sum of $2,622,000 for no good purpose whatever. For this immense contribution, American union labor has not received one dollar's worth of real value in return. This sum does not include the $200,000 or more which Gompers wheedled out of the wages of American union labor for the "they-are-innocent McNamaras defense fund." All the public accounting yet made of this $200,000 or more is "sent Clarence Darrow $170,000." Where that $170,000 went, is best known to Clarence Darrow, Job Harriman and Joseph Scott. At any rate, that $170,000 and the $30,000 or more besides, is a dead and humiliating loss to its union-labor contributors.

It is good news that the call for a general strike of the British Transport workers is a practical failure. The London striking transport workers are left to fight their losing battle alone. Only at Bristol, Southampton, and one or two other ports was there any response to the order, about 15,000 in all went out; and most of them, as they said themselves, went out reluctantly. The strike leaders in London and the more violent of the strikers are threatening to tear up the streets to prevent food for London being carried from the docks to the markets. Ben Tillett, the labor leader, publicly threatened to shoot Lord Davenport, the port authority of London. The Transport Workers' Federation is issuing appeal after appeal for money. The police are being attacked and they and strikers are being injured. The government's proposals for peace are rejected by both sides. The Transport Workers' Federation has a membership of 300,000, the organizations of dock workers, firemen, lightermen and carters throughout the country being affiliated with it. The Seamen's and Firemen's Union, with a membership of 60,000 is so far, standing neutral, wires the London correspondent of the Sun of New York. Sailings of the Majestic and some other Atlantic liners have been cancelled. About 10,000 strikebreakers are now working on the London docks. The details of the British Transport Workers' Federation membership are:

Sailors' and Firemen's Union	60,000
Dock, wharf and riverside workers	75,000
London Truckmen's Union	20,000
Gas Workers	77,000
Watermen and lightermen	8,000
Stevedores	8,000
Enginemen	6,000
Laborers	20,000
Others	16,000
Total	300,000

In this strike the malcontents have broken (without notice) all existing agreements with their employers. Destitution among the poorer classes is very acute. Union funds are lamentably low, owing to last year's dockers' strike and the recent coal strike. The latest manifesto (June 12) of the strikers says: "So far as the strike committee is concerned, we are prepared to end the dispute on honorable terms." That looks very much like the white flag of surrender. The Chronicle, a supporter of the government, says the Cabinet has decided to take no action in the matter, but to allow the trouble to be fought out, owing to a lack of unity in the ranks of labor and also among sections of the employers. Secretary Leggett of the Carmen's Union, has been sent to prison for a month for holding up a meat convoy.

The strike of marine engineers has paralyzed the whole coast traffic of Norway, which is as important to that country as railways are to other countries. Very much of Norway's communication with itself is entirely by sea. A general strike of seamen, laborers and other wharf labor is on at Havre, France, and Atlantic and other ocean ships are held up.

The new principle in striking is to strike first on any pretext that occurs and strike again as soon as possible, no matter what your gains or contracts. The unions have been captured (for the present, at least) by men whose salaries and expenses depend upon industrial war. And, more fool it, union labor pays the bill.

About 4000 went out (and are still out) in the Boston street railway strike. The company is hiring new men from all over the country by advertisement. Dynamiting bridges was begun and Gompers (the dynamite-McNamaras's hasty defender) was at once sent for by the international head of the striking union W. D. Mahon, to aid in conducting the strike. The end of the strike by arbitration is in sight. Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes of New York, one of our "impossible" reformers, is working hard at unionizing the chambermaids in the hotels of that city. Why not unionize the bellboys? Also why not unionize the guests against the tip tyranny? The waiters are still on strike, but the hotels are still serving regular meals.

A good illustration of the kind of bad influence brought to bear on striking operatives by sympathizers of their cause, was shown in the recent trouble at the Lancaster Mills, Clinton, Mass. Miss Elizabeth Flynn, one of the leaders of the I.W.W., was present at one of the large mass-meetings held by the striking weavers, and urged the operatives to stick together, and in case they did not win their cause within a certain time, to stimulate the workers in the neighboring mills to strike also. She promised them that as long as there was a dollar left in the treasury of the I.W.W., they would not suffer for want of money, and said that contributions to help their cause were being received from Lowell, Lawrence and neighboring cities and towns. This is interesting testimony to the fact that the recent striking operatives of those cities can spare from their "living wage" funds to support a strike in other cities. "But," she said, "if this situation comes to a hunger strike, and the I.W.W. is no longer able to assist you financially, then go back to your work defeated in this present strike, to produce just as little profit for the Lancaster Mills as it is within your power."

Pennsylvania railroad employees on the lines east of Pittsburgh are to vote on the question of strike or no strike. This affects 25,000 employees. Three thousand teamsters and switchmen employed on railroads entering threaten to strike unless the railroad companies give the striking freight handlers what they demand immediately.

The recent anthracite coal strike cost the 170,000 strikers a loss of $12,000,000 in wages.

The 100 grave-diggers at Calvary Cemetery, New York, want a raise of wages of from $1.75 to $2 a day. They have not threatened to strike as yet.

Ten thousand furriers in New York are balloting as to a general strike for 20 per cent. more wages, recognition of the union, and a few other things. Of the 10,000 workers about 30 per cent. are women. Union labor leaders at Perth Amboy, N. J., are against the copper refinery strike, which is being run by I.W.W. agitators. The violence there is serious. Strikers and policemen are shot and otherwise injured, some mortally. About 1000 are out. Firebrands are being used by the strikers.

That comparison speaks for itself and greatly to the advantage of American wages in the printing-press making industry, not only in the skilled-labor employed, but also in the unskilled. Extending the comparison to other countries and reckoning average skilled wages only, we have:

American Textile Pay Rolls.

An enormous increase in the pay rolls of employees in the textile industry of the United States is shown in the following table compiled from the census of 1910:

Census of—	Payroll.
1910	$235,396,784
1905	206,814,223
1900	210,089,411
1890	169,422,063
1880	105,642,824
1870	86,784,211
1860	40,410,948
Growth in fifty years	190,987,790
Growth in forty years	243,614,535
Growth in thirty years	229,755,912
Growth in twenty years	185,976,633
Growth in ten years	125,229,335
Growth in five years, 1905-1910	24,584,563

The foregoing is one of the industries whose pay rolls must be taken care of when we go to the polls next November.

Lead Miners' Wages in Spain.

Mr. A. W. North, of Salt Lake City, recently made a very careful study of the lead mines in Spain. He told the Finance Committee of the United States Senate that the wages of pickmen in Almeria are from 39 cents to 52 cents a day, assistants from 30 to 38 cents, boys 21 to 28 cents, and that the maximum wage in the Linares and La Carolina districts was 73 cents a day. The average wage is between 45 and 50 cents a day, consisting of nine hours in the winter and eleven in the summer. According to Mr. North, these Spanish miners live in poor, forlorn sort of homes, generally adobe house built by the Moors centuries ago. A family lives in a single room. Their cooking arrangements are very meager, a couple of stones with a fire between or some old cooking apparatus of antique fashion. These shacks lack all the sanitary necessities of modern life and would hardly be used for mule sheds in an American mining camp. The Spanish hills and mountains, however, are rich with lead ore, and that country is only waiting the destruction of the protective tariff system of the United States to unload on this country the product of its fifty-cents-a-day lead miners. It is not difficult to figure out how long American mine owners could afford to pay their miners $3.60 a day, when forced to compete with the fifty-cents-a-day labor of Spain.

Minimum Wage in Great Britain.

The London correspondent of the Protectionist of Boston says: "The British Board of Trade 'Labor Gazette' in February last, gave a list of fourteen important industries employing 436,187 mill people, whose collective earnings amounted to only £371,331 in one week, or on an average seventeen shillings ($4.25) each. When we remember the heavy increase in the price of foodstuffs lately no one can say this is a fair wage. But how is it to be raised? To establish a minimum wage of even twenty-five shillings ($6.25) a week in these cases would necessitate an extra expenditure of £152,665 a week, or nearly £8,000,000 ($40,000,000) a year. It is understood that our leading industries are at present worked on the narrowest margin of profit, as for instance in the case of the Lancashire cotton mills which showed a profit of only 1 per cent. or less last year."

Building Trades School for Women.

The Sun of New York says: "Women may now be plumbers, they may be carpenters, builders and bricklayers and what is more they are going to be taught how to be these things effectively. A school for women to learn these trades will be started on October 16, according to the statement of Thomas J. Buckley, president of the Master Builders' Association of Greater New York, and already thirty-six women have engaged to take the two-year course that will be given at the new school. Ground for the school building is being broken today at Winfield Station, L. I., and Mayor Gaynor will be asked to lay the corner-stone next month.

INDEPENDENCE OF JUDICIARY

Abstract of Address to the Graduating Class of the Yale Law School, June 17, 1912, by Hon. William B. Hornblower of New York.

THE young men just graduating from our law schools find themselves confronted by a most serious situation. They find the courts subjected to attack and exposed to peril. The rising generation of lawyers are called upon to resist this attack and to defend the courts from this peril.

The air is rent by the clamor of those who are crying out for what is known as judicial recall.

This is no longer an academic question. Three at least of our States have already embodied it in their constitutions. Agitation in favor of extending this so-called reform to other States has been and is being actively carried on. Advocates of the recall are found even in the ranks of our own profession.

The self-styled Progressive is not necessarily the true Progressive. He may be a reactionary of the worst kind. To set back the clock of time is not progress but regress. Civilization rests upon law. Law rests upon the courts. The courts rest upon popular respect. If for law and for the courts are to be substituted the voice of a temporary majority of the people, then are we pro tanto abandoning the achievements of civilization and drifting back to barbarism.

Civilization consists in subordinating the wishes of the majority to the rights of the minority. Slowly and carefully and painfully have the ideals of civilization been built up. Every now and then we are called upon to contend with an outburst of primeval passion in the shape of lynch law. The spirit of lynch law may be manifested in attacks on the individual citizens or in attacks on the courts themselves. In this country our fathers devised safeguards of the rights of a minority against the temporary whims of the majority by imposing constitutional limitations upon legislative authority. The judiciary has by its duty to administer and define these constitutional limitations and to refuse to enforce unconstitutional legislation become the defender of those fundamental rights of the minority.

As to the question of the recall of judges during their term of office by popular vote, the question is to be considered under various aspects. First, as to its effect upon the personnel and character of the judges themselves. Secondly, as to its effect upon the rights of individual litigants, thirdly as to its effects upon the principles of the law. Fourthly, as to its effect upon the rights of the public.

The aspects of the question in each of these particulars need to be separately considered. They are, however, in the popular discussion of the subject continually confused.

First, as to the effect upon the personnel and character of the judges themselves.

It is urged that men are frequently chosen for the bench who are incompetent, inefficient or even corrupt; that the remedy by impeachment for the removal of a judge found to be incompetent, inefficient or corrupt is grossly inadequate; that where a judge is found to be incompetent, inefficient or corrupt, the people whose servant he is should have the right to summarily remove him without the formality of a trial and to substitute in his place a better man. To any one who is familiar with the working of our judicial system, the fallacy of this argument will be apparent if he stops to give it full consideration.

So far as concerns the question of incompetency or inefficiency, this is a matter for difference of opinion. Every defeated litigant considers the judge who decides against him to be incompetent and inefficient.

When we come to the question of corruption, the injustice of having such charges passed upon by popular vote after a heated campaign with violent harangues by popular orators without any legal proof of the charges, is manifest. To have the honesty or dishonesty of a judge determined by the effect of stump speeches upon the platform, by loose declamations and unsworn statements of interested parties without any opportunity for careful examination, is to subject a judge to an indignity and a possible injustice which may blast his reputation for a lifetime.

Certainly as a method of improving the personnel of the judges, the method of subjecting them to the indignity of a recall whenever any defeated litigant can persuade a majority of the voters that a judge is incompetent or inefficient or corrupt is the worst possible method. To force a judge against whom such charges are made to take the stump and defend himself in public while still on the bench would make his position as a judge intolerable to himself and worse than useless to the public.

Moreover, the futility of the scheme for judicial recall as a remedy for existing evils, real or imaginary, is apparent. The advocates of recall overlook the fact that the successors of these incompetent or inefficient or corrupt judges are to be selected by the voters of the very same constituency which is responsible for the election of the incompetent or inefficient or corrupt men who are to be recalled, and the identical political bosses, or conventions, or primaries, which selected the recalled judges are to select their successors. We are thus traveling in a vicious circle. Elect incompetent, inefficient or corrupt men, recall them and elect others in their place to be again recalled and others again to be elected in their place by the same constituency and the same methods.

Secondly, as to the effect of recall upon the rights of individual litigants.

It needs no prophet to foresee what the effect might be upon the mind of the judge where on the one side was a litigant with powerful political influence, and on the other side an individual contending for his rights against such an influence. So where an individual is contending for his rights or his alleged rights against the interests or supposed interests of the community in which he lives, or against a strong popular prejudice, how can any but an exceptionally strongminded judge be expected to hold the scales of justice even?

Thirdly, as to the effect of judicial recall upon the principles of the law.

It is to be borne in mind that our common law system of jurisprudence is founded upon the courts. The courts not only administer the law, but declare the law.

It is essential to the orderly development of our jurisprudence that the judges of our various courts of last resort should be encouraged by the tenure of their office and the surroundings of their position to exercise calm and broad judgment in the disposition of the important questions coming before them for determination, and that they should be guided by the well-considered precedents of the past as interpreted by what the Supreme Court of the United States has called "the rule of reason." How can it be expected that the orderly administration of the law of our highest courts of our various States and the harmonious development of our jurisprudence can be maintained if a judge of the highest court of the State is obliged to answer at any time to popular agitation for his recall, based upon some judicial decision in which he has participated? A judge of the highest court of the State whose judicial labors might be interrupted at any moment by such a contingency would cease to be an exponent of the principles of law and would rapidly tend to become a respecter of persons, of parties, of politicians and of the temporary majority of the voters.

Fourthly, as to the effect of judicial recall upon the rights of the public.

The public is entitled to the free and untrammeled exercise by the judges of the functions for which they are put in office. If, instead of devoting their entire time to the performance of their public duties, the judges are liable to be called aside from time to time to conduct a political campaign in defense of their own conduct upon the bench, to that extent the public is deprived of the services for which they have placed the judges upon the bench.

Mr. Hornblower here took up the question of the "recall of judicial decisions," and commented on the futility of the "scheme advocated by an ex-President of the United States" for the recall of the principle expressed in judicial decisions of the several State courts while leaving free from recall decisions of the Supreme Court which may, and often do, affect the same statutes as those of the State courts. He considered at length the fundamental powers of the courts as considered and provided by the makers of the Constitution. In closing, Mr. Hornblower said:

The most serious aspect of the present agitation is not in its immediate results, but in the tendency towards ever increasing and rapidly accelerating demands for further changes in the direction of impairing the integrity and the independence of the judiciary.

It is said that the recall of judges if put into the constitution of a State will be seldom used, and the experience of Oregon is cited as an example. The test will come, however, in times of great public excitement, when popular resentment is aroused against the enforcement of the law affecting some class of the community.

Already threats have been made to invoke the recall in California to rebuke the judges for enforcing the law. What would have been the situation during the recent McNamara trial in California if judicial recall had been in force during that trial?

The McNamaras were on trial, it will be remembered, for dynamiting a newspaper office in Los Angeles, causing the death of several workmen. Intense feeling was aroused by the trial. Great numbers of men connected with labor unions insisted and most of them perhaps honestly believed the McNamaras to be innocent of the alleged crime and to be the victims of an unjust and malignant persecution in the interests of the capitalistic classes. The McNamaras ultimately and before the close of the trial confessed their guilt and thus took the question of their guilt or innocence at once and forever out of the region of uncertainty.

No amount of testimony, however direct and positive and however convincing to a jury, could possibly have made the guilt of the defendants absolutely clear to their sympathizers beyond all controversy, so long as the defendants had continued to protest their innocence. Suppose they had not confessed their guilt, but had been convicted and sentenced, can we doubt that there would have been public re-

Land of Opportunity.

POSSIBILITIES OF CALIFORNIA.

Million and Quarter Families Could Find Farms.

Peopled Like Eastern States, Increase Enormous.

Land Products Exceed Four Hundred Millions.

Steadily and appreciably as the march of progress, California's population has increased from 92,597 persons in 1850 to 2,700,000 persons at present. The latter figure is a conservative estimate. The census of April 15, 1910, gave this State 2,377,549 persons, a gain of nearly 900,000 in a decade. By census years the record of California's population is:

1850	92,597
1860	379,994
1870	560,247
1880	864,694
1890	1,213,398
1900	1,485,053
1910	2,377,549
1912 (conservatively estimated)	2,700,000

This is a good showing, but another equally as good is in our farm development, as follows:

	Number of farms.	Avg. acres per farm.
1850	872	4,466
1860	18,716	466
1870	23,724	482
1880	35,934	462
1890	52,894	398
1900	72,542	397
1910	88,197	317

These figures show how well the State is being settled with farms of moderate size, thereby increasing the range, quality and quantity of farm products.

In the sixty-two years since 1850 there has been a wonderful increase in the average value of our farm land and buildings per acre, as witness the figures of these acre values by census years:

1850	$ .90
1860	5.28
1870	12.86
1880	15.79
1890	22.58
1900 (decline of '90-'00)	24.54
1910	61.88

Of the 88,197 farms in 1910, no less than 51,810 were small farms—ninety-nine acres or less; in fact, 30,614 were of forty-nine acres or less; 11,982 of nineteen acres or less; and 9324 of ten acres or less. There was an increase in the ten years, 1900 to 1910, of 17,560 in the farms of ninety-nine acres or less—a very satisfactory record of increase in that best class of farm development and settlement—smaller, and thus more diversified farming.

Taken as a whole, the 1910 census aggregate showing of the farms of this State was:

Number of farms	88,197
Increase in ten years	15,655
Total acreage	27,931,444
Improved acreage	11,389,894
Irrigated acreage (23.4 per cent. of improved)	2,664,104
Completed irrigation capacity for (acres)	3,619,729
Acreage included in irrigation projects, complete or under way	5,490,360
Value of farm land	$1,315,719,000
Increase in ten years	695,373,000
Value of farm buildings	122,842,000
Increase in ten years	55,574,000
Value of implements and machinery	46,525,000
Increase in ten years	18,053,000
Total increase in farm values in ten years	855,789,000
(Average gain of over $85,000,000 a year.)
Expended for labor	49,735,000
Increase in ten years	21,894,000
Expended for fertilizers	3,122,000
Increase in ten years	1,156,000

Of the 88,197 farms in operation in 1910, 66,682 were owned by the farmers operating them, and of these all but 36,749 were entirely free of mortgage, while the total of the mortgages barely equaled one-fourth of the total value of the farms and farm property mortgaged, or average farm values of $11,675 against mortgages averaging $2802 each.

Another point to satisfactorily note is that of the 88,197 farm operators in 1910, no less than 58,936 were native whites; 26,193 were foreign-born whites; and only 3078 were negro, Japanese, or other non-whites.

FARM PRODUCTS IN 1911.

As given by the California Development Board in its 1912 report, the farms of California produced the following values in 1911, marketed by the producer and for the most part shipped out of the State—bringing in new money to add to California's rapidly-growing wealth:

Orchard products	$68,[illegible]
Farm animals and their products	64,244,000
Grain products	52,808,000
Grain and grass, hay and alfalfa	42,851,000
Vegetables	41,276,000
Dairy products	39,163,216
Vineyard products	27,090,700
Poultry products	18,900,000
Sugar beets (paid growers $[illegible])	13,000,000
Garden products	13,400,489
Fruits marketed in California cities	9,900,000
Hops	5,500,000
Nursery products	2,000,000
Cider, vinegar, etc.	1,600,000
Honey, wax, etc.	900,000
Florist products	800,000
Total farm products in 1911	$407,[illegible]

The value of the farm products consumed by the producers, their families, and their "help" are not included in these figures, except in cases of animals slaughtered for consumption by the State's rural population. All told, it may be safely asserted that California's farm products had a value in 1911 exceeding $500,000,000 or not far from $10,000,000 for each of the fifty-two weeks of the year.

DENSITY OF POPULATION.

California's density of population in 1910 was only 15.3 per square mile, although an increase of 5.7 per square mile in the ten years.

That California, says the Development Board, is able to support a population far greater than she now has is evidenced by the appended table, giving the average number of inhabitants per square mile in the ten States named and the number of persons California would have with the same density of population:

	Persons per square mile.	California would have.
Rhode Island	508.5	79,350,000
Massachusetts	418.8	65,324,400
New Jersey	337.7	52,678,500
Connecticut	231.3	36,337,750
New York	191.2	29,823,250
Pennsylvania	171.0	26,672,000
Maryland	130.3	20,324,300
Ohio	117.0	18,267,000
Delaware	103.0	16,066,000
Illinois	100.7	15,707,200

The San Joaquin Valley with 7,500,000 acres and the Sacramento Valley with 4,000,000 acres of rich agricultural land, together with vast fertile Southern California, could easily give to more than 1,250,000 families a farm of twenty to twenty-five acres each, ample for their sustenance, to say nothing of the Santa Clara, Napa, Sonoma and other rich valleys throughout the State.

The increase in California's population in the last twelve years (about 1,215,000) has not been because of any "gold rush," but consists of steady substantial and permanent homeseekers, most of them from the sturdy Middle West, who desire to live under the beneficent conditions to be found in California.

INDEPENDENCE OF JUDICIARY.

sentment and public clamor and that judicial recall would have been promptly invoked to punish the judge who presided at the trial? Confession of guilt and that alone has vindicated the prosecutor and the judge.

"The appetite grows by what it feeds upon." It is appalling to think of the extremes to which popular majorities under the instigation of inflammatory harangues by eloquent or persuasive orators may be driven.

The right of the minority to be protected in their lives, liberty and property from the clamor of temporary popular majorities is absolutely essential to the preservation of our free inflamatory harangues by eloquent stitutions.

I appeal to you, gentlemen, as you go forth to practice law in your various States that you do what in you lies to prevent the spread of these heresies in your several States.

Remember that the independence of the judiciary is the keystone of our form of government—that if the keystone is removed the whole structure is in danger of disintegration and destruction.

Remember that the safeguards of the Constitution must be preserved intact and the right and duty of the judiciary to protect and enforce the Constitution of State and Nation must be sedulously and carefully maintained or the day will surely come when might shall take the place of right and when the government of the whole people, by the whole people and for the whole people, shall be supplanted by government of the whole people by a majority of the voters for a majority of the voters. Then will government of law and order come to an end.

I do not believe that that day will ever come. I am a strong believer in the common sense of the common people. I believe that the rash experiments of those of our States who have adopted this revolutionary constitutional change in their judicial system known as "judicial recall" will not be followed by their sister States, and that these States themselves will come to see the error of their ways and will change back to the safe paths of their ancestors.

Miscarried.

STRIKER'S PLOT THAT FAILED.

FUTILE ATTEMPT TO SPOIL NEW YORK BANQUET.

Proposed to Prevent Service at Dinner Mayor Gaynor Gave to Officers of German Fleet, but the Police Promptly Filled the City Jails Full of Disturbers.

[New York Tribune:] Some plans fail, as Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes said and those of the International Hotel Workers' Union are not exempt from the number. The city of New York will stand suit for being concerned in their failure, according to the same Mrs. Stokes.

The union's plans to disturb Mayor Gaynor's dinner for the officers of the German fleet at the Waldorf were so complete that Joseph Elster, general organizer, wanted to say late in the afternoon that the hotel was not in a position to serve it. But when the strikers gathered around the hostelry for the execution of the plans they were met by a cordon of bluecoats which happened to be impenetrable.

Efforts to find a way through landed about one hundred former hotel employees behind the bars of the West Thirtieth street station. All evening a pair of automobile patrols made regular trips from the Waldorf to the station-house, carrying an average of fifteen passengers a trip, besides several patrolmen to prevent them from getting out too quickly. Those that could not be accommodated in the wagons were marched down, two by two, an officer's hand at the collar of each.

"We are going to sue the city for these baseless and unwarranted arrests," announced Mrs. Stokes at the union's headquarters in West Forty-fourth street when the news reached her. "Our boys were picketing peacefully, as they had a perfect right to do, and these wholesale arrests are nothing more or less than an outrage.

"Yet we are not surprised. This is the result of class government. If this strike had happened in Schenectady under the Socialist government this would not have occurred. Why, when the employers asked for deputy sheriffs there at the time of the General Electric strike the Mayor appointed strikers."

Mrs. Stokes was asked whether she did not think it would have disgraced the country to have a dinner to the German navy spoiled by a strike.

"You ask me that, was her answer, "and I ask you whether it is not more of a disgrace to lock thirty men up overnight against their wills to decorate the banquet hall for that dinner? Those men went to the Waldorf, not knowing there was a strike, and many of them who wanted to leave last night were forcibly detained and made to complete the preparations for the banquet.

Ever since the union called out thirteen places last Monday evening and got responses from three, its representatives have been talking about what was going to happen last night. No clew could be gained to the dire fate that was to descend upon the hotel men in general and George C. Boldt in particular, but there was no doubt that something of an exceptionally startling nature was being cooked up. Confidence in the success of the outcome oozed from every pore of the union leaders.

Just what the plans were never probably will be known to the general public. They didn't even get a chance to assume definite shape yesterday. Toward 4 o'clock in the afternoon the crowds grew denser, and a number of strikers began to distribute triangular cards announcing: "We are hotel workers. We are on strike here."

Several strikers who failed to move on with sufficient celerity were gathered in during the afternoon, but it was not until about 7:30 that the first general clean-up came. Inspector Lahey of the district was on the spot with fourteen of his own personal staff. Lieut. Becker commanded sixteen of his "strong arm" and Capt. John O'Brien of Traffic Squad C had ten of his subordinates on duty. The reserves of the West Thirtieth-street station, under their captain, Samuel A. McIlroy, brought the total number of men up to seventy, forty of them in uniform.

Just as the stream of arriving guests was at its height a group of some 200 strikers gathered in front of the building and started a parade, cheering and brandishing the strike tags. The inspector ordered them to disperse. They neglected to obey the order.

"Ruth 'em, boys," said he.

Before five minutes had passed forty were on the way to the station-house, in two automobile patrols.

That was the beginning. About every fifteen minutes for the next two hours the strikers persisted in gathering in groups at various points along West Thirty-fourth street, from Fifth avenue to Astor Court. At the same intervals Inspector Laher's officers charged them, chased them for a block or two, hustled them into the waiting wagon or escorted them to the station.

What are the car-marks of a good investment? What are the principles by which an experienced investor makes his selection?

The intelligent investor demands first and foremost, security—the knowledge that his money is safe.

After this he wants control—the power to change his investment into cash within a short time and without loss. Finally, he wants as large an income as he can get.

Anyone about to place even a small sum of money out at interest is at once confronted with many forms of investment. These are the tests for any investment and they should all be applied.

The ORIGINAL HOME BUILDERS OF LOS ANGELES combines all of these to an unusual degree. More than seven years ago the company started with a capital of $2330.00. Today it has assets of nearly a half a million dollars. Liberal dividends have been paid to the stockholders since 1905. The growth has been steady, yet remarkable.

You could not select a better time than now to join this company of satisfied stockholders.

The number of shares to be sold at $1.60 a share is limited—the price will soon advice to $1.65. They are selling rapidly and you should make arrangements for yours now. Under no circumstances will you be able to buy them at the present price later than June 30th.

From the following table you can readily figure the number of shares you can pay for.

Still it is not my function to judge either class by the foolish or vicious members of that class.

"By and by I returned to the South and started to prospect in Florida for phosphate and to search Oklahoma and Texas for asphalt. I became fairly wise to this game and picked up most of the tricks in the trade. Farmers were swindled by large corporations, and I learned how it was done. Every one, I thought, was out for graft. Money then was uppermost in my head. I came to New York, before I was of age, to sell a tract of land. We sat around a table in the Wall Street district—the future buyers, a geologist, a lawyer and myself.

A LAWYER AND A SHARK.

"The college professor was the whole works. His expert opinion outweighed the lawyer's common sense, I saw his blunders and regarded him as a narrow, technical shark. The lawyer was alert, prudent and up to snuff. He, I perceived, had mingled with the world. When he talked he was understandable. 'Here,' I said, 'is the simplicity of genuine knowledge. The geologist conceals what he doesn't know by a lingo of strange words.' Education obtained wholly from books, I thought, was mere bunk.

"Money ceased to hold my imagination about that time. There were other things more desirable than wealth. I'd be a lawyer. Back in Florida, at Ocala, where I had lived, Otis Green, a Northern man, was practicing incidentally while trying to regain his health. He called me a fool, but I studied in his office. Two days before I came of age, the examiners licensed me to perform indiscriminately, even saying I might appear in the Supreme Court. Now I knew where I meant to settle and build up a business. I had gone to California, and had seen great crowds of people walking in the principal street—big people, with clear eyes, red cheeks, and springs in their feet. 'Under these skies,' I said, 'the human race is physically perfect.' I had been brought up on bonny-clabber and sweet potatoes and my own complexion wasn't the best. 'Some day,' I promised myself, 'I shall come back here to live.'

"But I didn't start for California as soon as I was admitted to the bar. 'I can operate in Florida, no doubt, but even so,' I thought, 'I'll always be a one-horse lawyer. I am ignorant. I'll study some more and then hurry on to San Francisco.' I was full of juice and hope and longed to put my power into use. Up to this time of my life religion hadn't bothered me to any extent. I had kept out of evil ways, there were granite walls, I could see, under the moralities of life and the Bible was a good book, intended for women, children, and feeble men, but I did not act or philosophize any further.

SAID HE WAS CRAZY.

"After studying a lot of catalogues, I decided to enter Columbian Law School, in Washington, because it was located at the capital of the country and Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice Brewer were members of the faculty. I demanded a place in the senior class. The authorities informed me, after learning that I had only gone to school nine months, that I would have to be examined even to be admitted as a freshman. 'I am a lawyer,' I said, 'and under your regulations I am qualified to be a senior. Moreover, I intend to take your whole course in a single year and post graduate work besides.'

"'You are crazy,' the authorities sneeringly replied.

"'Yes, I am crazy, but what I say goes.'

"It was a great year. I studied night and day. Heard many trials in the Supreme Court and listened to Joseph H. Choate and Judge Dillon contest a case as opposing counsel. I also heard Susan B. Anthony argue for woman suffrage. I'd been against the proposition. 'Mademoiselle,' I said, when she finished her speech, 'you have got my goat.' I paid the secretary a dollar and have been rooting for woman suffrage ever since. My law diploma followed me by mail as I sped across the continent toward the Pacific Coast. I beat it there by two days. I was in a hurry, you must remember. Wanted to get among the big people with red cheeks, blue eyes and springs in their feet. By this time my money was nearly all spent, but I rented an office in the best building in town. Whereupon I sauntered into the police court. I was twenty-two years old, but I'd been up and down the earth more or less. A woman asked me to take her case. 'All right,' I said, '$5 please, in advance.'

"'You're no lawyer,' she screeched, 'you are a dock-wolloper.'

"'Oh, very well,' I replied, '$25.'

"She paid the money and I got her off by picturing her distress to the kindly old chap on the bench. After that I defended thieves and shady persons of both sexes. A murder trial gave me some reputation. Meanwhile I had edged my way into politics, being a Democrat. Took active part in the oratory and general proceedings of the Iroquois Club. Big thieves and little thieves were running both parties.

A HERO WITH CLAY FEET.

"A bill was introduced in the Legislature to increase the salaries of the members of the fire and police departments. One department was Democratic and the other was Republican. The bill was a rank steal of the taxpayers' money, but the bosses said it should pass. I fought the proposition in the Iroquois Club. A fine young fellow—I would have followed him off the cliffs into the Pacific Ocean had he whistled for me to come—turned his principles inside out overnight and declared for the bill. A little while later he was made an attorney for the Southern Pacific Railroad, and now lives in a marble palace. Thus my first California idol went to smash and my pride and my heart were wrenched.

"Well, I fought the bill, and a decision was won in the Supreme Court. The measure was class legislation and unconstitutional by the law of the State. Offers came to me from the thieves who were managing the city. They thought I was a useful man. I was poor and worn out by hard work. The temptation was dangerously great. I had few reliable friends, and went for counsel to an old carpenter whom I had met at a gathering of workingmen. We talked far into the night. 'I have fought honestly,' I told him, 'but the men in whom I have most believed advise me to get a place at the pie counter.' It was the turning point of my life. The carpenter was a wise and upright man, while I was only a boy, you understand.

"And the next morning the Excelsior came down from Alaska with a cargo of virgin gold. It brought the first news of the rich diggings in the Klondike. I saw dust and nuggets on a black cloth in the window of a steamship company. 'Here,' I thought, 'is an opportunity to escape. I can mine gold as well as coal. In Alaska, out in the open, under the sky, I can have an equal chance with the rest.' A Colorado miner became my partner, I supplying the money for our outfit and transportation. We slept in fur bags on the ice, tramping, always tramping, toward our El Dorado.

"The cold crept along our nerves and into our heads and deadened our

ADVANCE --NOTICE

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA THRIFT HOME BUILDERS

Monday, July 8th, our shares advance to TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

In just fifteen days this advance takes effect.

Even then, all subscriptions must be subject to acceptance.

$2250 is the most, $22.50 the least, to any one subscriber.

Payments may be made monthly, or in cash, as suits your convenience.

Our desire is more having you with us than the selling of shares at 22½c. We have refused all sorts of cash subscriptions for large amounts.

Last time an advance was announced (from 20c to 22½c) our entire capital stock of $100,000 was over-subscribed to the amount of $205,000.

Since then our authorized capital has been increased to $500,000, of which the total subscription will soon be $300,000.

This is at the rate of $60,000 a month for the less than five months since commencing active business.

You will understand from this why a limit both as to time and amount must be made.

At the same time, sound business policy dictates that as many investors as can shall have the benefit of the present price.

Already we number nearly two thousand, and soon will be on the road to three thousand.

Preference has been given to the investor of small amounts because we want the many—not the few.

It is the combined power of numbers that counts. Let each present shareholder influence only one customer a year, it means two thousand customers.

Let each add only $100 a year, and it means $200,000 additional capital annually.

This is your chance and our chance. Yours to make the big profits by growing with us. Ours to crowd as many new shareholders as we can into the balance of shares we are willing to sell at 22½c.

Write, phone or call for a copy of "THE WHISPER." It is a most interesting little book. Not at all what you might expect.

"ALLIGATOR PEAR" OR AVOCADO.

An Attractive Fruit Coming to the Front in California—How to Win With It.

[Paper by F. W. POPENOE, read before the State Fruit Grower's Convention at Santa Barbara, June 12, 1914.]

The Meserve Ahuacate, cut in halves. Grown at Long Beach
A cluster of Ahuacates grown in Los Angeles.
A young budded Ahuacate at Hollywood

The ahuacate or avocado. (Alligator pear.)

RIGHT in the beginning, I want to say that it is greatly to be regretted that this fruit has become established in California under a misleading and meaningless name. I refer to the term "Alligator Pear," which certainly has no excuse for existence, and invariably gives those who are unfamiliar with the fruit a wrong impression of it. The name "avocado," however, can be said to be scarcely less objectionable. The correct name is "ahuacate," and I call hearts and stirred upon our suspicions. My partner thought I was loafing on the handles of the sled. I thought he was an old woman at the upon the veteran botanist whose paper is next on the programme, Dr. Franceschi, to raise his voice in support of this statement. This I know he will do, as he was one of the first to call attention to this error in language, and has constantly urged upon Californians the necessity of adopting the historic and euphonious name "ahuacate," rejecting for all time to come the several others by which the fruit has been known.

In tropical America the ahuacate is not placed in the same category as other fruits, but is considered as a staple food product, of equal importance with rice or beans, as a part of the daily diet. During the ahuacate season laborers going into the fields carry with them one or two ahuacates as a substantial part of their noonday meal. Americans going to the tropics become familiar with this fruit, almost invariably learning to relish it as one of the most delicious and satisfying of tropical products, and at the same time one which can supply a part of their daily nourishment. Returning to the United States, the traveler goes into ecstacies at the sight of "ahuacate salad" on the hotel menu, and learning that the fruit can be grown in California, immediately asks why it is not extensively planted here and made a part of our daily food.

FOOD VALUE.

It is this unique feature of the ahuacate—its food value—that has made firm the belief that it is destined to play an important part in the future of California horticulture. The pessimist is always ready to point to certain fruits, which, though well adapted to this climate, have never become of commercial importance, and voice his opinion to the effect that a quarter of a century will see the ahuacate in a like position. But in doing this he forgets the nature of the product which he is attempting to malign. It is not on its value as a dessert fruit that we can base our belief as to a future important ahuacate industry, but as a food product which can do much toward the solution of the distressing problem of high cost of living. To substantiate this land in a way that will yield the greatest tonnage of human food? statement I have such an eminent authority as Parker Earle, well known to many of you as a former president of the American Pomological Society, and one of America's foremost horticulturists. Mr. Earle says: "We cannot help wondering, as we look ahead for a hundred years, how people will live—what they will eat—when there are four hundred millions to be fed in the United States out of the land that now supports one hundred millions. With this great density of population, will there be room for producing much animal food in that time? Will it not become a necessity of existence to utilize all the

"An acre of land can produce, let us say, a quarter of a ton of beef, or other animal food, per year. It can produce one ton, or possibly two tons, of food in wheat, or corn, or rice. It can produce five, or ten, or possibly twenty tons of an incomplete food ration in the form of apples, or grapes, or bananas. And there may be from one to two tons of very rich food in the form of nuts—notably pecans—from an acre of ground. But with ahuacates there would seem to be a possible yield of food of very high nutritive value in tonnage equal to apples with their low nutritive value.

"This ahuacate business is new. It has to be worked out. But is there not great potential value in the few facts we have? If men can produce many tons of food of best value from an acre of land in trees that can only yield a fraction of a ton in the form of animal food, is it not pretty certain that they are going to plant trees?"

DETERMINED QUESTION.

The ahuacate has now progressed beyond the point where its adaptability to California is questioned. Five years ago if you had mentioned the ahuacate as a horticultural possibility for California, nine tenths of the men whom you were addressing would have turned away with the remark that the ahuacate was all right, but California would never grow it. They simply had not seen any of the numerous seedlings in bearing in southern California, and did not know that many of them had been producing regularly and abundantly for years. Every year a number of young trees come into bearing in different localities, and today we have sufficient facts at our command to prove that the ahuacate is entirely successful in a large area. Just what can be expected of it in the hot interior valleys such as the Imperial and the San Joaquin can not be stated as yet, as no adequate trial has been made of the tree in these regions. There are bearing trees at Redlands and San Fernando, and with these to act as a stimulus planting is being extended much farther into the interior, with the hope that success will result. And while definite knowledge must come from actual demonstration, it seems likely that it will be possible to grow certain types in the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys at least. It must be constantly borne in mind that the success of the ahuacate in the interior valleys will depend on obtaining varieties which are suited to the conditions which obtain in such regions. It stands to reason that an ahuacate from Honolulu or Mazatlan would not have the same chance of success in the San Joaquin Valley as one from an elevation of six thousand feet in Mexico, where the winters are quite cold and the summers hot and dry. There are several ahuacate regions in Mexico whose climatic conditions al-

Home Builders

$600 in cash dividends paid on each $1000 invested for past four years besides the increased market value of shares from $1000 to $2650

[131]

"Home Builders" is now in the fifth month of its fifth year. During the first four years its shares advanced from par, $1.00, to $2.65, and will advance again to $2.70 on July 1st. The price of shares advances, because during those first four years the cash dividends paid to stockholders was sufficient to pay the above amount—$600 on each $1000 invested for the four years.

The first half of the present year shows the same consistent growth for the enterprise — in volume of business, dividends and accumulation of surplus.

SHARES ADVANCE JULY 1ST.

[132]

"Home Builders" plan is the correct one. It does not speculate. Practically every dollar of its capital and surplus is on an interest income basis. It pays cash dividends sufficient to make your investment in its shares yield a reasonable interest revenue, but for each dollar thus distributed it puts about two more into surplus, constantly strengthening its financial standing and the market value of its shares.

The next four years will see it a wonderfully strong institution, one you will rejoice in being identified with, and you will make big money through share ownership.

California dredges are producing nearly as much gold as the combined fleets of the rest of the world, and the industry has made greater progress in this State than elsewhere. Considerable Los Angeles capital is involved, particularly in the new fields under development in Trinity, Shasta and Siskiyou counties.

CALAVERAS STARTS WORK.

After about three years of preparations, postponements and changed plans, the Calaveras Copper Company has begun operations at Copperopolis. The new concentrating plant has been placed in commission, and it is intended to blow in the smelter before the close of August. In the meantime high-grade ore will be shipped to the Campo Seco plant of the Penn Chemical Copper Company. The Calaveras Copper Company is composed largely of wealthy Boston and New York interests, and the company plans to maintain a production of about 24,000,000 pounds of copper annually.

The Copperpolis mines have been developed to a depth of several hundred feet and are pronounced the richest copper properties in California. A good percentage of the ore is exceedingly high grade, with good gold and silver values occurring. In the early days of California quantities of this ore were shipped by mule trains to San Francisco, and thence to Wales via Cape Horn. The excessive transportation costs were amply warranted by the remarkable quality of product. Lack of smelting facilities militated against the properties when copper settled down to normal prices, and the rich mines have been long neglected. The Calaveras Copper people have expended large sums in rehabilitating the mines, extending reserves and erecting modern smelting facilities. It was recently stated millions of tons of excellent grade ore were developed, and the company appears on the eve of becoming one of the greatest industrial enterprises in California.

IRON MINING LOOMS LARGE.

The Noble Electric Steel Company reports approximately 4,000,000 tons of high grade iron ore developed near Heroult. The properties are located in the great canyon of the Pit River, and have been developed largely by adits and drifts. Much of the ore is said to xeceed 75 per cent. iron, and is pronounced of extremely fine grade. The capacity of the single furnace is increased from twelve to twenty tons a day, and a second furnace is rapidly nearing completion. Two other furnaces will be rushed to completion and with the installation of larger electrodes the four units are expected to maintain an output of 100 tons daily.

Besides the production of pig-iron, the Noble company plans the manufacture of chrome steel and other high-grade products. The by-product plant is producing lime, tar, pitch, acetic acid, wood alcohol and charcoal. Most of these products are obtained from the wood treated to obtain charcoal for the smelter. Considerable Southern California capital is interested, and the outlook is pronounced highly encouraging for good returns on the enterprise and capital of the investors.

CAPITAL FOR MOTHER LODE.

The Northern Ontario Exploration Company, Ltd., has taken an option no the promising Beebe quartz mine, near Georgetown. Developments have started and vigorous operations have been outlined. The property is a new one, with surface showing exceedingly cheering. Opened in a virtually virgin part of the great gold zone, the property is attracting special interest. The new interests are controlled by Bewick, Moreing & Company, the powerful London syndicate.

PLUMAS COMPANY ATTRACTS.

The California-Utah Gold and Copper Company, composed of Salt Lake, Los Angeles and other Coast people, has been organized to operate a group of claims eleven miles from Doyle, on the Western Pacific Railroad. It is asserted the vein has been traced on surface for 3000 feet, and that at a depth of fifty feet the ore samples $2 to $6 gold and 4 per cent. copper. The holdings lie in a district that for long years has been held back by lack of transportation facilities. It is said a deep shaft will be sunk and workings extended to open the vein near the surface. Ample capital is claimed to be assured for the enterprise.

COPPER QUEEN MAKES STRIKE.

Encounters Rich Ore in the Catalina Mountains.

Will Make Final Payment on Giesman Group.

Big Company Also Develops Adjoining Property.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) June 22.—A large and important body of low-grade ore has been broken into on the 450-foot level of the Giesman group, in the Catalina Mountains, which is being developed by the Copper Queen Company. Chalcopyrite predominates in the ore, which also carries bornite, tetrahedrite and chalcocite.

The Copper Queen people are also developing the Leatherwood and Reid groups, adjoining the Giesman property. A final payment of $50,000 is to be made on the Giesman group in August, and at the same time the Copper Queen will pay something on the Leatherwood and Reid claims.

Work done on these groups during the last few months has demonstrated beyond question that the values go down.

Frank W. Fletcher, who is now in New York, has granted to A. B. Bement a ninety-day option on the Mammoth-Collins property, at Mammoth. Mr. Bement will visit the property shortly, with several mining engineers. It was recently reported that a sale of the Mammoth-Collins had been effected, but the deal fell through at the last minute.

The old Leroy mine, eleven miles northeast of Florence, has been given up as worthless by several parties, but it now seems to be headed toward the producing class. It has been taken over by the Caledonia Mining Company, renamed the Caledonia, and is showing good ore. A four-foot pay streak has been encountered at a depth of seventy-five feet. The values are copper, gold and silver, with the red metal predominating.

H. R. Tufts has bonded the Corda mine, near Olive camp, and is preparing to develop it on an extensive scale. A great deal of machinery is being installed. Mr. Tufts has taken an option on the San Xavier property, adjoining the Corda, but his plans in reference thereto are not known.

POWELL SEEKS ADVICE.

Col. L. W. Powell has gone to the Coast to consult with authorities and to determine, if possible, the best method of treating the ores from the Powmott mine, in the Oro Blanca district. The Powmott has been developed to the point where it is a mine and no longer a prospect, but the ore is of a peculiar character that requires special treatment. It carries zinc, silver and lead. No process has been tried that will save more than 65 per cent. of the values with one treatment. It is hoped that some method can be found that will extract practically all the values at one time.

Nott E. Guild, who recently secured a judgment against the Calumet Pinal Mining Company, bid in the property of that concern at sheriff's sale in Florence last week. He has turned the claims over to the recently organized Tortolitas Development Company, which will immediately begin development work.

Jack Gardner has found $100 ore on the surface four miles from Oracle. The discovery was made in the fracture planes of a large diorite-porphyry dike. Several pay streaks that run from $40 to $50 a ton have been found and there are numerous rich pockets. Gardner has a prospect hole down $25 feet and the ore taken therefrom averages between $50 and $60 a ton, it is said.

Charles Sweeney, a wealthy mine operator of the Coeur d'Alene district, is making an examination of the Papago Chief mine. Though S. W. Gundaker, the owner, has frequently declared that the Papago Chief is not for sale, it is believed that Sweeney may secure an interest in it. Ore is being shipped from the property regularly.

A report comes from Mowry that H. J. Cunningham has sold his group of claims in Cunningham Canyon to an eastern syndicate for $75,000.

Shattuck to Push Work.

BISBEE (Ariz.) June 22.—Arthur Houle has been made superintendent of the Shattuck mine, as well as of the Shattuck Company's smelter construction work. He says there will be no material increases in the shipments from the Shattuck to the Copper Queen smelter, though development work is to be pushed with greater vigor and a little more ore will be taken out. It is the company's policy to ship only the ore taken out in development. Vast bodies are being developed and held in reserve for the smelter now being built.

John G. Alexander, president of the Nacozari Consolidated Copper Company, has returned from a visit to the company's property in the Nacozari district. Work has been progressing steadily since November, when a compressor and machine drills were installed. During the last few weeks important ore bodies have been opened. On the Copper King group, which is on the extension of the Pilares ore body, over 100 feet of ore was passed through in a tunnel recently started. At no place does the tunnel reach a depth of more than twenty-five feet from the surface, and the ore was leached to a considerable extent, but the values are high. Some of the assays run as high as 11 per cent. copper. All of the ore shows silver values of from two to forty ounces a ton.

Drifts are being run to cut the several veins of lead-silver ore that show on the surface of the Galera group. The Galera vein proper has not been cut, but one of the drifts is close to it. In driving through the hanging wall of this vein a body of monsonite porphyry has been crossed for over sixty feet. This is extremely hard, being composed of over 85 per cent. silica, and progress is necessarily slow. The entire body is ore of low milling grade, with from 1 to 2 per cent. copper and a few ounces silver to the ton. At another point on the Galera vein a shaft twenty feet deep shows the vein to have about two feet of ore carrying values totaling above $60 a ton in lead, silver and copper.

Mr. Alexander says that further development will be pushed with all possible rapidity. The company plans to install a concentrator to handle the low-grade ores already available. It is believed that the mine contains inexhaustible quantities of such ore. Some high-grade ore has been found and it is hoped that much more will be uncovered when the underground workings have been advanced to the most promising part of the property.

CANANEA EXPECTS REVIVAL.

A general revival of mining activity is expected in the Cananea district. The railroads are receiving many inquiries regarding the transportation of machinery and supplies. The entire district is quiet and there is nothing in the way of the development and operation of the several promising properties in that section.

The Cananea and Sonora officials are awaiting the arrival from Duluth of parties who are expected to become interested in the concern and arrange for the further operation of the mine.

The Cananea Consolidated Copper Company has installed a power line to Puertocitos, at the extreme western edge of the camp, the voltage being 11,000. At the end of the line a substation is to be installed and the current stepped down for the purpose of using it to light the camp and property. Electricity is now used for the operation of the big air compressor and soon all the other machinery will be using current as motive power.

A new compressor has been installed at the Cananea-Duluth. It is operated by a 275-horse power motor. The new electric crane at the smelter has been installed.

Shipments of ore are being made to the Copper Queen smelter at Douglas from the West Cananea mine, now the Abundancia. It is packed to Cananea, five miles distant, on mules. About seven tons is freighted each day, and a carload a week goes out of Cananea. The ore averages about 12 per cent. copper, and it also carries a little silver. Thirty men are employed on the property. Before many weeks the force will be increased to 100 men.

News comes from Clifton that A. T. Thomson, cashier of the Arizona Copper Company, and traffic manager of the Arizona and New Mexico Railway, has resigned both positions. His resignation, which takes effect July 1, has been cabled to the directors at Edinburgh. His successor has not been appointed. Mr. Thomson has not announced his reason for resigning, but it is believed that he will take another position in the district.

The discovery was made, however, that in years gone by the country just visited was the home of a very vast tribe of Indians. Innumerable relics were discovered by the party, along what at one time were the shores of the Salton Sea, when the valleys were cultivated and productive. At one point, cut into the solid rock, Fuller says if there was one Indian mortar there were 10,000. Many evidences were present to prove a large population there at one time, though long, long ago. The party will return later in the year to systematically search and prospect the territory in the hope of being able to locate the gold deposits which are famed in song, prose and poetry.

One thing that these prospectors did discover was that they covered the same territory that Richter traversed when he became demented, for Richter's coat and blankets were picked up, together with a 38-caliber revolver and $12 in money, which they supposed belonged to Richter. Ayala has the property in his possession, awaiting a communication from Richter's family, who reside at Corona.

Cost of Living in Japan.

[New York Commercial:] The cost of government in Japan has increased enormously as a result of taxation made necessary to meet war expenditure and an aggressive forward policy in extending the commerce of the country, in providing better educational facilities and in colonial adventuring. The result of extravagant governmental outlay is shown in the heavy advance in the cost of living, involving as it does a consequent reduction of wages. The workers can no longer subsist on the wages they get. Japan is a poor country, and the suffering is greater there than in other countries richer in natural resources and in productive capacity; but the problem of bringing income and outgo into some more nearly equivalent relation seems to be world wide. It is the uppermost matter engaging the attention of the people of the United States in this year of our Lord. Japan has no monopoly of breakfast-table distress.

PLANT PERPETUATION.

[Kansas City Star:] The vegetable kingdom, like the kingdom of men, moves westward. Darwin wrote a book entitled "Power of Movement in Plants." This power he calls "circumnutation," which he declares is common to all plants. His book on the subject covers over 500 pages. While the individual plant must remain stationary, the several species may spread all over the world. In this way it may be said that plants are great travelers. The obnoxious weeds are the most successful and adventurous travelers to be found in animated nature. By an almost infinite number of devices, seeds and fruits flee from the parental spot on the wind, on ocean currents, by lakes and rivers. By hooks and barbs seeds cling to animals and so are transported from place to place, while others are carried by birds. Some seeds convert themselves into boats and rafts, and visit new countries by water; others spread out sails and so travel, balloon fashion. The coconnut ships on ocean waves from one island to another, the bracts of our basswood cling to the parent stem until the ground is covered with snow over the smooth surface of which long migrations are made before the blasts of winter. There seems to be almost a frantic impulse in all plants to send out colonies of offspring to new countries. This impulse to move forward into new regions is a selfish one. Certainly we can hardly ascribe the impulse to a charitable desire on the part of plants to supply food to animals. Plants migrate for much the same causes which impel human beings to seek new locations. A plant species may better its condition by moving. Peach trees in new places are free from bores, leaf curl, curculio, rat and other enemies. The peach tree and other fruit trees migrate only by human agency, but the same may be said of all weeds. They follow the human tides. The common plantain growing around the doorstep was unknown to the Indian until the whites came. The red man called the plantain "white man's foot." Plants migrate to escape their enemies, and to escape cross fertilisation, to get into better soil and to start a new and better race of plant beings.

The vast majority of the weeds and plants growing by the roadside came from foreign lands. The United States Agricultural Department at Washington gives a list of 200 weeds. Of this number 180 are of foreign parentage. This seems almost incredible, but a review of a part of the list is convincing for the whole list. Our governmental authorities assert that the 180 foreign weeds scattered over the North American continent all proceeded from the Atlantic seaboard to the West with only rare exceptions.

The jimson weed is native in Mexico, but the plant is native also in other warm climates. This weed appeared in the tobacco fields of our pioneer parents at Jamestown. It was known to the early settlers as Jamestown weed and our word jimson is a corruption of that first name. Other common names for this weed are thornapple, devil's trumpet, Jamestown lily and apple of Peru.

Our tansy, horehound and catnip, all of which grow wild in this country, came over from Europe and, of course, were unknown before the arrival of the white race.

The poke weed, or the poke berry, as it is popularly called in the rural districts contiguous to Kansas City, is native here. It is one weed which America has given to Europe, where it is cultivated as an ornamental plant. The poke is certainly a very showy and beautiful plant, but the earliest use made of it by the pioneer settlers in America was to press the juice out of the ripe fruit for red ink. The root is very thick and fleshy; it is good for rheumatism when converted into a poultice, it is said.

The weeds from Europe which have overrun the North American continent have become the farmer's chief nuisance. The early settlers were not annoyed with weeds of any kind in their fields. There was no cockle in the wheat. The cockle arrived from Europe long after the introduction of wheat; neither were there Hessian flies; there were no cockleburs in the wool; there were no rats in the granary nor house mice in the kitchen; these pests came from Europe with the weeds. But if we received the weed evils from the older civilizations we also received our choicest fruits, grains and vegetables from the same sources.

The United States Agricultural Department says in one of its volumes on forestry: "According to the researches of F. Hoch, a German investigator, oats, barley and rye have originated from wild forms growing along the Mediterranean; the varieties of wheat have developed from species in Persia; buckwheat is undoubtedly of Siberian or Manchurian origin; garden beans flourish in a wild state upon the slopes of the Andes; the parentage of our cultivated cabbage, lettuce, spinach, asparagus, celery and most root crops can be traced to the Mediterranean; the Orient has undoubtedly furnished civilization with the onion, horseradish, cucumber and melon; Peru has given it the Irish and sweet potatoes, eggplant and tomato. Central Asia, the rhubarb; while our apples, quinces, pears, currants, gooseberries and California grapes are of European parentage and our strawberries have resulted from crossing the native with the Chilean species."

MISS SOPHIE B. WRIGHT

Declared in a Recent Public Demonstration to Be "The First Citizen of New Orleans."

BY WILLIAM H. KNIGHT.

There are few persons in this world so constituted in their mental and physical make-up, and surrounded by such a peculiar environment, that every one with whom they come in contact seems anxious to help them along and contribute a share towards making their life joyous and comfortable. But such a woman was Miss Sophie B. Wright, who has just passed away, and of whom it has been editorially remarked that "she was the best known woman in the South, and the most beloved woman in New Orleans."

She had numerous friends in California who will sincerely mourn her death, and a brief sketch of the main incidents in her bright career may be welcome to many who were so fortunate as to know her in life. As recently as 1866, for this woman of great achievement did not live to old age, Sophie Wright was born amid poverty, and she endured suffering and privation in those days of her childhood which are usually care-free to other children.

When three years old she was so severely injured and crippled that she had to be strapped to a chair and became a helpless little shut-in for six years. Not till she was 9 years old was she able to hobble to school on crutches. But her loving mother was a sensible woman and had trained the little deformed child to be cheerful and her pathetic smiles won the hearts of all. The girl was possessed of a remarkable intellect and when she had reached the age of 14 she had learned everything she could in the public schools.

Her eager mind devoured everything that came in her way and soon she became recognized as a veritable living encyclopedia of knowledge. Nothing came amiss to her receptive mind, and she had the rare faculty of communicating her store of knowledge to others in a way to make it interesting, so at the age of 17, this crippled girl opened a night school for grown-ups who had lacked the opportunities to get the elements of an education.

The school was a success from the start and grew so rapidly that larger accommodations were provided. "When that night school closed a few years ago it had an enrollment of 1500 pupils, and in the twenty-five years of its existence over 25,000 has attended its sessions."

After the successful establishment of the night school, she opened a humble day school, where she received a few pupils of her wealthy friends, and this grew until she was able to organize and develop what was known as the Home Institute, located on a beautiful site, and here she devoted her life to the education and training of young ladies for the future responsibilities of life. As the needs of the school grew and additional funds were required to meet its demands, these were always providentially forthcoming from philanthropic sources.

When the yellow fever ravaged New Orleans in 1897, Miss Wright suspended her school and turned the institute into a bureau of relief for the distribution of charity. From these classic halls were dispensed food and clothing to an army of applicants, but with so much judgment and discretion that she gained as great a reputation as an almoner as she had previously acquired as an educator.

When the fever had gone and normal conditions returned she resumed her work as principal of the Home Institute and enjoyed an increasing patronage for many years. But in addition to her educational work she was a lecturer in demand from far-off cities. She gave her time and talents unsparingly to all worthy causes, and with a broad liberality of spirit, made no denominational distinctions, but responded cheerfully to all demands for the uplift of humanity.

"One of her chief characteristics," says the New Orleans Picayune, "was her motherliness to the young. God had deprived her in His wisdom, she would sometimes say, of the great gift of motherhood, so that all her love and sympathy for all young things would be broader and better, and so it seemed, for Miss Wright was mother to many."

On one occasion a loving cup was presented to her as, by common consent, "The Best Citizen of New Orleans," and the demonstration was unique, for it was necessary to have two celebrations—"one at night for the benefit of those who worked in the day, and one in the day for the benefit of those who worked at night." At the same time a beautiful recognition came from the women's associations of most of which she was the inspiration, in the shape of a gift which lifted the mortgage from her school.

As leader and inspiring worker in the King's Daughters and Sons, she conducted a philanthropic enterprise of great magnitude, judiciously dispensing alms to the needy and deserving, and especially looking after the welfare of the aged homeless. She came into personal contact with many of these people and with kind counsel and cheerful words left sunshine in many a lonely heart. Ever in the hour of trouble she came like a ministering angel to bring them the warm sympathy of her loving nature.

In Confederate circles she was one of the leading spirits; she was an officer in the Travelers' Aid Association, in the Playground Association, in the Public Baths Commission, and in several other philanthropic and civic organizations. BULLS ATTACK A TRAIN.

Besieged Passengers Held Several Hours by the Infuriated Animals Until Relieved by Darkness.

[New York Sun:] At a point on the railway line between Mirabel and Canaveral, on the Spanish side of the boundary line between Spain and Portugal, there once occurred an odd sort of bullfight.

A train had just come out on a sweeping curve from the hills and down upon a little plain when the engineer saw directly before him a herd of bulls on the tracks. Bulls are an important commodity in Spain, and moreover some of these were destined for the arena.

Now these bulls seemed little disposed to retire from the track. The engineer slowed down as best he could, at the same time blowing his whistle vigorously. Whereupon all the bulls fled with the exception of one—a great fellow, quite fit for the arena. This one, with horns lowered and roaring as if in response to the shrieked defiance of the engine, made straight for the train.

It was too late to prevent a collision. Train and bull came together, head on. The bull was, of course, instantly killed, but his carcass lay under the wheels of the locomotive so that it was impossible for the train to proceed until the track had been cleared. To clear it was too great a task for the train hands. The conductor called the male passengers to his aid and they crowded about the engine.

In the meantime the great herd of bulls, scenting the blood of their dead leader, came flocking back, pawing and threatening. The nearer they came the more infuriated they grew, and finally they charged like a whirlwind on the little band of workers.

Then all the men abandoned their task and took refuge in the cars. The bulls followed them to the very steps, bellowing and pawing. For quite a time the spectacle was presented of a herd of bulls besieging a railway train filled with passengers.

Fortunately there were soldiers aboard, and these soon organized a sortie. Finding a spot where the bulls were not in force, they picked up a quantity of stones and hurled them at the animals. The bulls recoiled, charged again, recoiled once more; and for two hours the battle raged, victory now seeming to be with one side and now with the other. At last as night came on, the bulls withdrew and betook themselves to some distant shelter. Then the employees and passengers were able to set to work again. The track was cleared and the train proceeded on its way.

The Seven Wonders.

[New York Herald:] While colleges are deciding what the new seven wonders of the world are it is interesting to hark back to the original seven and then give thought to the progress the world has made and to what is to come.

The present-day list as prepared by Cornell University includes wireless, synthetic chemistry, antitoxins, radium, aeroplanes, the Panama Canal and the telephone. The old seven were the Pyramids, the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, the tomb of Mausolus, the Temple of Diana, the Colossus of Rhodes, the statue of Zeus and the Pharos of Egypt.

Centuries later, when the seven wise men of Greece gave the world their philosophical nuggets, no one, it is safe to say, had dared even to dream of a single one of the things Cornell University classes as the new wonders. They had not heard of a thousand—a hundred thousand—things which the world of today holds indispensable. Just to add to the general gayety of things, let the "wise men" of today speculate as to what the next seven wonders will be. Perfection of air navigation? No, you must go much farther ahead than that.

THE GREATNESS OF THE OLIVE MEANS MONEY FOR YOU

The earning power and the certain dividends of the 8% Preferred Stock of the Gibraltar Investment and Home Building Company is backed first and last by the greatness of the olive in the United States today, joined to the fact that this company owns the largest olive nurseries in the world. The advancement of the olive industry and the latest prices for the 1,500,000 olive trees and the 350,000 orange trees owned by this company, which range all the way from 60 cents to $1.50, on 500,000 trees ready for sale this fall insure a profit so great that the price of stock must be raised in the near future, in justice to the present shareholders. Anyone wishing to realize the greatest returns from the co-operation of this company's holdings, with the olive industry, must act now. Leading olive growers in California state that if the consumption of olives in New York City was equal per capita to that in Los Angeles, that the entire State of California could not produce enough olives for consumption in New York.

Growing Money Every Day

1,850,000 Trees Are Doing This For All Gibraltar Stockholders

The olive nurseries owned by this company are the largest in the world.

The demand for trees, which we have ready for planting this fall, insures over 40% on all the outstanding stock.

The sale of this nursery stock will return this year immense profits.

The 8% preferred stock is paid the first dividends, and shares equally with the common stock in the greater earnings.

The directors of the company have bought only common stock, as they are certain of the greater dividends.

Your co-operation is desired to realize profits from developing rich, fertile valleys and the selling of planted orchards instead of the trees.

The returns assured from the sale of olive and orange tres can be easily verified.

The purchaser of preferred stock is offered first profits from capital, which has been invested in these growing trees, for from two to three years' time.

The combined nurseries owned by this company have been established for 20 years.

Further, we have by far the greatest stock of olive trees in the world ready to meet the demand of the booming olive industry for the planting of orchards.

Co-operation brings water to the land and big profits to you.

A Remarkable Stock Offering

The 8% preferred shares of the Gibraltar Company not only participate in all earnings, but are equal in all voting rights with the common.

This means that preferred shareholders are absolutely guaranteed 8% out of the first earnings of the company, that if anyone goes without dividends it will be the holders of the common stock.

In order to convince the public of their absolute confidence and certainty of making big profits for all, the directors of this company have bought only common shares.

This means that if you, the purchaser of preferred shares, do not make money, then nobody can.

The money, reputation, confidence and ability of the directors of this company are back of the common stock, and there is half a million dollars of that back of your preferred shares.

Did you ever know of any other stock proposition in which the directors guaranteed 8% to the purchasers of preferred shares, and equal rights thereafter in the earnings and control with the holders of common stock?

At the present market price for olive and orange trees the net earnings of the company will be over 40%, and the market will be higher the coming season, which means still greater profits.

Then there is still the profit to be made from the planting of orchards and developing lands.

Big Facts Backing Big Profits

The olive industry demands at present a greater supply of trees than the market has ready.

The operation of the pure food law in eliminating the adulteration of olive oil has greatly increased the demand for pure olive oil throughout the country.

The increasing popularity of the pickled ripe olive as an article of food in the East is even a greater factor.

The last sale of olive trees by the Gibraltar nurseries was for small potted plants at 60 cents each while two-year-old trees have been sold for $1.25. Orange trees sell for 75 cents to $1.50. Olive growers from Italy are settling here to engage in the industry.

At the lowest prices for the year past the olive and orange trees owned by the Gibraltar Company that are ready for planting this season will return from 40 to 100% on the stock issued by this company. Profits from land development are hundreds per cent. beyond.

These figures can be easily verified. There is no surer or greater investment in the United States today than the olive industry combined with established nurseries and the development of the rich valleys tributary to Los Angeles.

Examine the facts and satisfy yourself of these statements.

For a short time we will receive subscriptions to the Preferred Stock at par value of 10 cents a share, either in cash or twenty monthly payments.

FINE SCHOOL PROJECTED.

Grade Institution for Vineland District Will Be of Concrete Construction and of Mission Type.

Construction will be begun at once upon the handsome and up-to-date grammar school planned by Paul V. Tuttle and E. L. Hopkins of this city, for Baldwin Park, the seat of the Vineland school district. Bids for the building are now being taken. The improvement, it is estimated, will cost about $13,000, exclusive of the value of its site, which is a large and beautiful tract in the heart of Baldwin Park, and which was donated to the district by Mr. Kaufman of the Kaufman Investment Company.

The structure contemplated will follow the mission style and will be of blue brick veneer to the first floor line and of rough cement above. Two mission towers will flank the main entrance. The roof, where exposed, will be covered with Spanish clay tile. The walls will be of reinforced concrete.

The building will contain four classrooms and a large auditorium, the latter being provided with rolling partitions, which will make it possible to enclose one end of the room for class uses. Other rooms on the main floor will be a library and principal's room. The basement will contain two play and lunchrooms, together with unfinished space which will later be devoted to sloyd and domestic science departments.

ROBBIN'S ROMANTIC CAREER.

end of the rope. We scarcely spoke to each other, and yet at a pinch would have shown that our sullenness and animosity were external and not genuine. Finally we came to the Mission of the Holy Cross on the frozen banks of the Yukon River. We were taken in and fed for the first time in three months, and I slept in a bed.

"A white-haired priest had welcomed us. I was drawn to him as soon as our eyes met. He was a Johns Hopkins man, and had practiced law. A shadow fell across his life, I dare say, he turned priest, and his church sent him into the North. I saw his schools where Indian boys were taught trades and Indian girls learned to sew, cook, and keep house. As we lay on the furs by the fire I said: 'This is excellent, but you are too big a man to waste your life in the snow. Smaller men can do your work.'

"'My son,' the priest replied, 'civilization was carried from Athens to Rome, missionaries bore it to the heathen inhabitants of Great Britain, and thence across the ocean to the United States. Some day one of the great cities of the world may be in Alaska, rich as it is in timber, coal and gold. Honored am I in the task I have been put to do. Where duty calls, man shall go, leaving the results to God.'

"I never saw the priest again, but I carried his message away in my heart. I had found a new type. All men were not grafters. Selfishness didn't rule some parts of the earth. My partner and I labored wearily on. We ran out of food. One night we lay down in our sleeping bags, hating each other, waiting for death.

HE SAW A WHITE CROSS.

"'Oh, yes,' I said in my despair and unbelief, 'God thinks a whole lot of me.' I got up. 'I'll die on my feet,' I thought, 'instead of on the ground like a dog.' I walked away in the awful stillness of the North. Red lights of the aurora borealis tipped the mountain tops with the mockery of heat. 'Yes,' I repeated, 'God loves me a whole lot.' Then I beheld, right before me, a white cross. 'At last,' I groaned, 'I am mad.' I closed my eyes and looked again. The cross rose once more, and the cross was there. Holding my head so that I could not see it, I walked forward to test my vision and senses. My foot struck a little stake in the ground. Instantly I realized that I had come upon the grave of an Indian trapper, fenced in by little sticks and over it a cross made of birch glistening in the night with frost, the two pieces held together by willow roots. I wasn't crazy after all.

"But a singular thing happened. I thought of the priest and of the Galilean peasant, whose cross had leaped continents and oceans and for 1900 years had cheered, sustained, and rescued human beings. I went back to my partner, joyfully, spoke to him like a comrade, and he, catching at the hope in my voice, sprang up and four hours later we found food and fire in a little village at the other side of the range.

"I did well in Alaska. The second year I left my partner and my claims and hunted out a missionary. 'I'll chop wood,' I told him, 'but let me help you.' He gave me a copy of the Bible and Henry Drummond's book, explaining the Scriptures. I read St. John at the rough little hotel in the settlement. 'It's good stuff,' I thought, 'barring one or two matters.' St. Paul's letters, in the main, were fine. Romans, however, I thought were fierce. Revelation stumped me at first. But when I found anything mysterious I consulted Henry Drummond. In the end, I believed enough to make me want to follow Christ. After a while I began to preach. Gold was discovered at Anvil Creek. Nome was the center of the rush. We started a library and a hospital, and the miners elected me pastor of St. Bernard's Church.

OLD CAMP IS REVIVED.

Lordsburg Properties Thought to Be Exhausted Coming In Again—Angelenos Interested in the Field.

The boom in mining properties in the vicinity of Lordsburg, N. M., is becoming more pronounced daily. Among the Los Angeles people interested in this new district are C. E. and W. H. Halliwell, the Coast agents for the Warner autometer. The Halliwell boys are financing the Century Copper Company, the development work of which is being pushed forward on a large scale. The property is located near Lordsburg in the Virginia Mining district, Grant county. It adjoins the "85 group," and the Superior mines, which are owned by the Warner brothers of Beloit, Wis. Ten years ago this "85 group" could have been bought for $5000. Within the last few months a million was refused. The Halliwell brothers believe development will show their property to be fully as rich.

The mines which are producing in the district ship about 700 tons per day. The ore runs from $14 to $35 a ton. At least half of the ore shipped comes from the "85" and Superior mines. This naturally causes the Los Angeles young men to build their hopes very high.

The Century property consists of 8½ claims with four shafts down to a considerable depth. There is ore in places from 3 to 4 feet wide. The equipment is high class and W. H. Halliwell says the company will sink three compartment working shafts to the depth of from 500 to 700 feet.

Lordsburg is an old camp, but is just coming into its own. Engineers predict the brightest of futures for the revived camp.

New Weapon.

BULLETLESS GUN FOR POLICEMEN.

SHOOTS A BLINDING GAS AT THE MALEFACTOR.

Designed to Enable Officers to Capture Criminals Without Seriously Injuring Them—Is to Be Carried by All United States Secret Service Men.

[New York Tribune:] The bulletless gun has at last made its appearance. It is a German invention, and, instead of bullets, it shoots a gas which temporarily blinds and chokes the victim. The cartridge used contains several ingredients, which, when exploded, combine to form a vapor of a peculiar character. The gun itself differs very little in appearance and mechanism from the ordinary double-action revolver. It holds five cartridges.

The action of the vapor may best be imagined by considering the position of the person shot at. The appearance of the weapon, the report and the flare of the powder combine to convince the victim that he has been shot at with an ordinary firearm. His eyes and mouth open in surprise, and the gases generated by the combination of the chemicals envelop his head completely penetrating his eyes and affecting his sight.

For several minutes he is practically blind. Simultaneously the mucous membranes of the nose and throat are irritated and the victim sneezes and chokes. For a minute or two the victim finds it almost impossible to breathe.

It is obvious that no individual, even if he were as strong as Hercules, would be in a position to put up much of a fight while in such a condition.

The shotless gun is intended principally for the protection of tourists, commercial travelers, doctors, cyclists, automobilists, bank officials, mail carriers, watchmen and policemen. No one wants to kill a criminal unless it is absolutely necessary for one's own preservation, and this invention is intended to make such a course unnecessary.

Chief William J. Flynn of the United States Secret Service has decided to adopt this weapon for use in the service. In rounding up bands of counterfeiters and other offenders against the Federal laws, the chief believes the chemcial gun will prove just as effective and at the same time more humane than the ordinary weapon, which frequently kills the prisoner. Overpowered by the fumes of this new gun, any criminal, however dangerous, may be readily captured, and by the time the effects of the vapor have worn off the prisoner is safely manacled.

At the laboratories of Bendiner & Schlesinger, at Third avenue and Tenth street, New York, one of the cartridges used with the chemical gun was thoroughly analyzed. It was found to comprise a pasteboard holder with a fulminating cap at one end similar to that used in the ordinary bullet cartridge. Immediately next to the cap was a small charge of coarse grain gunpowder. Then followed a large charge of capsicum, or red pepper, mixed with lycopodium, an inflammable yellow powder consisting of the spores of club moss, and a slight trace of saltpeter. The remainder of the holder was filled with lycopodium.

With the pulling of the trigger the cap explodes the gunpowder, and the force of the explosion unites the red pepper and lycopodium and produces the blinding, suffocating vapor upon which the principle of the weapon depends.

To test the effect of this cartridge, Mr. Schlesinger produced a guinea pig from his laboratory and discharged it at the animal at a range of some three feet. The guinea pig seemed to suffer no pain, but was unable to open its eyes for the space of a minute, and seemed to have some difficulty in breathing, as the fumes penetrated its nose and throat.

The test, however, hardly did justice to the weapon, for, naturally enough, the guinea pig was not in the least alarmed at the sudden sight of the gun, as a human being would be, and kept his mouth shut and his eyes nearly so. With a human being, of course, the surprise and shock would operate to open the victim's eyes and mouth and give the fumes a better chance to work.

"Several times in my experience," said Chief Flynn, "I have wished for just such a weapon as this chemical gun. In dealing with black handers, counterfeiters and other criminals, who usually operate in bands, it is almost always necessary to round them up at the point of a gun.

"This chemical gun, I believe, solves the difficulty. If a prisoner shows fight, he finds himself suddenly confronted with what he imagines a loaded revolver. In nine cases out of ten it is sufficient to take all the fight out of him. In the tenth case, perhaps, he is either too frightened to think of his danger or too desperate not to take a chance, and he springs at the officer right in the muzzle of the gun.

"Then, of course, there is only one thing for the officer to do. He must shoot, or the criminal may possibly get the better of him. Armed with a real gun, such a situation would usually mean the death of the criminal, but with the chemical gun the overpowering fumes released with the explosion of the cartridge right in the face of the advancing crook would place him entirely at the mercy of the officer, who would then put the handcuffs on him and march him off.

"For this reason, after I have given the new gun a thorough test, I shall insist upon all of my men carrying it when engaged in work not apt to require a regular revolver. For the ordinary policeman, however, I hardly think that the gun would be sufficient, for in the majority of cases in which the police officer is called upon to use a gun at all he shoots to bring down a fugitive, and obviously the chemical gun would not do that."

ALCOHOL AND DEGENERACY.

Odd Result of Investigation Into Hereditary Instincts to Determine When Habits Were Formed.

[New York Commercial:] Doctor Alexander MacNichol has told the American Medical Society that alcohol is the chief cause of the increase in degeneracy and insanity about which he expresses so much alarm. This charge is hard to prove. He bases his argument on comparisons of statistics during the last fifty years. Half a century ago drinking was much more prevalent in this country than it is today, and the greatest improvement in this respect has taken place among people of American parentage, or at least of those representing two generations born in this country.

The casual observer cannot fail to note in New York City and in all other large centers of population in the East, that men drink far less than they did even a quarter of a century ago. It is true that more drinking is observed among women in New York at least, but that is due chiefly to the changing fashion, which has induced a greater amount of eating in public restaurants and large hotel dining-rooms. Men who drink cannot hold positions today as they did a comparatively few years ago, and this strong compulsion has made them much more temperate. Railroads, especially, are very strict regarding the habits of their employees and no member of a train crew can hold his job if he is known to take a drink while on duty.

Massachusetts has been the seat of active temperance agitation for the last eighty years, and doctors have studied the situation more closely there than any other part of the country. The population of the State of Massachusetts is divided quite evenly between descendants of American stock and those of more recent immigration. A comparison between the two classes does not show anything in favor of the superior sanity or physical strength of the older stock, though those of more recent introduction into the commonwealth are more generally addicted to drink.

During a heated controversy in that state, which arose in the midst of a local option campaign, a physician of high standing in his profession made a study of the family history of a small group of individuals in one of the cities in the center of the State. He found that nearly every member of these families for three generations had been drinking to excess, but that their children in each generation, including the present one, were possessed of unusually good health and physical and mental soundness. Oddly enough, his investigation into these cases proved nothing. He found that the young people did not drink to excess and that the habit did not become fastened on any of them until after their children were born. Most of the men were engaged in some form or other of the liquor traffic and the temptations that assailed them became greater as their years increased. This illustrates the difficulty which surrounds the study of the problem of the effect of alcohol upon the race.

A Drummer Got His.

[New York Tribune:] "The southern people, as a rule, are the most hospitable in the country," said a drummer who had just returned from a long trip through some small towns in Dixie, "but occasionally one runs afoul of a case that gives him an awful jolt. I had been traveling for several weeks through the 'Cracker' district, making my trips from town to town by wagon. I rarely made any provision for dinner, but would drop in about meal time at any farmhouse I chanced to be passing, usually being invited to 'fall to' and partake of their simple fare. One hot day I reined up in front of a ramshackle dwelling. My loud 'Whoa!' brought the entire family to the door—a typical bunch, a man and his wife, half a dozen children and an equal number of long, lean hounds. To my request for food I was placed at the family board. The meal was served on oilcloth, and consisted of heavy corn bread, buttermilk and some bilious looking onions. The flies buzzed about, and the mere appearance of everything took away my appetite. I managed to make a pretense of eating, gulped down half a glass of the milk, and then, merely as a matter of form, I inquired the price. Judge of my amazement when the farmer answered: 'Wall, I reckon 50 cents would about cover it.' 'Half a dollar?' I blurted out, indignantly. 'Don't get excited, stranger. I didn't invite ye—it was yer own proposition.' What could I do under the circumstances?"

Draining Sea of Its Lobsters.

In the year 1910 there were taken from the seacoast waters of Maine more than 17,000,000 pounds of lobsters. This year Maine, assisted by the federal fisheries department, placed 152,235,000 baby lobsters in the same waters. The Maine coastal waters once abounded in lobsters and few people ever thought the time for artificial propagation would become necessary. Like the lumbermen ,the lobster fisheries took no heed for the future and everybody that desired caught lobsters right and left.

(excepting float-gold, rusty-gold, fine auriferous sulphides, etc.,) by gravity to the mercury and the result is a mixture of gold and mercury.

When gold and mercury associate with each other, as it were, a compound metal is formed which is known as amalgam. Gold added to mercury first sinks, and then amalgamates, and to recover the gold the amalgam is placed in a pocket of chamois-skin, and by twisting and pressure the mercury is squeezed out through the pores of the chamois-skin. While the gold with a low per cent. of mercury as a coating remains inside of the chamois-skin. If we desire the gold in purer form the mercury must be driven off by heat, and if a gold button is desired, add some saltpetre (niter) to the brownish gold-dust, fuse the mixture and obtain the gold.

Well has it been said that "metal must touch metal, or they will not amalgamate." Gold obtained from auriferous sulphides is usually bright and clean, and especially so if by a process of slow oxidation (pseudomorph after pyrite, for instance.) Rusty-gold (gold with a film of iron oxide) must be brightened up by grinding in pans having "mullers" working in them, in the presence of mercury mixed with the ore; such a grinding polishes the rusty-gold and the mercury acting as a sort of "habeas corpus" grabs the body of the gold instanter.

There are tracts of land bearing gold with water absent at the localities. At such places "dry placering" is at times resorted to; this consists of a space of ground beaten down hard, the auriferous gravel is well dried, then tossed up in the air where an artificial blast (or native wind) blows away the particles of lighter specific gravity and the heavier particles drop on the hardened floor. The "sweepings" are gathered together several times and finally a fair concentration is obtained.

Dry placers and milled ledge matter have been worked by raking the granular auriferous matter over the top of a broad and shallow bath of quicksilver, and the gold separated by sinking into the bath, while the "sands" passed over the sides of the bath.

"If there was a liquid of about six or seven specific gravity it would be a most valuable medium for this dry washing, as the gold would sink into it so much more rapidly than in mercury, while all ordinary refuse, even including black iron-sand, would still float on the surface."

A Good Business Instinct.

[Washington Star:] "A strange kind of thrift was brought to light when I advertised a ring that I had found," a woman said. "Among the communications I received was a letter from a woman who frankly admitted that she had not lost a ring.

"'But I want to buy one,' she said. 'If the one you found is not claimed by the owner, and if you do not wish to keep it, I will pay according to value and assume all responsibility.'

"The ring was not claimed, and I invited my correspondent to call. She bought it at a price that was cheap for her and munificent for me.

"'I get half the really nice things I have by answering lost and found advertisements,' she said. 'Many persons holding unclaimed articles prefer the money to the goods and let them go at bargain prices advantageous to both.'"

A Brilliant Woman.

TROUBLE IT IS TO WRITE PLAY.

Gertrude Atherton Tells Some of Her Experiences.

How She Did It Over and Over Again.

Discouraged, but Bound It Shall Come Right.

[New York Sun:] Young would-be authors and playwrights who expect to build their Rome in a day and wail if they find they cannot, would do well to hear Gertrude Atherton tell the story of how she wrote the play that Mrs. Fiske put on in Toronto last season. For Mrs. Atherton, who holds an unassailable position among present-day brilliant writers, when she entered this new field did not disdain learning points from whomsoever she might nor writing and rewriting her play so many times that she herself cannot say how many, and now, still unsatisfied with the result, she is going out to California to recast the whole thing and rewrite it once more.

"I value the position I have achieved in writing books," she said, "too highly to top it off with mediocre plays. If I can't write plays up to the standard of my books I had better let my reputation rest on the books alone. I have always regarded my work seriously and each thing that I do I want done the very best that it can be. And this playwriting business—the best way to prove to the kind people who ask me for plays that I can't write plays is to write them."

Mrs. Atherton smiled, but it was her smile of determination that those who know her learn to expect when she begins talking about her work. She was in her sitting-room at the Hotel Algonquin, where she has been staying the last two months and for the time giving herself up to enjoying the distractions of New York and letting her work undergo a temporary eclipse. She has been having a good time and she looks it, well and happy and content with life. But in a few days she is leaving for California and further work on the play and she looks happy over that prospect, too. When asked how she came to enter the playwriting field she did not hesitate to answer. And she told the interesting and illuminating story of her trials and tribulations.

"About two years ago," she said, "Mrs. Fiske came to me and asked me to write a play for her. She wanted me to dramatize 'The Conqueror.' I told her I didn't know how to write a play, but she kept at me until finally I decided to try—an entirely new play, however. I had only the germ of the idea—it was to turn somehow on the iniquitous divorce law in England.

"I went out to California and wrote the first act. I've learned that I didn't go about it at all in the way that most playwrights do—planning the big scene first and then writing up to that. I just wrote along like I would write in a book. When the first act was finished it seemed so bad to me that I was sure Mrs. Fiske would think it worthless and would let me off. So I started to pack to go to Europe, when along came Mrs. Fiske and I gave her the first act to read.

"'What do you think is coming next?' I asked, thinking she might give me a lead.

"'I can't imagine. That's why I like it,' was her disconcerting answer.

"So there was nothing to do but give up the Europe idea and get seriously to work. I never had such trouble with anything. I decided finally that it was because I was in the same suite of rooms in which I wrote 'Tower of Ivory,' and that every morning when I first awoke I could see myself going to the desk and writing in that book. I loved that little hotel; it is one that most people who go to San Francisco have never heard of, and I go back to it year after year. But I could not make the play go there, and planned to go away—up in the Yosemite.

"So I took the hot, dusty trip, the last of it miles on a stage, with guards with guns to protect us from bandits, and finally arrived at the most impossible place I've ever tried to write in. There was that terrible restlessness of atmosphere that you find in pleasure resorts, the atmosphere created by idle people; and something indescribably inartistic—lots of men with no coats and khaki trousers and fat stomachs, you know; and girls standing around with khaki clothes on. I can stand the hideousness of Chicago, for there it is a thing apart, and one can keep away from it; but one was shoved right into the midst of this hot, hideous, inartistic mass. It was impossible and I didn't take my typewriter out of my trunk.

"I wrote back to my San Francisco hotel and asked for a different suite of rooms, I went back and wrote another act—just writing along as before, with no scenario. When I read this over it, too, seemed so bad that I was again about to pack for Europe when Mrs. Fiske again surprised me.

"'I think it is most interesting and original,' was her verdict. 'I want Mr. Fiske to read it, and hear his opinion.' She liked it especially because she said it was the only character she'd found of a strong-minded woman without a past.

"I had hardly expected it to be taken so seriously, but I told Mrs. Fiske that if Mr. Fiske was to read it I wanted him, in return, to write me a lecture on play-writing. He did so, and sent me a long critique and some valuable points on technique which I had known nothing about. Still I thought the play would never come to actual life and was again making preparations for my delayed trip to Europe when, in Chicago, dining with Mr. and Mrs. Fiske, Mr. Fiske surprised me by drinking a toast to 'Julia France,' the play.

"So I gave up the trip abroad and accompanied Mrs. Fiske on her southern tour—to New Orleans, to Mobile and to Pensacola—and every morning we would work over the play, Mrs. Fiske pointing out where it could be improved and where there could be more drama. Then I went to Asheville and rewrote it.

"Then I brought it up to New York and Mrs. Fiske again read it to me. If there's one worse thing than rewriting a play it is having the play read at you. I found there was to be no Europe for me yet, for she said they would produce it in March. But they decided the spring was not the time to produce a serious play, and told me I could at last go to Europe if I'd surely be back by October 30 for rehearsals. I said I could remember that date, for it was my birthday.

"I went to England, and then to Frankfort to visit some friends; but I found that the idea with which I had started the play had been growing beyond limits in my head, to book proportions. So I went back to my little San Francisco hotel without using up my European time limit, and started the book recently published, 'Julia France and Her Times,' beginning it on a point sixteen years earlier than the play.

"When I went on to Chicago to join Mrs. Fiske for rehearsals, our plans all had to be changed, for her production of Langdon Mitchell's play there proved to be a failure. We had thought that while she was playing that we could comfortably be rehearsing 'Julia France.' But she had to go on the road with 'Mrs. Bumstead-Leigh,' and I joined her whenever I could. The first rehearsal was at Milwaukee. When I first saw my characters, the people I had created, come to actual life on the stage, I had the most peculiar sensation of my experience. It was very interesting, very pleasant to the ego. In a way I realized it, and in a way I didn't.

"I joined the company whenever possible and the rehearsals went on. Not until the dress rehearsal did Mrs. Fiske act her part. She was kept busy directing the interpretation of the other parts. She is marvelous in this; I wish there might some time be a public rehearsal by her and her company—she picking out the parts and veritably putting them into the heads of the actors. And she does it all in such a pleasant, tactful, gracious way that she is beloved by all the members of her company. She is a remarkable woman in more ways than one.

"By the time we had arrived at the first public performance I had grown rather to like it. It was the last night of Mrs. Fiske's engagement in Toronto, and she assured me that it was merely to show ourselves its merits and demerits.

"'This is for you and me,' she told me. 'I don't care if every member of the audience leaves the house before the performance is finished, or if the critics all tear it to pieces. You and I want to see what we have accomplished and what we have left yet to accomplish.'

"During rehearsals it had developed that the part of the young girl Fanny overshadowed the part of Julia, played by Mrs. Fiske. But the latter characteristically would not let Fanny's part be weakened, as she considered it an original and complete conception. So on this night we were to try to see how Julia's part might be built up.

"I sat in a box and watched the house. I wondered why I had no thrills. Then suddenly I realized that it was because I didn't like my play. And my sensations were entirely different from those I had had watching rehearsals. There I had been in a more intimate atmosphere, had been one with the characters, but now I sat removed and it was as though I were viewing the work of another author. And it was decidedly disagreeable to see my characters out on that public platform with naked souls, as it were. It seemed rather indecent, and I wanted to shut them up between the covers of the book.

"I didn't like my own play. The acting was done beautifully, all went very pleasantly and I think no one was bored by it. Mr. Fiske was willing to produce it, but I said no. It is not enough to write a play that goes pleasantly and does not bore. As I sat there in the box I saw that it was a mere skeleton of a play; it had no 'punch.' The idea was dramatic and the final situation tragic, but the play left a sketchy impression. I would not publicly own it for mine, for I had not achieved a reputation for writing light and fluffy novels. So I told Mrs. Fiske what I was going to do with it.

"And this is what I'm going to do. I'm going to take it out to California next month and entirely rewrite it. The scene will be transposed to Southern California, the names changed and the story will be built around the young girl, Fanny, as the main character. I don't know that the result will be what I want. I believe the oldest playwrights are indefinite on this point."

COMPANY AT BREAKFAST.

Family in India Surrounded By Sober Looking Monkeys While They Eat on the Veranda.

[Contra Costa Gazette.] "I was in India," says a writer, "and rented a little house fourteen miles or so from any other habitation of white men. The morning my wife and I arrived, the servants laid breakfast on the veranda overlooking the river. At the clatter of the plates there began to come down from the big tree that overshadowed the house, and up the tree that grew in the ravine behind it, from the house-roof itself, from everywhere, a multitude of solemn monkeys.

"They came up singly and in couples and in families, and took their places without noise or fuss on the veranda, and sat there, like an audience waiting for an entertainment to begin. And when the breakfast was all laid and the monkeys were all seated, I went in to call my wife.

"'Breakfast is ready, and they are all waiting!' I said.

"'Who are waiting, she asked, in dismay. 'I thought we were going to be alone, and I was just coming out in my dressing-gown.'

"'Never mind,' I said. 'The people about here are not fashionably dressed. They wear pretty much the same things all the year round.'

"And so my wife came out. Imagine her astonishment. In the middle of the veranda stood our breakfast-table; and all the rest of the space, as well as the railings and the steps, was covered with an immense company of monkeys, as grave as possible, and as motionless and silent as if they were stuffed. Only their eyes kept blinking and their little round ears kept twitching. My wife laughed heartily—at which the monkeys only looked all the graver—and sat down.

"'Will they eat anything?' she asked.

"'Try them,' I said.

"So she picked up a biscuit and threw it among the company. Three hundred monkeys jumped into the air like one, and for an instant there was a riot that defies description. The next moment every monkey was sitting in its place as solemn as if it had never moved. Only their eyes winked and their ears twitched.

"My wife threw them another biscuit, and the riot broke out again. Then she threw them another and another. But at last we had given away all that we had to give, and got up to go. The monkeys at once rose, and advancing gravely to the steps, walked down them in a solemn procession, and dispersed for the day's occupations."

A Valuable Missouri Goat.

Linneus Bulletin:] Anna J. Richart of West Plains advertises a goat for sale in the following manner:

"I offer one Angora goat, with burs bejeweling his coat. No other beast with cloven hoof can climb a tree or scale a roof. In appetite none else compares: he dotes on tin and other wares: and when we hear the baby yell we know the reason very well: that goat has gouged her with his prongs. So hear this most sincere of songs, take heed of its imploring note, and then come in and take the goat."

WONDERFUL RESULTS WITH POTATOES

TEN ACRES AT VAN NUYS WILL PRODUCE 2,000 SACKS

Raised Without Irrigation in Sixty Days From Time of Planting—Quality Extra Fine—Grower Expects to Raise Second Crop on Same Land this Year

Mr. George Broman who leased ten acres from M. Abrams on Nester Ave. and 7th St. last spring, planted the entire tract in potatoes early in the month of April. On Friday, May 31, about sixty days from time of planting, he brought a basket of the spuds which he had lifted to H. G. Tretter's grocery, where they were weighed and counted and found to average about three potatoes to the pound. They were of the very best quality. Mr. Broman estimates that his crop will yield 200 sacks to the acre which at the present market price is worth $4,000.

These potatoes were raised without any irrigation. Mr. Broman considers his great success due to the amount of cultivation which he gave them and the remarkable moisture retaining power of this soil.

He stated that he came here to give the Van Nuys land a thorough try out before investing, but that now he is convinced by this short experience that there is no better land to be found in California, and that he intends purchasing and making this his permanent home. He will plant a second crop of potatoes in August on this same land and expects to take off another large yield in December.

Mr. Broman is an experienced potato grower and his addition to this new community will prove valuable in getting at the right methods in the cultivation of this important product.

The other fields of potatoes in this vicinity are all looking fine and an exceptionally large crop is sure to be marketed this season.

LINCOLN'S GOOD MEMORY.

After a Lapse of Thirty Years He Could Tell a Farmer Where He Laid a Whetstone.

[New York Sun:] Judge Landis of the Northern District Court of Illinois is fond of telling this anecdote of Lincoln:

In 1834, when Lincoln was a candidate for the Legislature, he called on a certain farmer to ask for his support. He found him in the hayfield, and was urging his cause when the dinner-bell sounded. The farmer invited him to dinner, but he declined politely, and added:

"If you will let me have the scythe while you are gone, I will mow around the field a couple of times."

When the farmer returned, he found three rows neatly mowed. The scythe lay against the gatepost, but Lincoln had disappeared.

Nearly thirty years afterward, the farmer and his wife, now grown old, were at a White House reception, and stood waiting in line to shake hands with the President.

"When they got near him in the line," says Judge Landis, "Lincoln saw them, and calling an aid, told him to take them to one of the small parlors, where he would see them as soon as he got through the handshaking. Much surprised, the old couple were led away. Presently Mr. Lincoln came in, and greeting them with an outstretched hand and a warm smile, called them by name.

"'Do you mean to say,' exclaimed the farmer, 'that you remember me after all these years?'

"'I certainly do,' said the President, and he went on to recall the day he had mowed around the farmer's timothy field.

"'Yes, that's so,' said the old man, still in astonishment. 'I found the field mowed, and the scythe leaning up against the gate-post. But I have always wanted to ask you one thing.'

"'What is that?' asked Mr. Lincoln.

"'I always wanted to ask you, Mr. President 'what you did with the whetstone?'"

"Lincoln smoothed his [illegible] from his brow a moment [illegible] thought; then his face lighted [illegible]

"'Yes, I remember [illegible] 'I put the whetstone on top of the high gate-post.'

"ALLIGATOR PEAR."

most parallel those of some parts of the San Joaquin Valley.

In regard to the coastal regions from Santa Barbara to San Diego there is not a vestige of doubt remaining. The ahuacate has been too thoroughly tested in this region to leave any room for doubt as to its adaptability, and with this to rely upon, planting is going on with confidence.

MANY TREES.

Although the general public is not yet familiar with this fruit, it is evident that Southern Californians have been very much alive to its possibilities during the past two years by the fact that fully one hundred thousand seedlings have been grown at various points south of the Tehachapi. Many of these are being budded this season. The difficulties of propagation, which were considerable during the first few years, have now been practically overcome, and the production of budded trees can go on at a fairly rapid rate. Already several small acreages of budded trees have been set out, and the coming year will see a total planting of two hundred acres, at a conservative estimate. Innumerable trees will go into small home gardens and back yards, for the value and interest of an ahuacate in the door yard are appealing to almost everyone.

TYPES.

The subject of varieties and types is probably the most important which must be considered in connection with the development of the industry and the extension of the region in which the fruit can be successfully grown. Little is known of the different types which are grown in other countries, and their relation to each other since this subject has received almost no systematic attention. It is possible broadly to divide the seedlings which have fruited in California into two classes, based on characteristics of growth, foliage and fruit. By far the largest number have come from Northern Mexico, especially from Monterey and other sections of the State of Nuevo Leon. The type from this region is a small, pyriform or oval fruit, purple in color and thin skinned, coming into bearing at three or four years from the planting of the seed, and ordinarily very productive. It is so distinct from other ahuacates, that some botanists have formed a separate species for it, and called it Persea drimyfolia. The Mexicans as a rule seem to consider it superior in flavor to other types, but it has several characteristics which disqualify it for commercial purposes and it is consequently attracting little attention from the nurserymen.

The second type has become quite generally known as the Guatemalan, for the reason that it is most common in Guatemala and was first brought to notice in that country. The same type appears to occur in Southern Mexico, however, and many examples of it which are growing in this State have come from there. The principal characteristic which distinguishes it from the Mexican type is the woody skin of the fruit, which is sometimes a quarter of an inch thick and could properly be called a shell. The foliage lacks the anise-like fragrance possessed by the Mexican type. The fruits are normally larger than those of the Mexican type and seedlings do not usually come into bearing until seven or eight years old.

Seven years ago G. N. Collins of the Bureau of Plant Industry called attention to this type and asserted that it was the most promising type from a commercial point of view. At that time it was not generally known that the type was growing in California, but experience with it in this State more than bears out Mr. Collins's assertion. The thick woody skin permits the fruit to be shipped to distant markets without undue care in packing and with loss in transit reduced to a minimum. It possesses another advantage over the type grown in Florida in that the seed is nearly always tight in the cavity, and cannot roll around and bruise the flesh.

The type grown in Florida, sometimes known as the West Indian-South American, has also been planted in California, but too recently to permit definite statements in regard to its adaptability to be made. It has proved to be more tender than the Mexican or Guatemalan types, either of which will stand several degrees of frost, but in favored localities it suffered no injury during the cold weather of the past winter. The oldest trees in this State should come into bearing within a year or two.

SHIELD BUDDING.

The ahuacate has been most successfully propagated by the method known as shield budding, the operation itself being much the same as with citrus trees. During the first two or three years in which budding was attempted by California nurserymen many difficulties were experienced and failures frequently met, but sufficient experience has now been gained to enable the work to be done with assurance of success. Under glass, grafting has been quite successfully practiced, but budding seems to be the more desirable method.

Seedling stocks are easily raised either in a lath house or the open ground, a lath house being preferable as conditions of moisture and temperature can be better controlled and are more uniform. The seeds are planted in four-inch pots with the pointed end up, leaving about one-third of the seed projecting above the surface of the soil. Almost any light, porous soil will do to germinate the seeds in, but as the ahuacate is a gross feeder the young plants should be shifted into larger pots and richer soil as soon as they attain a height of eight or ten inches. If it is desired to bud them in the field, they can be shifted from the four-inch pots to the open ground.

When the plants have attained a diameter slightly larger than that of a lead pencil that are ready to be budded. This should be in six or seven months from the planting of the seed, if conditions have favored rapid growth.

While it has been shown that the ahuacate can be budded at any time of the year when the bark will slip readily, the greatest success attends budding in late spring. The trees should be watched and as soon as it is found the bark will slip readily, indicating an abundance of sap, the work can begin. In ordinary seasons this will be about the first of May, but it varies, of course, in different localities and with different trees, and some will have to be left for a second budding.

The selection of proper budwood is one of the most important matters in connection with budding the ahuacate, and one which is more apt to give the amateur trouble than any other. If the wood is too old or the buds too far advanced, they are almost sure to drop and leave a blind bud. On the other hand, young wood from the tip ends of the branches can not be used successfully in the open ground, although a fair degree of success may be had with it in the lath house. The ideal wood is that of recent growth, but which has hardened up sufficiently so that it will not snap on bending, and on which the buds are plump and strong, but have not begun to open.

Lath house budding has not been so widely practiced in California as field budding, but if performed at the proper season and with the proper kind of budwood it is very successful, and has the advantage that the young budded trees can be protected from winds and heavy frosts with much less trouble than when in the field. Six or eight-inch pots are suitable, or a very good receptacle can be made from redwood shakes, six inches square and twelve inches deep, leaving a crack half an inch wide in the bottom to provide drainage. If in the field the plants should be grown in rows four feet apart, and fourteen or sixteen inches apart in the rows.

THE CUTTING PROCESS.

Probably more failures are the result of cutting the buds too small than of all other factors combined. It is essential that the buds be cut not less than one inch in length, preferably an inch and a quarter, and thick enough so that a small quantity of wood will be taken with the bud. In budding large stocks, three-quarters of an inch to an inch in diameter, two inches is not too long for the bud, provided the bud stick is, as it always should be, of a diameter not less than three-eighths of an inch. The budding knife must be as keen as a razor. For this reason it is advisable to keep a small oilstone and strop in the budding kit, and whet the knife after cutting each twenty or thirty buds.

The incision in the stock may be made either in the form of a T or an inverted T. The inverted T is probably the best, and has the recommendation of the most successful ahuacate budders. In lifting the bark be careful not to injure the delicate tissues which lie under it, and push the bud in very gently. Tie it in firmly with waxed tape, leaving the eye exposed. The waxed tape is easily made by tearing up strips of cheap muslin about six inches wide, rolling them on iron wire until a roll an inch in diameter is obtained, tying with string at both ends, and boiling them for four or five minutes in a wax made of three parts of beeswax, three parts of paraffin, and one part of linseed oil. Avoid having the wax boiling too vigorously, or it will kill the fibres of the cloth. After the rolls are cool the cloth can be torn into strips of the proper length, and about three-eighths of an inch in width.

In three to five weeks the bud will have united with the stock and the wrap should be loosened. It should not be removed, however, until after the bud has made a growth of three or four inches, but it must be carefully watched to prevent its cutting into the stock or growing bud. The bud may be forced into growth by partially ringing the stock at a point three or four inches above the bud, or by cutting out the top of the tree. Lopping is dangerous, as the wood of the ahuacate is very brittle and nine times out of ten will break off rather than be lopped. When the bud has made a growth of six or eight inches the stock may be cut off close above it.

The best season for transplanting ahuacates has been found to be early spring, after danger from frost is over, and before the tree has started into new growth. At this season the tree is practically dormant and there is no difficulty in moving field grown trees if they are carefully balled.

The ahuacate requires an abundance of water, especially during the first two or three years. A liberal dressing of manure about once a year will assist the young trees to make a good growth. On the whole, the tree seems to require about the same treatment as the orange. It needs little pruning other than that required to keep it in good form. Budded trees, which do not grow to such large size as seedlings, may be set twenty-five feet apart in orchard fr

CLUB TO HELP OTHER FELLOW

Lewis Schwaebe Comes Forth With Good Offer.

Tire Enemies to Be Cleared From the Road.

Founder Will Give Broom to Every Member.

Lewis Schwaebe, the genial Premier man, has hit upon the one big idea—an idea that makes old man Ben Adhem's story sound like the Sunday society columns to a pink-sheet-devouring baseball fan.

He is the founder and sole member of the Think-of-the-Other-Fellow Club; but this organization promises to rival any automobile club in the country, in point of numbers, in a very short time, and place its organizer before the automobile public, as a good angel of the road.

Whenever Schwaebe takes his car out there is a broom with a short handle stored away in the tonneau, and whenever a patch of broken glass is discovered on the road or in the city street out jumps the modern "lover of his fellow-men," broom in hand, and the enemy of tires is carefully swept out of the way.

Now Schwaebe proposes to give a short-handled broom to all the good fellows of the automobile clan who will carry one and swear to use it whenever the occasion arises. This is all that is required of a member of the Think-of-the-Other-Fellow Club.

It is a small matter for an automobile driver, or one member of a touring party, to get out and remove a few bits of broken glass, but it may mean a great deal of time and no little tire money to the other fellow.

"We have good roads all over Southern California," said the big Premier agent to a crowd of friends last Thursday, "but what good are they if they are salted with broken glass and other dangerous instruments of tire destruction?

"I am a real crank on the subject," he continued, "and I really do think of the other fellow, both on the road and the crowded city street.

Lewis Schwaebe.
The Ben Adhem of "Gasoline Row," who says, "Think of the other fellow."

I think that I may truthfully say that I have saved many dollars for the other fellow already and expect to save some myself, when the other fellow learns to use the broom with the short handle."

Last week five machines were making the run to Whittier. At the turn in the road below the Quaker town, some one had carelessly tossed a bottle out on the oiled road and it had either been run over by a wagon or had broken when thrown to the road. The leading machine turned out of the way. The second also evaded the sharp edges; but the driver of the third car was not quite as watchful as the others and was caught napping, with the result that his front tire was cut in three places and one of the rear tires was ripped open.

Strange to say, the five machines went on their merry way and left the glass where it was to get the other fellow. This confession came from a party who was in one of the machines.

He did not think of the other fellow. If he had, the glass would have been cleared away. All that is necessary to get the motor enthusiast to help in a good cause is for some one to tell him how to do it, and now that Lewis Schwaebe has told how and offered those brooms to those who will join in the good cause, it's up to everybody to join the new club.

BLUEJACKETS PULL STUNT IN OLDSMOBILE.

Naval Militia Demonstrates Usefulness of Automobile in Land Operations—Full Gun Crew, With "One-pounder," Makes Fast Sprint to Crown City—Boxing Bouts and Tug-of-War Enliven Outing.

BY AL G. WADDELL.

AUTOMOBILES in the navy. This is the latest development of the motor car age; and the fact that the automobile is really practical for the use of landing parties, was forcibly demonstrated last Monday night when Lieutenant-Commander A. H. Woodbine, of the Seventh and Eighth Divisions, Naval Militia of California, took a full gun-crew of thirty-three officers and enlisted men, a "one pounder," weighing eighteen hundred pounds, and three drivers, to Pasadena in three Oldsmobile cars furnished for the test by Capt. Harmon D. Ryus, manager of the Oldsmobile Company of California.

The cars used were the three leading types of the Oldsmobile line. Capt. Ryus drove the "Limited" in which the commanding officer rode with the gun and gunners; Ensign Linck had the "Autocrat," in which the caisson was carried, with ten members of the crew; and the "Defender" was in command of Ensign Smith. In this car, the smallest of the trio, thirteen men rode and it kept its position right behind the big "Limited," which played the part of the flagship all the way.

The gasoline fleet covered the distance from the Times Building to the Pasadena Armory in twenty-one minutes. The gun, which was mounted in the tonneau of the "Limited," rode perfectly; and it was not necessary for the gunners to give it any attention on the way.

As the powerful cars came to a halt in front of the Pasadena Armory, where Company I of the Seventh Regiment is housed, the sailors jumped to the ground and stood awaiting the orders of their commander.

Strong arms lifted the parts of the gun from the machine to the ground and in less than five minutes the crew was ready for action on the armory floor.

QUICK WORK.

The drill was perfect. Time and again the "one pounder" was taken down, the members of the crew scattered, taking the parts of the gun to different points of the hall. At the command, the sailors would assemble, mount the gun again and go through drills, which greatly interested the infantrymen of Company I.

After the drill with the "one pounder," the men at arms from the two branches of the service, arrayed themselves on each side of the large hall and watched some of the best boxing matches ever staged in the south.

There is a common saying that a sailor would rather put on the gloves than eat, and the soldier is not far behind. Every company, troop and battery has its champion; and in the Seventh and Eighth Divisions, boxing is encouraged by Mr. Woodbine and the other officers. When there is a chance for a few rounds, there are always volunteers in goodly numbers.

The first "scrap" Monday night was a heavyweight affair between Private Cox of Company I, and Seaman Van Lowen of the Seventh Division, which went three rounds. The sailor had no chance with the big soldier boy, but the affair was a real fight—the navy against the army. The boys gave and took in a manner that was interesting.

After being punished severely, the sailor began to weaken and was declared the loser after suffering a number of healthy kicks in the "jib" that would have put the average man to sleep for the count.

The lightweight go was a fistic classic. A young lad named Nittle represented the forces of the navy and Private Trout upheld the honor of the army. In the first round, the soldier found the range of the sailor's "biscuit receiver" and hammered him consistently; but in the second act the sailor adopted some of those Harry Thomas tactics and kept out of sight most of the time. In the third the soldier covered up, and took an awful beating, but as the "bluejacket" was well spent, his blows were not of that terrific brand that puts men to sleep and the decision went to the boy in olive-drab.

THE ROPE BREAKS.

Next came a tug-of-war between the two outfits. The drag off the gun was called into service and when the battle was at its height, the rope broke. There were two piles of uniforms on the floor, but the winner was not discovered.

The line was spliced and the fun started again. Capt. Ryus and "Fat" Harriman were on the end of the sailor line and pulling like yearlings on branding day, when some unfortunate "pie heaver" went down and the sailors were pulled into the corner.

The enlisted men gathered in the main hall, and with sailor and soldier songs, whiled away the time. The officers retired to the quarters of the company commander and visited until the refreshments were prepared to serve.

Real "kicky" fruit punch, ice cream and an unlimited supply of cake was the next issue. Then came the cigars. Boxes of Pasadena's best were passed around and everybody was happy.

At 10 o'clock Lieutenant-Commander Woodbine gave the order for the men to fall in. The gun was hauled up beside the big Oldsmobile, unmounted, lifted piece by piece into the machine and remounted there. The men then took their places in the machines and the return trip to the city was started, amid the cheers of the men, and exchanged salutes of the officers.

The people on the streets were surprised to see three huge automobiles loaded to the guards with cheering bluejackets and a long brass cannon pointing out over the hood of the leader, racing down roadway at a late hour of the night and to tell the truth it was not a common sight.

Arriving at the local armory, the big gun was again dismounted and carried, piece by piece, up to the quarters of the command.

The officers were then driven over to the Los Angeles Athletic Club in the "Limited" by Capt. Ryus, where the evening was brought to a close.

The officers, together with the manager of the Oldsmobile Company, expressed themselves as delighted with

AD WOLGAST HAS AUTO ACCIDENT.

Returning last night from the mountains to take up his boxing work at Jack Doyle's, Ad Wolgast had an automobile accident.

Just as his big Thomas car was passing the Sister's Hospital on Sunset boulevard, an auto truck, driven by a drunken chauffeur, veered across the street and hit the front of Ad's car with a crash.

Wolgast, his wife, Pete McVey, his training partner and the chauffeur all escaped with slight bruises.

The drunken truck driver attempted to attack Wolgast; but Ad grabbed him suddenly by the arm and, with one jerk sent him sprawling across the wet pavement on his nose. He came up sobered and was scared half to death when he found out whom he had attacked.

Ad's car hobbled into town with a wounded radiator.

The champion feels fine and will work at Doyle's today.

TOURNEY OPENS AT PITTSBURGH.

Clay Court Events for National Championships Will Bring Together Best Woman Players of East and West—Men's Singles Staged as Opening Events.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PITTSBURGH, June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The tennis tournament for the clay court championship of the United States began here today at the Pittsburgh Athletic Association before a large crowd of enthusiasts. Among the winners in the first round was R. Norris Williams of Philadelphia, the new State champion, who won from Percy Siverd of Pittsburgh, in the Quaker City last week.

He easily defeated C. Gant by scores of 6-2. He will play in the mixed doubles next week with Mary Browne of Los Angeles, who will arrive here tomorrow. Experts here expect a great deal from these two and look for them to be in the final round for the Gonfalon.

Great interest is manifested here at the appearance of Miss May Sutton, also of Los Angeles, who is undoubtedly one of the best women tennis players in the United States today.

Interest is created here at the appearance of Miss Browne, who defeated Miss Eleanor Sears for the national championship last week, and it is hoped these two sterling players will be pitted against each other during the tournament.

Champion Williams's playing today gives promise of some splendid work when he hooks up with Miss Browne.

AUTO TRUCK IN FIELD DRILLS.

Infantrymen Use Alco to Good Advantage.

Field Maneuvering Becomes Very Popular.

May Be Given a Trial at State Conclave.

BY AL G. WADDELL.

The motor truck is declared to be the solution of a problem which has confronted the officers and enlisted men of the National Guard for several years.

With the floors of the armories all over the country comparatively small and in most cases polished for dancing, as the buildings are used for other purposes than that of teaching the citizen soldiers the duties and customs of the service, the regiments have worked to a great disadvantage and have gone into camp year after year with only theoretical training in extended order and field maneuvering.

Just what might be done to remedy the situation was never discovered and all hope of giving the men practical instruction in the open was abandoned.

There are places within a few miles of the armory where these extended order drills might be held, but when the men march that distance they are so tired, after the day's work in civil life, that the schooling is unsatisfactory and even if that were not the case, the time required for marching to and from the armories leaves practically no time for drill.

Again, instruction in pitching tents is highly important, and yet, such drills can not be held without the tents and it is impossible for the men to carry the large conical wall tents out to the grounds where such drills might be given.

TO THE RESCUE.

It remained for Capt. Warren J. Holden, commanding officer of Company A, Seventh Regiment, to suggest the motor truck, and for a two-ton Alco motor truck to prove the practicability of the idea.

Several large tents were loaded into the truck and in addition to these, one half the company, thirty-six men, rode through the city streets and out to Praeger Park where "instruction on varied ground" took the place of the usual drills on the armory floor, which grow monotonous enough to the young citizen soldier.

The motor truck is gaining in popularity with military men and while it is predicted by officers of the regular service that the power-wagon will soon replace the "army mule" in the regular army, there are officers of the National Guard who suggest that the States furnish a motor truck to each city where there are four or more companies of infantry.

There are men in every company of the National Guard who are expert automobile drivers and engineers and the expense would be little or nothing after the original cost of the truck is considered.

The cost of gasoline used, would be met by the companies and taken from the funds of the organizations.

The increased efficiency of the outfits in the service, the greater interest aroused by the extended trips and the various "stunts" which the organization could work up and the saving of draying charges paid by the commands when the equipment is hauled to and from the train, would all be taken into consideration and the price of the motor truck would be a small matter with the various States where the National Guard is in first class condition.

Capt. Holden of the Seventh Regiment has taken up the matter of renting a truck from the local Alco agents with the members of his command and it is expected that Company A, will soon be using a motor truck regularly.

A truck would be of great service to a military organization during the annual maneuvers and it is reported that a number of the members of Company A have requested permission to take a motor truck to the California maneuvers in August, that it may be tried-out in the field.

TACOMA PREPARING FOR BIG AUTO RACES.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA, June 22.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Automobile speed kings from all parts of the world will be in Tacoma next week to work out their racing machines, getting ready for the big events on the South Tacoma prairie, when the Montamara Festo road races are held July 5, 6 and 7.

That there will be four of the greatest races ever held on the Pacific Coast there is no doubt. The entry list has been steadily growing and hardly a day passes but that filled-in blanks arrive.

Big racing cars are already arriving. Yesterday and today they were to be seen tearing around the streets of Tacoma and along the South Tacoma roads in a cloud of smoke and dust. World-famous drivers will race here. "Teddy" Tetzlaff will be here tonight or tomorrow, Caleb Bragg is coming and Red Sebastian and others are due. Other drivers coming include Ralph Mulford, Louis Nikrent, Barney Oldfield and Louis Disbrow. Frank Tauscher of Portland will drive a car. To date entries are as follows:

Fiat, 120-horse power (driver, Teddy Tetzlaff;) Fiat, 120-horse power (driver, Caleb Bragg;) Fiat, ninety-horse power (driver unnamed;) Stutz, sixty-horse power (driver, Earl Cooper;) Stutz, sixty-horse power (driver unnamed;) Simplex, ninety-horse power (driver unnamed;) Simplex, seventy-horse power (driver unnamed;) Mercer, seventy-horse power (driver unnamed;) Mercer, sixty-horse power (driver unnamed;) Schacht, sixty-horse power (driver unnamed;) Case, horse power omitted (drivers unnamed, three to enter;) Cole, thirty-horse power (driver, "Red" Sebastian;) Reo, thirty-horse power (driver unnamed;) Reo, thirty-horse power (driver, Harry Krause;) Ford, twenty-horse power (driver, Frank Bennett.)

Tacoma is creating a five-mile race course that drivers say is the finest new track they have ever seen. Gravel Prairie, just south of the city, made an ideal location. For nearly sixty days it has been undergoing treatment by men, teams and steam rollers under Judge William R. Reinold, a retired wealthy lawyer.

Five twelve-ton steam rollers are putting it in form. Rain two weeks ago and more rain Wednesday have helped the course in being surfaced with hot sand worked in oil. Today Earl Cooper drove over it in his sixty-horse-power Stutz. Experts say the track will become one of the world's fastest.

Herr Gustav Koehler		Director

The famous Willys-Overland band of fifty pieces, uder the leadership of Herr Gustave Koehler, is expected to arrive in Los Angeles at 3.30 o'clock this afternoon, over the Southern Pacific road, and tomorrow evening will give an open air concert of both classical and popular music at Westlake Park.

This band is composed entirely of employees of the big Willys-Overland automobile plant at Toledo, O., and is one of the unique features in the social life that President John Willys has fostered among his army of more than 7000 employees. These musicians have refused, since their organization, to accept any compensation for playing at social functions and because of their attitude in this matter, Willys decided to give them a one-month vacation tour through the South and West. The trip is taking the band to St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, El Paso, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Sacramento, Portland, Salt Lake City, Cheyenne, Colorado Springs, Denver, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Milwaukee and Chicago.

The musicians travel in three private cars. Their instruments are valued at $22,000, which is more than the valuation of the equipment of the United States Marine Band. The members wear white English serge uniforms with gold trappings, and carry a dark blue fatigue suit.

Herr Koehler is a noted orchestra leader and a former colleague of John Phillip Sousa. At the Westlake Park concert tomorrow night the programme will be inclusive of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata" (first movement,) Mozart's "Twelfth Mass," Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody" and gems from Verdi, Puccini and other composers of lighter operas.

In every city so far visited the band has been feted and everywhere it has attracted a great crowd of music lovers. A special representative of the Southern Pacific is escorting the musicians on their outing, to look after their welfare.

Road repairing picnics and "log-rolling" parties are the latest fad in Arizona. On a recent Sunday about twenty members of the Douglas Automobile Club took their machines out on the road east of that city and spent the day with shovels and crowbars, filling chuck holes, grading rough stretches and removing rocks. Members of the Bisbee Automobile Club have spent two Sundays bettering the road between that place and Douglas. The Prescott Automobile Club is planning to have a number of Sunday picnics for the purpose of repairing roads in Yavapai county preparatory to the Arizona Motor Company's sociability run from Phoenix to the Grand Canyon next month.

POET PAYS TRIBUTE TO THE MECHANICIAN.

THE man who defies danger and pilots his car through the hundreds of miles of a great automobile race is called a hero. He is praised by the public and his name is displayed in banner lines all over the world if he succeeds in reaching the tape ahead of the other nervy drivers. And why not?

The worship of the hero is a part of the game; but the man who sits beside the driver through the hours of the grind and takes his share of the danger is overlooked by the praise-giving public.

The mechanician, the armor-bearer to the knight of the speedway, is forgotten and it remains for a member of the local automobile colony to sing the praise of the "man alongside the driver."

(Dedicated to the Stutz mechanicians)

Thousands strain their eyes to see them—
Grimy heroes at the wheel.
Presses rend themselves to pieces
Printing tons on how they feel.
Grand-stand youl and stand on tiptoe
As the knights of speed rip by.
Manicurists, "hello" damsels,
Love-lorn lassies blush and sigh.
Laurel wreaths for all the drivers—
Give them bales and order more,
Shout their praises for deeds of daring
Till your punished lungs are sore.
But when it comes down to cases,
And you ask what real grit is,
While you're dishing out your praises,
Give the mechanician his.

OLD SILENT KNIGHT STILL IN SERVICE.

Two Silent Knight model cars were recently discovered in Reno, Nev., where they have been doing livery service for George E. Porter, in connection with the Golden Hotel, of which Porter is the proprietor. They are several years old and were built by Knight himself in 1906. Now that the Silent Knight cars are fast becoming so popular, these old models are turning up almost every day.

Visitors to Reno have often remarked about these cars, because of their quiet and smooth running over the rough mountain roadways. This is due to the silent sleeve valve with which each are equipped. Porter purchased one of these cars six years ago and after using it for one year ordered another of the same model.

In a letter sent to the Stearns factory from Porter he stated that these cars, so far as the motor is concerned, are practically as good as when new, and even now they are daily called upon to cover miles of the mountain roads in that country. A number of old models are running in Chicago in livery service, as well as in private use, and many have been turned in as part payment on a new Silent Knight.

It is the plan of the local Stearns and Ohio Electric agents, C. F. and Stanley Smith, that at different times during the summer they will each spend considerable time at the factory, where the Stearns Knight cars are built. A large new addition is now being completed at the Stearns plant, while the Stearns company is now operating the Royal Tourist factories as shop No. 2.

It is said that if Toronto, Can., purchases the three motor busses recommended by the Board of Control at a cost of $10,000 each, and puts them into commission, the Toronto Railway will probably attempt to get out an injunction. The company claims a general franchise to the streets, and says that the city has not the legal right to enter into competition in running a passenger service.

Springs That Give Real Comfort

There are so many distinctively better features about the Paige that it is difficult to think of the Paige as a thousand dollar car. So many features that you find elsewhere only in cars selling for $1600 and more—features like the cork insert multiple disc clutch, the seasoned and ground cylinders, the simple and instantly accessible motor with enclosed valves, the unusually large cooling capacity of the radiator supplementing the thermo-syphon cooling system.

But one of the most important of the better Paige features is an exclusive patented Paige feature. This is the Paige spring suspension.

The Paige front springs are the usual semi-elliptic. But in the rear is a very large, very strong, full elliptic spring mounted crosswise on the rear axle housing. A really extraordinary spring suspension that permits riding in positive ease and comfort over any kind of [illegible] eliminates all bounding and bumping, all side-tipping and reduces the danger of skidding to the very minimum. We have never had a single instance of rear axle trouble in the history of the Paige Car. No better proof of the remarkable resilience of these springs could be desired.

This construction is typical of the excellence of Paige construction throughout.

The PAIGE Car

gives power, more horse power for every hundred pounds of car weight, than is given in ninety per cent of all other makes. Speed—more than a Paige owner ever needs. Comfort—roomy bodies, perfect balance, deep upholstery, easy riding springs. Style—most advanced body types and excellence of finish. Economy—20 to 25 miles per gallon of gasoline, light-weight, [illegible] absolute interchangeability of parts.

Model Beverly Torpedo Touring Car, Fully Equipped, $1150

Six snappy, stylish bodies—4 and 5-passenger touring cars, [illegible] sters and raceabout—prices $1125 and $1150. The [illegible] Marquise Coupe, $1600. All built on the one Paige chassis and with the one Paige unit power plant.

Regular equipment of Paige cars includes top, wind shield, 5 black enamel lamps, Prest-O-Lite tank, [illegible] starter, horn, tools, jack and tire repair outfit. [illegible] Demountable Rims (set of 5) on touring car models, including tire irons, $15. Same equipment on roadster [illegible] $12.50.

The boys arranged for the game with Company K, and were to go out to San Bernardino on the train, but William J. La Casse, manager of the Los Angeles retail store of the Studebaker corporation, was interested in the boys who had won a string of thirty-eight games, and offered to personally conduct the tour.

After leaving San Bernardino on Sunday morning, the boys intend to visit the Redlands company, go over to Riverside and call on the members of Company M, stop at Pomona, where Company D is located, and at each of these armories attempt to arrange for a game of indoor baseball, in addition to extending the "glad hand" in behalf of the local organizations.

The boys will carry a letter from Col. W. G. Schrieber to each of the commanding officers of the companies which will be visited on this "glad hand" tour, and it is expected that the trip will create renewed interest in the National Guard all over Southern California.

A delegation of Studebaker cars will meet the party on the road outside each of the towns where the team is to stop, and pilot them to the armory.

ARRANGE FOR GAMES.

While Company A has won games for so long that it seems hard to believe that Company K has any chance, Lieut. Leo Stromee, manager of the San Bernardino nine, wired Herb. Simon Friday night that his boys would give the champions the hardest game they have had since the final match of the 1911 season with the Naval Militia team.

Company K holds the title of champions of the Orange Belt and have played some fast indoor ball during the last few months. They have a pitcher who rivals the great Jerry Abbot and with the advantage of playing on their own armory floor there is a chance that a bitter pill may be handed to the Studebaker tourers.

REMOVING STING FROM DEATH PIT.

BECK IN FLANDERS CHARTING DEATH VALLEY.

Is Posting Guides to Watering Places and After He Is Done With the Work It Will Be Practically Impossible for Traveler to Get Lost in Sandy Waste.

Lou Weston Beck has been heard from. The prospector-philanthropist, after disappearing from the haunts of man, has finally written from Death Valley that his self-appointed task of charting the desert with guides to water is progressing rapidly and that he and "Rufus," his dog, have gone over much of the arid waste in the Chuckawalla Flanders "20."

"The heat has increased my dangers," writes Beck to L. J. Ollier, manager of the local Studebaker branch house. "Now I am forced to seek out any kind of shade offered during the day, and can travel only after the sun has ceased to make this country a regular furnace. Since the roads I must traverse are anything but boulevards, you can imagine that I find the going rather hard."

In order to encompass some of the vast stretches of sand, Beck has been forced at times to lay canvas strips so his car could be sent through. At that the yielding, shifting trail has hardly borne the weight of his small Flanders and he has experienced considerable difficulty in negotiating these stretches where no car has ever been before.

Beck is accomplishing his mission in posting the desert with water guides so it will be next to impossible to be lost, and he is ready to brave any dangers in order that the annual toll of lives be lessened.

Because of the heat the prospector-philanthropist will soon return to Los Angeles. It is his intention to get an early start next spring and complete his task before the summer sun drives him to shelter.

MOTOR TRUCKS USED FOR HAULING ASPHALT.

Many fields of usefulness have been found for the motor truck, but it was for the city of Detroit to be the first to use a motor vehicle in laying the asphalt for the city's streets. During the past week work was being done on a stretch of street, three and two-tenths miles from the asphalt plant. With the aid of a five-ton truck, equipped with a mechanical dumping body, the work was done in much less time than if they had used their dumping wagons drawn with horses.

The adoption of the truck in this work means that it will be only a short time until every city of importance adopts it for the work, as it will increase the efficiency to such a great extent. The motor truck in Detroit made each trip of three and two-tenths miles in exactly fifty-five minutes, carrying five tons of asphalt, which will cover an area of seventy square yards. Eight trips were made each day, delivering a total of 84,000 pounds, or forty-two tons. The truck covered a distance of fifty miles each day.

In comparing the work of the truck with that of horse-drawn vehicles it will be seen that it is doing the work of five teams. Each team could only make three trips a day and deliver only nine tons of asphalt. It is a saving of labor as well as time. Each load, as it leaves the plant, is protected by a canvas covering, which keeps in the heat and the quick delivery and mechanical dumping saves reheating and rehandling. It is figured that this work can be done in one-fifth of the time with the use of the mechanically-operated motor trucks.

RICH PRIZES FOR BIG IMPERIAL VALLEY RACE.

THE winner of the Imperial Valley road race which is to be run off July 4, will receive more money than Teddy Tetzlaff did for winning the Santa Monica event.

A purse of $5000 has been subscribed, to be divided among the first four men to pilot their cars across the finish line. The winner is to receive 65 per cent.; second man, twenty; third, ten; and fourth, five.

In addition to these cash prizes, an optional pool has been opened to the drivers themselves. Each man will be allowed to place $250 on himself and the first and second place men will take the purse on an eighty and twenty basis.

Only residents of Imperial Valley will be allowed to enter the race and no car that has not been in that section for a certain length of time previous to the grind, will be allowed on the course.

Had this rule not been made at the outset, some of the fast professionals with their own cars would have invaded the valley and robbed the home talent of both honor and coin, but as it is, the rivalry is keen and the interest is centered in the valley.

The ruling of the Imperial Valley Automobile Association to the effect that the cars driven in the race were to be owned by residents of the valley, prevented the drivers and enthusiastic automobile men from importing cars, especially for the race, which would leave the valley after the event had been run off.

The course is one of the hardest to be found in the country and is claimed by some, to be second only to that of the Phoenix road race. There are 105 bridges and culverts in each lap of the course and the drivers will make three laps during the race.

There are also thirty-seven turns to each lap and nine miles of sand to be encountered on every circuit; but the drivers of that section are all confident and there are seventeen entries in at this early date.

The start and finish will take place in the town of Brawley, as that town contributed the largest amount to the purse.

El Centro also wanted the start and finish of the race, but its donation fell short. The toher towns, Imperial, Holtville and Calexico, also contributed large amounts.

William Rambeau and Dick Gochenouer, both of Holtville, came to Los Angeles Thursday with Walter Hawk, well known to the followers of athletics in this section as the greatest end Los Angeles High School ever had, to get the Moon roadster, which Gochenouer will drive in the race.

The trip into the city was made in Hawk's Chalmers "30" in twelve hours. The party stated that the roads were in very good condition to a point 100 miles out of San Diego. Devil's Canyon was also reported to be in poor condition.

LOCAL LOZIER BRANCH COMPANY'S MOST ACTIVE

C. A. Emise, sales manager of the Lozier Motor Company has returned to the factory at Detroit after having completed business affairs in Kansas City, where he has been for a few weeks. Arrangements were completed with E. P. Moriarity and Company, who for seven years has been representing the Packard Company in Kansas City, for the sale of Lozier cars in that territory. Moriarity is an old bicycle man, having been connected with the Lozier Company when they were manufacturing the Cleveland bicycle.

Emise says that the type 72, Lozier, 1912 model, is being especially well received. Branch houses and agents of the company report a good record following the recent announcement of the Type 72. The left-hand drive and new automatic-level oiling system are big points in the selling campaign.

From Sales Manager Emise at the factory, comes word that Los Angeles is the most active in having disposed of over $40,000 worth of cars within a week after receiving its first consignment. After this city, comes Seattle, which has made a record in its selling campaign. There is a great increase in the demand for the higher-priced cars in all the leading cities of the Pacific Coast.

"In the East and through the central States, the high-powered cars are always in demand," said Emise, in telling how pleased the factory representatives are with the reception of the 1912 model.

"The best evidence of how business stands with us is the many changes we are always making to increase the scope of our sales organization. The Chicago and Cleveland branches have recently moved into new homes and the Boston branch house, will soon be in a fine new building. The Seattle representatives are spending $80,000 for a new salesroom and service department, and in Portland, they are moving into more commodious quarters. With our increased facilities in both our manufacturing and sales departments, we are looking forward to the biggest year in the history of our company."

Plans are being made in Louisville, Ky., for the holding of an automobile show limited to electric vehicles only. The exact date has not been fixed as yet, but will probably be in the middle of October.

BLUEJACKETS PULL STUNT.

the success of the test of the motor car's ability and Lieutenant-Commander Woodbine stated that he saw no reason why the gun could not have been fired from the tonneau, as it rested solid and was held as fast as if it had been built to ride there.

"The automobile will be an important factor in the wars of the future, if there are wars in the future," said Mr. Woodbine, "and I see no reason why the equipment of every battleship with a crew sufficiently large, will not include an automobile for use on shore in the near future. The experiment, which has been so successful, has shown to a certain extent the possibilities of the motor car in modern warfare."

The other officers of the naval militia expressed themselves as favorably impressed with the performance of the Oldsmobile and the enlisted men gave three lusty cheers for the "Limited," "Autocrat," and "Defender," with a "tiger" for "Cap" Ryus.

With the hundreds of pounds of metallic equipment carried, there was not a scratch on the cars at the end of the tour, and all that was used as packing was a canvas tarpaulin placed over the seats and woodwork of the tonneau.

In the words of Capt. Ryus, this was the most remarkable auto feat staged for many years and Maj. Charles F. Hutchinson, Capt. Clarence H. Hunt, Lieut. Bert M. Muzzy and James L. Laney agreed that the time was near at hand when the army would have an auto corps.

A military motor car has been patented by the Krupp Company of Essen Germany, having been designed to carry a quick-firing gun for use in military operations. The platform is constructed along special lines. The frame of the automobile is so arranged as to accommodate a pivot-stand, which is firmly attached. Rotatably mounted in the pivot-stand is a fork-shaped upper carriage, movable by means of a verticle pivot pin and ball bearings. The gun platform is equipped with a shield.

According to the official report of the automobile license bureau at Peoria, Ill., the sales of automobiles in the State has increased rapidly since last year, when the registration law went into effect. There are at present more than 38,000 registered motor cars on the roads of Illinois, several thousand of which are new cars registered for the first time. The first four months of this year already have surpassed last year's registration.

AUTO SPRINTS AT SANTA ANA.

Ford and E. M. F. to Hook Up This Afternoon.

Anaheim and Olinda Rivals Will Be at Wheels.

Twenty-five-Mile Course; Big Stake for Winner.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

SANTA ANA, June 22.—With a little matter of $2000 in real money up, to be awarded to the winner, an E. M. F. roadster and a Ford racing machine will meet on the mile track at Santa Ana Sunday afternoon in one of the most widely heralded automobile match races ever held here.

Not only are the owners of the cars sufficiently interested to wager a thousand apiece on their respective speed wagons, but their friends have also trailed in, and lots of coin will change hands when the race is over.

The E. M. F.-Ford battle is the result of long-continued rivalry. Time after time, the machines have met in short road brushes, but always something or other happened to make the affair a fluke. Finally the motorists got together and showed their interest by putting real money in the hands of mutual friends, and the whole pot will be delivered to the owner of the car first around the twenty-five-mile circuit.

G. T. Ingram of Anaheim, well-known in this region as a racing driver, will handle the wheel of the Ford. Bert Shindelbecker, the pride of Olinda, will do like duties for the E. M. F.

SPECIAL EVENTS.

In addition to the match race, Santa Ana motorists have arranged a card of special events which would do credit to a regularly organized meet. The speed bug has infected the entire countryside, and as a result, good races can be looked for. Informal entries have been made by R. W. Jackson and his Colby; Bastanchury and a Mercer; and C. E. Newcombe and his Maxwell. In addition, Harry Braden of Anaheim has promised to have his fast Studebaker-Flanders racer on the track and compete with large and small. It is possible that a Stutz, Stoddard-Dayton and Cutting will also be added to the list.

Several parties of Los Angeles motorists have arranged to tour down to the scene of action, and each car in the match race will have plenty of adherents.

UP MT. WASHINGTON IN AN OHIO ELECTRIC.

The first owner of an electric car to drive his machine to the top of Lookout Mountain was ex-Senator F. L. Finn, who owns an Ohio Victoria. He recently put the machine through this stunt and when he arrived at the top of the steep grade said he could do the same trick over again without a recharge. Senator Finn puts his electric to a great many uses, for which they are not intended, but the little electric always comes out victorious.

Touring is one of the Senator's hobbies and he uses the Ohio Electric for driving through Southern California. They can be run ninety miles on one charge and Finn says they are more satisfactory for his purpose than a gas car. An average speed of twenty-five miles an hour may be obtained from these machines if desired.

GOODYEARS EXPAND.

Output of Tire Products Increasing Daily and More Equipment Must Be Added.

C. W. Martin, Jr., sales manager of the motor truck tire department of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, says that the week ending May 15 was a record breaker for their department. For the six working days, 146,114 pounds of solid tires were manufactured, and 24,053 pneumatic casings and 28,980 inner tubes.

"Orders have been placed already," says Martin, "for additional equipment for the manufacture of all types of tires. The motor truck business is increasing wonderfully, and the tire output is an excellent barometer of the coming of the truck into commercial life, and the passing of the horse. A complete wheel shop will be installed in all the important branches of the company, which will give truck owners every facility to make quick changes. We have recently opened a shop at Philadelphia, which has proved a great success."

A motor bus line between Nashville, Ind., and Columbus, Ind., has been established.

GLIDDEN TOUR TO THE GULF.

WILL COVER FIFTEEN HUNDRED BEGINNING AT DETROIT.

Classic Event Will Be Held in October—Path-finding Party Soon to Cover Proposed Course—Itinerary North of Memphis Not as Yet Completed—Committee at Work.

The 1912 A.A.A. National Reliability Tour, for the Glidden, Anderson and A.A.A. trophies, will be over the route from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, and will cover a distance of 1500 miles.

Part of the route will be from Memphis to New Orleans, but the itinerary of the northern section has, as yet, not been decided upon. There is a special committee in charge, to decide these questions, which includes Col. Frank M. Joyce of Minneapolis, Lewis R. Speare of Boston, John A. Wilson of Franklin, Pa., W. E. Metzger of Detroit and W. E. Meyer of Des Moines.

J. A. Wilson, one of the members, represented the committee in various cities, including Detroit and Indianapolis, and the selection of the greatest city in the world, from the automobile manufacturing standpoint, came about through the combined activities of the Wolverine Automobile Club, Chamber of Commerce and the Dealers' Association. A. W. Porter, W. E. Metzger and F. E. Spooner also played a prominent part in the decision and although Detroit was given the honor it is still possible that Indianapolis, as an important city in automobile manufacturing, will serve as a night stop for the immense cavalcade.

All the details of the tour are not completed. Robert P. Hooper, president of the American Automobile Association, has asked Dr. C. E. Dutton of Minneapolis to serve as vice-chairman of the Touring Information Board, which will have charge of the tour this year. Dutton is thoroughly experienced in touring competitions and is president of the Minnesota State Automobile Association.

The date of the tour has not been decided, but early in October seems to be the most peferred date. It is thought that some time within the next few weeks a path-finding party will start out to select the best route to be covered on the "Lakes to the Gulf" tour. It will be added to the national routes, which the A.A.A. Touring Bureau is gradually extending in its covering of the entire country.

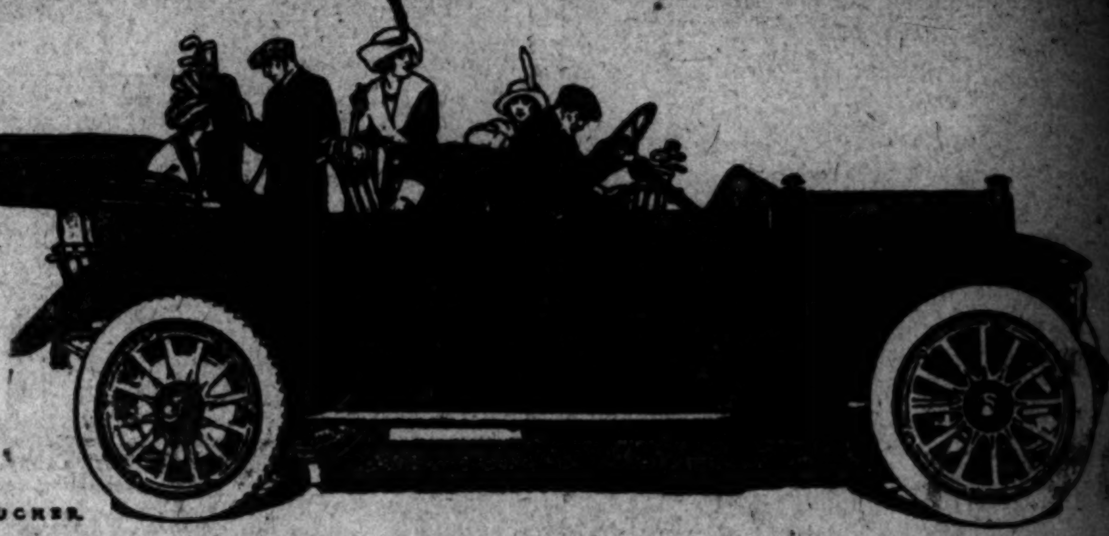
KNIGHT Columbia MOTOR



EVERYBODY IS SEEKING IT NOW!

EIGHT years ago the Knight motor went begging in America.

When Daimler took it up in England it performed so wonderfully in tests that there was a general demand for license privileges.

Licenses to use it were granted to the leading manufacturer in the several foreign countries.

Only four manufacturers are privileged to use it in the United States.

Other designers are eagerly seeking a means of doing what the Knight motor does. Engineers declare that ultimately every motor must have positively-driven valves which cannot fail to move when it comes their turn to move.

It is this quality in the Knight motor which enables it to produce more power out of a given cylinder volume than a poppet-valve motor can produce.

It is this quality which makes the motor more flexible and more durable.

It is this quality which enables it to still work silently after years of use.

Before the Columbia Knight was offered to the public Charles Y. Knight himself approved every detail of its design.

On the Quiet.

SOLDIER AUTOIST TAKES CHICKEN BY STEALTH.

MAJ. F. P. BURNHAM, the famous South African British soldier, now living in Pasadena, is an enthusiastic owner of a Stearns-Knight motor car. The major tells a good story on the quietness of his car, which he drives himself.

It seems that the soldier automobile enthusiast was driving rapidly along one of Southern California's good country roads and ran over a chicken which was feeding in the middle of the highway, without harming it in the least.

The car ran so silently that the chicken failed to hear it coming and did not even look up when the wheels passed on either side, and the big automobile swept over its head.

What is reported to be one of the most attractive and handsomely-finished cars seen on "Gasoline Row" during the past few months is the Sterns-Knight limousine, one of the models being exhibited by Smith Bros., Southern California agents for the Stearns-Knight line of cars.

The body of the limousine is of the half foredoor type, and the interior is of gray whipcord. The fittings are silver mounted and there is every kind of attachment from the electric lights throughout to a cigar-lighter. There has been nothing spared in the attempt to make the limousine complete in the minutest detail.

Smith Bros. are now able to make a complete display of the full line of Stearns-Knight models. This is the first time during the season that a limousine, touring car and roadster have been on the floor at the same time.

WORM GEAR TRUCK.

Pierce-Arrow Adopts Feature Which Has Been Thoroughly Tested by English Makers.

An exceptional record which is made each week by a Pierce-Arrow, worm-driven motor truck is receiving considerable comment among the trade men in Detroit. This truck gives twenty-one hours' service every week day and twelve hours on Sunday. This is an average of 138 hours out of the 168 hours in the week. The truck is the property of the Tower's Wayne County Creamery Company. At 3 o'clock each morning the machine leaves the creamery and distributes milk to stores and factory dining-rooms on the east side of Detroit.

At 1 o'clock, when this work is finished, the crew is changed and they begin a different line of work. Two trips are made to railway stations and return with five tons of milk, the truck being of five-ton capacity. The new driver also makes two trips to the north end branch of the company with a full load of milk, and must return with empty bottles. A drive is made to other branches and at the end of the day's work the car has covered over fifty miles in its routine. The motor vehicle, since purchased, has replaced several horse-drawn wagons.

Totals of 58,000 and 124,000 miles are recorded for two worm gears used in the final driving mechanism of two motor trucks in England. This type of final drive was not formally introduced in this country until the Pierce-Arrow Company announced its adoption for the five-ton truck early in 1911. For this reason no American trucks can show a mileage such as these used in England, although competent engineers believe that there is nothing in the American service that should prove a bar to similar records being made.

The truck that has 58,000 miles to its credit is used by a prominent firm of biscuit manufacturers, while the one credited with 124,000 miles is owned by a London omnibus company. It is not an unusual thing for the Pierce Arrow Company to get reports of its trucks that have been in use for a year which have mileages of 10,000 miles to their credit. The feature of the worm gear, according to the manufacturers who have adopted its use, is that no matter how long it may run, its efficiency remains the same as when it was new, until such a time as it is completely worn out.

E.M.F. STANDS GAFF IN ROUGH COUNTRY.

After traveling more than 40,000 miles through the Texas country a car belonging to C. F. Blumberg, and known as the "Texas Long Horn E. M.F. '30'" is now making a run from Seguin, Tex., to Detroit, where it will receive the first thorough overhauling given it in its three years of existence.

The car was the first of its make shipped to that part of the Southwest and belongs to the original batch of red cars which were sent out by the Studebaker corporation as the first of the E.M.F. "30" machines.

With Blumberg on the trip, are his two sons, Otto and Charlie. They are as enthusiastic as the father about making the 2000 miles with the car and believe that when it receives the factory overhauling, it will be good for 40,000 additional miles. This is more of a vacation trip to the three Texans than for business. They will take a route which leads through Dallas, Oklahoma City, Kansas City and Chicago, and thence on to the Studebaker corporation's factory, at Detroit.

No-Rim-Cut Tires
10% Oversize
Equip One-Third the Cars

One-third of all new cars going out this year are equipped with Goodyear tires.

About one-third of all motor car owners have now adopted these tires.

And one-third of all cars at this year's Shows had Goodyear tire equipment.

Such is the present status of these wonderful tires. And the demand has doubled in the past six months.

Tire Upkeep Cut in Two

A million and a quarter of these premier tires have now gone into use. They have been tested out on some 200,000 cars.

They were tested on our claim that No-Rim-Cut tires cut the average tire bills in two. And the present demand proves they did it.

No-Rim-Cut tires now far outsell any other tire in the world. Our output now is nearly 100,000 tires monthly.

How They Do It

No-Rim-Cut tires end rim-cutting forever. And rim-cutting occurs on 23 per cent of all the old-type tires.

That is proved by statistics covering many thousands of ruined clincher tires.

In addition to that, No-Rim-Cut tires are 10 per cent over the rated size. And 10 per cent oversize, under average conditions, adds [illegible] per cent to the tire mileage.

So these patent tires [illegible] cent, plus 25 per cent, on the average.

LOCAL MOTOR RUMBLES
BY AL. G. WADDELL.

B. H. Dyer of the W. J. Burt Company, has completed the first stage of an extended tour through the East in his Auburn "thirty-five." He first visited the Auburn factory at Auburn, Ind., then went to New York, where he stopped for a time. Leaving the "big city," Dyer went to Boston and later to Fairfield, Me., where he is now visiting. So far the tourer has experienced no trouble and has enjoyed every mile of the journey. From Fairfield, Dyer will motor down the Atlantic Coast line to Florida and then back to New York City, from where he expects to start on the return to Los Angeles, over the route being covered by The Times Pilot Car which is organizing the National Highway.

Robert Warren Wood, one of the most popular automobile men in this section, has been added to the staff of the Bekins-Speers Motor Company. The hustling young salesman states that he is delighted with the prospects for the coming season and expects to create a sensation with the 1913 Lozier models, which are arriving in attractive quantities every day or so.

"I have always liked the Lozier," said the athletic young man, "and I really enjoy selling this wonderful car. It has always been my ambition to be associated with the Lozier people, and my present location with Bekins-Speers has come only after much deliberation on their part.

T. C. Whitcomb, representative of the Premier factory, located at Indianapolis, is in the city, making his headquarters at the local Premier garage. The eastern man likes Los Angeles and Southern California very much and states that he will not leave till duty calls and calls with a strong voice.

H. G. Salisbury, sales manager for the Pathfinder Motor Car Company, was a busy man last week with J. N. Abeel in San Francisco visiting the branch in the northern city. But he delivered the goods, or rather—he delivered all the cars that came in and took orders for three more.

Robert Armstrong of No. 519 West Seventh street, is on his way to San Francisco in his Auburn "forty." After a short stay in the big city on the bay, he will continue on to Chicago.

J. J. Canavan is in New York City on business and upon his return will make an announcement regarding the business of the Vance-Canavan Company, which will be of general interest to the automobile public.

It is rumored that Oscar Werner will hold a reception at his new garage on "The Row" which will be in the nature of a grand opening of the Simplex home. The date is not known, but it is expected that it will be some time during the coming week.

Eddie Bolz, formerly a demonstrator for the Western Motor Car Company, is now with the Pathfinder as a demonstrator and salesman.

Warren Vance has been called to San Francisco on a business trip in connection with his Wyoming ranch. It is expected that he will be able to return at the end of a week, but it is barely possible that it will be necessary for him to go East.

W. E. Ferguson, well known in automobile circles as "Fergie," the old Apperson man, who rode with Harris Hanshue in his great races of the olden days, is cutting the butter in great style in his new berth, that of foreman of the Moreland motor-truck factory in this city.

H. G. Salisbury has signed up a big-league shop foreman for the Pathfinder camp in the person of Charles Parsons, a former technical man for the Packard people, who was educated in the ways and means of automobiles at the Packard factory.

Smith Bros. received a telegram last week which stated that the Benz company had lost its suit in Germany against the Knight patent.

W. B. Wellman of San Francisco is now touring Europe in a 1912 Cadillac. Wellman took delivery of his car at Boston and immediately went abroad.

Don Lee is in receipt of a letter from Lucerne, praising the car highly. "I have run 1700 miles so far," wrote Wellman, "and have not had so much as a puncture. From Naples to Lucerne the road is bad and covered with sharp rocks. The self-starter has never failed since we started on the trip."

George Bentel of the Coleman & Bentel Co. returned last week from San Francisco, where he went to attend the formal opening of the new Simplex and Mercer salesroom.

Bentel controls the Pacific Coast, with the exception of Southern California, for the two lines.

The new place in San Francisco is situated at Van Ness and Sutter streets. Bentel has sufficient room to exhibit twenty cars in his salesroom and has also a fully-equipped shop and garage. This is one of the best locations in San Francisco, and Bentel is now well able to take care of high-class trade. He is having great success with the Simplex, and has the Mercer well introduced.

W. H. Halliwell, local Warner autometer agent, expects to leave next week to officiate as timer in the Tacoma road race. Halliwell also expects that C. A. Warner, the inventor of the Warner automatic timing device, will be in Tacoma. After the big race in the north, Halliwell will leave for his annual summer trip to the eastern factories. He will also take advantage of the northern trip to visit the branches of the Halliwell company in San Francisco, Seattle and Portland. C. E. Halliwell will remain in Los Angeles and run this end of the business.

Glad Hand.

PASEAR PILOT PARTY PLEASED.

Inyo Good Roads Boosters Having Big Time.

New Scenic Route Causes Much Enthusiasm.

Tourers Confident State Will Indorse Project.

With enthusiastic greetings extended them all along the line, the Pasear Pathfinders in their four E.M.F. touring cars have found the Southland a veritable hotbed of good roads boosters, and their idea of a wonderful tour within the limits of California nearer to realization than was expected in the short time the public has been acquainted with its merits.

San Diego was the last to extend the glad hand to the "loiterers" and during the past week the southern motorists have been climbing over each other in their efforts to show their guests a royal time. The slogan of the Pasear, "The highway with a thousand byways—each byway with a thousand wonders," has been proved a reality, and the many byways of San Diego have poured their wonders forth for inspection.

When they leave Los Angeles tomorrow or Tuesday the Pasear members will go straight out into the desert on their way to Inyo county and the Owens River territory. At Mojave they will be joined by State Engineer McClure and Carl Westerfeld, official representative of Gov. Johnson, as well as other State officials, who accompanied the tourists a short distance out of San Francisco and then turned back because of duty's call.

The Pasear has awakened enthusiasm everywhere it has touched, and immediate steps will be taken to make it a reality long before the exposition in 1915. Such a noted good roads enthusiast as A. G. Batchelder, chairman of the A.A.A. Executive Committee, has indorse the project, and official action by the State is expected at once.

Over half of the Pasear tour has been covered, and the pathfinders have gone through with a perfect score. The four E.M.F. machines, donated for the tour by the San Francisco branch of the Studebaker corporation, have performed their work in faultless style, and not a mechanical mishap has occurred to mar the pleasure of the run.

BIG REGATTA NEXT SATURDAY

Crack Crews to Compete on Picturesque Hudson.

Stanford Handicapped by Lack of Coaching.

Cornell, as Usual, Will Put Strong Crew in Water.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

POUGHKEEPSIE, June 17.—The training of over one hundred oarsmen for the intercollegiate regatta to be held over this course a week from Saturday, got under full swing this week. All the preliminary practise of the crews prior to this time is hardly as important as the work that is cut out for the squads within the next week when they develop in most instances from one and two-mile crews into sturdy four-mile eights. It is these last days that are going to shape out the winning crew, a fact which the coaches are now urging upon their men in an endeavor to get from them their keenest efforts.

In a recent conversation with Coach Courtney he emphasized the importance of this period in the developing of the college eights by saying that he did not know what kind of a four-mile eight he had. "There is no doubt that the Cornell Varsity is a top-notch two-mile crew, else they could not have beaten Harvard. But it's the next two weeks that's going to show me what kind of a four-mile eight I have. That's when the watches are set on the lads and when they are pushed to their utmost capacity."

Early in the week the six colleges that are to be represented in the regatta will be on the Hudson. Columbia, Cornell and Stanford University were the first arrivals, but Pennsylvania has not been losing any time at its new training quarters, while Ten Eyck and Vail have been pushing the Syracuse and Wisconsin lads on their local waters. But all the coaches realize that for the regatta the Hudson is the one place for the final training, and all are eager to tackle the task of rounding out their respective crews.

COLUMBIA GETS JUMP.

Columbia seems to have a shade the better over the other crews in point of training on the regatta course. Their additional week here on the Hudson, however, is in part balanced by the lack of practice on the course at Edgewater, where throughout most of the spring they ran into very rough water, which made boating in the shells impossible. Since coming to their quarters at Krum Elbow Jim Rice has sent the crews out twice a day for long, stiff rows, covering in that time over one hundred miles.

As the varsity is working now, there is not a prettier eight on the river. Since the shift in the starboard side the weight in the blue and white boat is evenly distributed and there is not a sign of a break in the swing of the oarsmen. The finishing touches have yet to be added and the training for the four-mile gruel of race day is yet to be experienced. The latter will be taken care of this coming week, while the racing starts and the last touches will be left to the few days just preceding the regatta. At the end of this time the New Yorkers will have a combination that every other coach on the river will watch out for.

One of the noticeable things in the Columbia boat this year is the drive of the legs and the manner in which the men get their backs on the stroke from the moment the oar takes the water to the finish. There is not a sign of a jerk or a pull at the finish. The pull is there throughout the stroke. Prior to the race last year the remark was made that it did not look as though the Columbia eight had the strength to go the four miles, a prediction that proved its truth. But it would be hard to find justification for such a statement this year. Every man in the shell seems to have a reserve strength that would take him to the bitter end without a wabble, and they are all fighters. The stern four, Bissell at No. 4, and Ruprecht, are veterans, although the latter has never been in a four-mile race, while Hadsell and Rothwell were two of the strongest men on last season's victorious freshman eight.

CORNELL STRONG.

As usual, the veteran Coach Courtney has brought another strong Cornell crew to the Hudson to compete in the Varsity race, but it still has a lot to accomplish in the next week. The losing of Bowen as stroke is a power gone from the boat which is noticeable, but in spite of this fact the Ithaca combination will be a hard one to beat.

It is probable that there will be at least a half dozen time trials for the Ithaca varsity before they are allowed to let up in the slightest, and in that time they will be shown up to the eagle eye of their coach. At present he is none too confident, but his spirits will rise if his proteges succeed, as he hopes they will, within the short time left to them.

The Cornell freshmen are a hardier looking lot than their crew last year, and they are sure to make a big bid to take back the honors that the class of 1914 lost to Columbia last June. But they, too, will find themselves matched against a strong set of youngsters in the Columbia first-year octet. Earlier in the season the Blue and White freshmen did not measure up to expectations, but even Coach Rice has been surprised in the improvement that they have made within the past two weeks, and is now ready to believe them capable of greater things after he gets through with them next week.

In the varsity eight that pulled in today from Syracuse, Coach "Ed" Ten Eyck has a far different set of oarsmen from those that trailed in in last place in last year's varsity eight race. They have been able to get in only one short limbering up paddle on the Hudson so far, but their showing against the Annapolis eight has made them loom up in more threatening proportions. Coach Courtney has spoken of them as being in the first class this year, and their work through the next week will be closely watched by the followers of the sport. Last year the unsettled condition of rowing at the Salt City University, when it was thought that the sport would be entirely abolished, left its mark on the work of the sweepswingers. But this year Coach Ten Eyck has had a much more successful season and he is counting on big things from his men.

Another eight that will attract more attention than last year is the Wisconsin octet. With all kinds of hard luck, the Badgers went through their first year at Poughkeepsie under Coach Vail with phenomenal success, for they beat out Syracuse and gave the Pennsylvania eight a battle, and that with a veteran out of the shell on account of boils and a green freshman taking his place. This season they are not likely to encounter such adverse conditions, and they have a far better eight even than in former seasons. Coach Vail will be more familiar with the course and with his men, and this, too, will count in the results that will be obtained. The Madison lads are here to win if hard work will bring in the coveted honors.

PLUCKY STANFORD.

After coming 3000 miles to compete in the regatta, the plucky Stanford eight has run up against the proposition of training without any shell. Their boat, which was ordered for the race, is delayed in England, and may not even get here in time to be used on June 29. While waiting for a borrowed shell, the westerners have had to use the Cornell freshman shell, which they use either just before or after the Ithaca youngsters are ready to row. But in spite of this handicap the Californians are making good, and, with as stalwart a looking eight as any on the river, will fight hard within the next week to make up time lost now.

The Stanford varsity is further handicapped by being without the services of a coach or any one about the boathouse to help them rig their boats or do any of the hundred and one odd things that keep Coach Courtney or Rice with a couple of experienced helpers busy about the boats from early morning until late evening. To the easterner who is thoroughly accustomed to the professional coach or at least a graduate, who is supplied with a launch with which to follow the crews, this deficiency would seem utterly disastrous. But Capt. Seward, who rows at No. 7 in the shell and is the recognized coach and general leader, is not a bit dismayed, nor are those under him, and they modestly go about their business, plugging along like bulldogs. California may well be proud of the ten men that they have sent East.

The Pennsylvania navy has been lying low in the past two weeks on the Delaware after its crushing defeat at the hands of the Annapolis, Princeton and Columbia crews. But no one understands the training of crews on the Hudson better than the veteran oarsman Ellis Ward, the Pennsylvania coach, and the eight that represents the Philadelphians each year on the Hudson is always a far different boat from that of early season form. Ward has a husky set of men in the varsity, and he will not let them loaf very much when he gets them to Poughkeepsie and sets the watch on them.

Seward, Patridge, Coxswain Guerena, kneeling. Seward, Watkins and Olmstead are Los Angeles men. In going to Poughkeepsie the Stanford crew made the longest trip to start in a 'varsity race in the history of college rowing in the United States. Wisconsin is quite left in the shade.

Too Much Opposition.

NO DECISION BOUTS HAVE LITTLE CHANCE.

BY JEFF THOMPSON.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, June 3.—It is a safe prediction that there will be no decisions given in boxing matches in this city. The Boxing Commission is dead set against it. It has the power in the matter and will exercise it. In this public sentiment is behind the commission. Outside a very few the boxing promoters and club managers are against decisions, not because they object per se to having the winner declared, but because they realize that it means the destruction of the sport under the protection of the law. The fact cannot be blinked at that boxing is still with us on sufferance. The action of the commission in straightening out and keeping straight the clubs and the fighters has done much to reconcile public sentiment, but just as soon as the professional gambling element is permitted to get a foothold, and it would come in with official decisions given—just so soon would there be charges of fixed fights and crooked work and the Frawley law would go into the discard at the next session of the Legislature.

In the minds of the people professional gambling and crookedness are pretty nearly synonymous, and in this day and generation neither will be tolerated so far as the law is concerned.

Men like Billy Gibson, the McMahons, Jim Buckley and other promoters, know this and are opposed to decisions.

It really begins to look as though Jack Johnson and Jim Flynn are to fight at Las Vegas on the Fourth of July. There are some stories current about this fight which made it look questionable. For instance a letter was received here the other day from Dan McKettrick, who is in Paris, in which it was stated that Hackenschmidt, the Russian Lion, who goes under the management of Jack Curley, the promoter of the fight and manager of Flynn, is betting all sorts of money on the Pueblo fireman, and claims to have been tipped off by Curley to bet his shirt. Of course, this may or may not be true. In the fighting crowd abroad as well as here, you can hear all sorts of stories. If it is it adds to the mystery of the fight. On form Flynn should not be better than a 5 to 1 shot. It is not like he was a comparatively new man, with whose possibilities we are unacquainted. As a matter of fact he has been fighting a long time and his best is not good enough for Johnson very considerably off.

The fight is going to cost Curley a tidy bit of money outside the $30,000 to Johnson. If the feeling in regard to the fight is the same throughout the country as it is here, it is hard to see where the gate receipts are coming from which will bring Curley out whole.

Of course, if Flynn should win it would be different. The pictures then would be worth a fortune and having a champion under his wing would be worth another.

Curley may have inside information that Johnson has gone away off since he fought Jeffries and is banking on this, but if Jack is half the man he was at Reno there should be nothing to it. However, we'll know all about it in a few weeks, now.

"It is to laugh when we hear of all these 'one-round,' 'knock-out,' 'battling' fighters," remarked an old sport the other day. "It's pretty much all name with these lads. In the old days there was not so many men in the ring with terrifying nick-names, but there was more real fighting in a day than there is in a week now.

"Jack Dempsey or Jack McAuliffe could go through the present bunch of lightweights like cows through a clover patch, but nobody ever called Dempsey 'One-round' Dempsey, and we never heard of 'Knock-out' Jack McAuliffe. It's so all along the line. When you begin to call one of these boys by some terrible war name it looks to me like it handicaps him. He is so busy living up to his name that he can't fight."

Wonder if Ad Wolgast and Packey McFarland ever will get another. They always are just about to hitch up but they don't. If there are any two boys in the country who ought to fight, these are the two. I know of no battle which would draw a bigger crowd nor one the result of which would be more uncertain. I'm frank to say I'm at a loss on which of them to string. So are a majority of fight fans and for that reason, everybody would want to see the fight.

One of the regulars at boxing shows here is John A. Drake, who once helped to carry $600,000 away from the bookmakers in England. Drake and his trainer, Enoch Wishard, pulled off the memorable coup with Royal Flush III. on the other side. Several years ago Drake beat seven consecutive races at Gravesend and won $135,000 in a day. The last winner was a horse named Gen. Haley, and just before he went to the post Wishard told Drake that he was afraid the general wouldn't go. Drake therefore cleaned up less than $30,000 on the race, after which he scored Wishard for his lack of confidence. "I ought to have won $300,000 on the day," he said, "instead of a measly $135,000."

Billy Gibson is the right man in the right place at the head of the Garden Athletic Club. Gibson is one of the most popular boxing promoters that New York has had in a long while. For years he has managed the Fairmont Athletic Club. He is well thought of by fighters and managers alike. When Gibson makes a match it rarely fails to prove a good card. As he has several matches under consideration it is certain that a number of bouts between prominent boxers will be arranged by him. With Wolgast, McFarland, Richie, Matt Wells and Jack Redmond all ready to talk business, there is every prospect of something good breaking loose shortly in the lightweight division.

Gibson will not sever his relationship with the Fairmont A. C. That club, which for several weeks past has been holding Saturday night bouts, will continue to do so in the future. As the Fairmont A. C. and the Garden A.C. are separated by about six miles, the patronage of the two clubs will nt suffer by running two shows on the same night.

With Gibson in absolute charge of the bouts at the Garden, the question of referee will be settled at once and for all. Billy Joh, for many years the third man in the ring at all bouts in the Fairmont Club, will fill the position at the Garden. The selection of Joh not only will be popular with fistic fans, but will stop future wrangling among boxers who sign at the big club.

The White brothers of Chicago, Jack and Charlie, both featherweights, have been making remarkable strides in the fistic game of late. For a time these boys were considered just mediocre fighters around Chicago, but of late they have bounded into popularity with their splendid contests agains boys of high class. Jack has passed a bit beyond the 122-pound limit, and is now better off at 126 than the real featherweight limit, while Charlie is a legitimate feather. Jack made his name and fortune when he defeated Frankie Conley so decisively at Los Angeles, while Charlie jumped right into the limelight the other night when he whipped Owen Moran, the British 128-pounder, whom many thought was a coming champion, and who gave Ad Wolgast a hard fight last fall. Charlie is now after a battle with Johnny Kilbane for the featherweight championship of America, and Jack is after Jose Rivers, the California Mexican, who is matched to meet Wolgast for the title July 4, at Los Angeles.

BATTERS IN EAST ARE HITTING AT FIRST BALL.

Perhaps the most noticeable feature of the baseball tactics in the East this year is the tendency to hit at the first ball pitched. Ordinarily that is considered a boob trick, and managers suspend bright young men who try it; but this year a change has come over the spirit of their dreams. In Philadelphia and Boston it was especially noticeable, and in New York it is back again. St. Louis has kept pace with the procession, and the boys are taking a whack at the first ball, if it looks good, and there are men on bases.

While the "don't hit the first ball pitched" idea has been rampant among regular baseballists for a long time, lay observers have been prone to question its wisdom. Their doubts were sustained last year at the world's series, when fully seven out of ten of the men who went to the plate tried to hit the first ball, knowing that the orthodox rule was for the pitcher to slam it straight over the plate and get one on the batter. That policy proved surprisingly successful for both teams, and is being followed this year, with the result that another tradition of baseball has been upset.

The idea in not hitting at the first ball is to try out the twirler and make him work as much as possible, but when a pitcher is going good and shows no signs of exploding it has always struck many fans as a fool scheme to let him get a strike on the batter and thereby lose a chance to take a swing at an easy proposition.

Swimming instructor of the

ONE of the main points for the beginner is to gain confidence in himself, and not be afraid of the water. The breast stroke is selected as the first one for beginners, because it is the easiest to master, and is selected by all instructors as a starter for this reason.

One of the first points of the breast stroke is the movement of the arms. Both hands are brought together to the chest, and from that position straight forwards to arms' length. From that position sweep the arms backward, still extended, until they are a trifle back of the shoulders. On returning the arms to the breast position, always turn the hands so that they cut the water.

In using this stroke always hold the hands in a cup position, in order to get a better purchase on the water, and give more power to the stroke.

Now for the leg motion.

The legs are worked on the same principles as the arms, except that the legs are brought together and drawn up towards the body, knees bending outward, instead of straight underneath.

After the legs have been brought up to the body, kick them outwards at an angle of about 45 degrees from the hips, then force them together with a strong motion. It is in the closing up of this "V" that the motive power is given to the stroke.

Once the stroke is mastered, constant, careful practice will speedily bring about the desired results, and give the swimmer a good foundation on which to base his other strokes.

In using the breast stroke the hands should be kept about six inches under water at all times, and the fingers should be kept close together, not only to get all the power that lies in the stroke, but eliminate the danger of cramping the joints of the fingers.

The head should be held far back, so that the water line comes under the chin. The chest should be thrown out so that one rides on it, almost in boat fashion. The feet should be about a foot under water, as it is at this depth that one gets the most power. Never lift them above the surface of the water.

Breathing is one of the most important things in swimming. A person while swimming should never think too much about the breathing. Just breathe naturally as in walking along the street. Never try to gasp for breath or to hold it too long. The oxygen in the lungs is like gas in a balloon. If held too long it will allow the body to sink beneath the surface, just as a balloon, too long inflated, will sink back to earth.

In the breast stroke always take a full breath with every stroke, holding the mouth partly open all the time. A person should never be afraid of taking water into the mouth while swimming, because it is never swallowed if one remembers to keep the throat closed.

When water is in the mouth the throat should be kept closed just as one does when gargling a glass of water. A person can go beneath the water and stay several minutes with the mouth wide open, yet never swallow a drop, if he will remember this.

At the start off of the breast stroke never allow the body to sink too deep. As you push off from the side of the tank always be ready to take a good stroke of the arms and legs, so as to be well started for the next stroke.

Never use the breast stroke in irregular, or jerky, fashion. It should be a steady, even stroke, and one should allow about twelve strokes for every [illegible] feet so traversed.

While the breast stroke is recommended for beginners because it is the easiest to learn, and because it is the best balanced of all the strokes, it is not used as much by experts, as other strokes that give greater speed, with little or no more effort. Yet the breast stroke is really one of the best for long distance swimming, as the strain on the muscles is evenly placed, each part of the body doing its share of the work.

Most of the old timers used this stroke in making some of the records which are still the wonder and envy of the present generation. Such swimmers as J. Wolfe, D. Billington, J. [illegible], all English champions, favored the breast stroke above any other, and their success justified the selection.

The English still cling to it despite the many innovations that have resulted in record breaking during the last few years, and some of the finest swimmers of that nation will stake their reputations on the merits of this stroke in all of the long distance events which have made the men of that country so famous in the annals of water sports.

SWIMMING STROKES FOR BEGINNERS TO MASTER.

Old-fashioned Breast Stroke Best for Starter, Because Easier to Learn and More Satisfactory for All Round Work—English Side Stroke Has Many Features that Recommend It for All Ordinary Work.

BY FRANK P. HOLBOROW,

Swimming instructor of the L.A.A.C.

One of the main points for the beginner is to gain confidence in himself, and not be afraid of the water. The breast stroke is selected as the first one for beginners, because it is the easiest to master, and is selected by all instructors as a starter for this reason.

One of the first points of the breast stroke is the movement of the arms. Both hands are brought together to the chest, and from that position, straight forwards to arms' length. When the stroke is mastered, constant careful practice will speedily bring about the desired results, and give the swimmer a good foundation on which to base his other strokes.

still cling to it despite innovations that have record breaking during the and some of the finest of that nation will stake on the merits of all of the long distance have made the men of famous in the annals

In salt water bathing, more so than in a plunge, the breast stroke has many advantages over other movements. The position of the body in the water, and the lifting power of the arms, causes the swimmer to ride the waves like a duck, rising on the crest of each wave and kiting down the long, limpid declines with ease and pleasure, instead of cutting trought them as one would have to do if employing some of the more fancy strokes.

In fact, for all round work, the good old breast stroke continues to hold its own with any of them, and beginners and experts alike will do well to give it the attention it deserves.

The most important after the breast stroke is what is commonly called the English side stroke. It is used by most of the best swimmers for long distance racing, and for endurance contests.

Once the breast stroke has been properly learned, the English side stroke is not hard to master.

The most material change is that the body, instead of lying flat in the water, now lies sideways, and the principal arm stroke is made with the arm which is nearest the surface of the water.

The first position finds the body nearly evenly immersed, with the lower arm extended near the surface, and the upper one hooked, almost under the swimmer's body. The legs are extended nearly to their full length.

Because the leg motion is the simplest part of the stroke, it may well be given first attention. The movement is nothing more nor less than the up and down closing together of the legs, much after the manner of the working of a pair of scissors. As a matter of fact, it is called the scissors stroke, because of the similarity.

As in all other swimming movements, it is the closing up of the space between the legs that gives the motive power to the stroke.

Now for the arms. With the upper arm, always below the surface, and nearly straight out in front, and the left drawn up under the body almost like a chicken wing, sweep the right arm downwards and back, and at the same time thrust the left arm forward, bringing the left hand to a pause a few inches in front of the face, poised for the return sweep.

Then, with a sturdy back sweep of the left hand and a quick, non-resistant thrust of the right, bring the arms back to first position again.

In other words, as the left arm goes back, the right goes forward, and the opposite, so that one arm is producing motive power all the time.

Meanwhile, with each stroke of the arms, the legs complete a powerful scissors stroke, and the body forges steadily and rapidly through the water.

In the present instance, the stroke has been described with the right side of the body lowest in the water. One can, of course, turn over on the left side and reverse the stroke.

This, in fact, is one of the reasons for the popularity of the stroke, as one is able to rest one of his arms while placing most of the strain on the other. In this way one may grind out mile after mile with comparatively little fatigue, and still have a reserve to draw on if necessary.

The movement of the legs is the easiest of any of the strokes, and the fact that they are extended at all times makes them little liable to cramps, even though one may be forced to stay in the water longer than is really desirable.

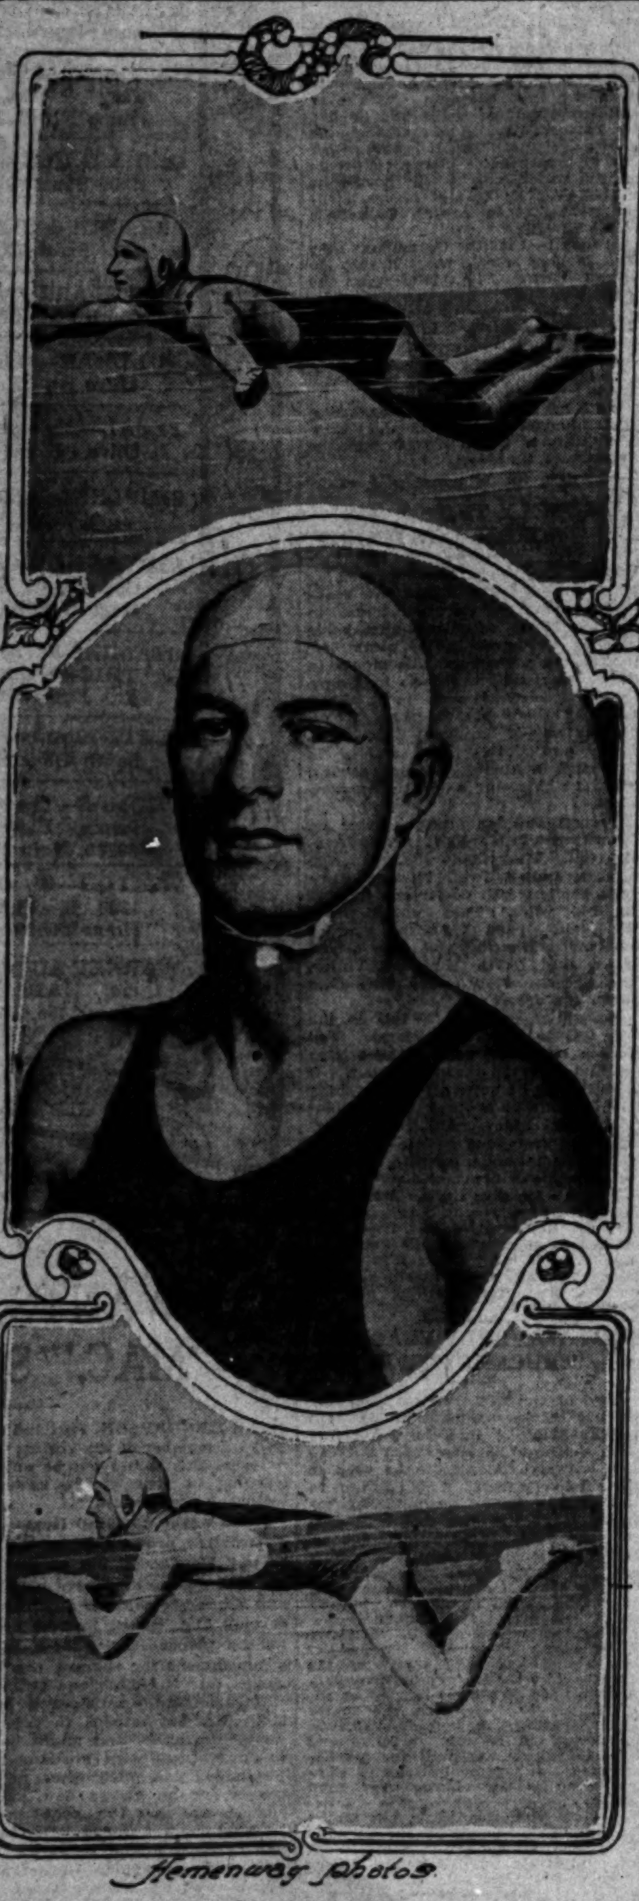
The best speed with the least effort is gained by keeping the body as nearly horizontal in the water as possible, so that the full power of the stroke may be utilized in forging ahead. When the body sets at too deep an angle, with the feet some distance below the surface, part of the power of the stroke is wasted in an upward, out-of-the-water thrust that expends oness strength uselessly.

The head at all times should be about half submerged so that the neck may keep its natural relation to the rest of the body. An akward twist of the neck means the checking of the wind, and this is one of the points in swimming which one is all too apt to overlook.

A great many swimmers let the head rest on the shoulder while taking this stroke at their ease, but the practice is not recommended as it interferes with the free play of the shoulder muscles.

On the other hand, let the head lie as low in the water as possible, as it will prove a material factor in lending speed to the stroke and will prevent the possibility of undue tiring and crimping of the muscles of the neck and back.

And all the while continue to bear in mind the principles of swimming in general as outlined in the breast stroke. Never hurry. Make each movement count for speed and buoyancy. Keep the hands cupped, and the fingers close together. Don't mind a bit of water in your mouth. It is not necessary that you swallow it. And remember, on all "return" strokes, cut the water with the hands as one feathers an oar, so that there will be little or no brake applied to the power of the stroke just completed.



Executing the Breast Stroke.

The beginning and end of the easiest stroke for novices to learn, as illustrated by Frank Parks Holborow, swimming instructor of the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

Was Mr. Duryea's horse doped? Was he off form? Did Danny Maher ride him properly? Were the odd layers wise there was something the matter with horse or jockey or both? These are some of the questions which are being asked and answered in every sort of fashion. In America all this talk about Sweeper II and also the remarkable reversal of form of Tagolie, the Derby winner in, the Oaks would have led to a searching investigation by the turf authorities but here it will wear itself out in talk. In the meantime the only really happy people over the situation are the bookmakers who have made a killing on both Derby and Oaks.

H. B. Duryea, owner of Sweeper, took his disappointment like the true sportsman he is. It is significant, however, that Frank O'Neill will hereafter ride for him in stake races instead of Maher, so it would seem that he is not satisfied with Danny's ride, though he has never said so.

I have had an opportunity of seeing an old Warwick race card, or rather a handbill giving "a correct list of all the horses entered to run at Warwick, on Wednesday, 6th, and Thursday, 7th of September, 1775." Evidently our forefathers were not such gluttons for sport as present-day sportsmen, for there are only two events each day. Perhaps this was because the affair was more or less of a social character, and attracted a very different class of visitors to those one sees nowadays. The handbill announcing the races also records the fact that there will be "balls on Wednesday and Thursday evening at the County Hall. Public breakfasting on Thursday and Friday mornings at the Courthouse," with the further announcement of "cocking at the Wool Pack as usual." Cockfighting then flourished, notwithstanding that it was prohibited by Edward III, in 1365, by Henry VIII, and again by Cromwell in 1653, its revival being approved by James I and Charles II. It was finally put down by a law passed in 1849.

My recollection of the Olympic water polo matches of 1908 causes me to think that the fine team selected to represent Great Britain will be good enough to again win. We cannot afford to hold our opponents cheaply, while Belgium, a country that has made remarkable progress both in rowing and swimming, will have to be closely watched, but I think we will prove, as we did in 1908, that when the United Kingdom places absolutely its best team in a bath, and its best crew in a boat, that Belgium cannot win.

Of the team selected for water polo four played in 1908—C. S. Smith, goal; G. Cornet, back, and S. Wilkinson and P. Radmilovic, forwards. A. E. Hill, C. Bugbee and I. Bentham are newcomers, and take the places of G. Nevinson, T. Thould and C. G. Forsyth.

In the last games the polo was a failure. Several entries were received but when it came to fighting it out, only four toed the mark. In the final, Belgium, by beating Holland (8-1) and Sweden (8-4,) was up against Great Britain, who, owing to scratchings by Hungary and Austria, had not been called upon to play previously. In that the home side won comfortably by 9 to 2, and it was only a poor game.

I have just heard that the water in Stockholm early this week was no more than 43 deg., which is very cold, and, no matter what happens now, when the games take place it will be much lower than in England. The low temperature is likely to have a big effect upon such light men as Derbyshire and Atkinson, while it is quite impossible for swimmers to put up fast time in cold water.

The changing of the ball at the completion of every 200 runs has certainly been of considerable service to the bowlers, especially those with some peculiarity in flight.

Excepting when the ground is in a cast-iron condition, the ordinary bowler can utilize the swerve for at least 100 runs. Bowlers like Hirst will swerve with an old ball, if in not such pronounced fashion as with a new. We do, of course, still see heavy scoring, as witness the Australians' performance against Essex, but innings of 400 and 500 runs seem to me to be less frequent than they were before this 200 runs agreement.

England, since seeing Corkey of Canada and Gitsham of South Africa run the Marathon course, are hopeful of annexing the star event of the Olympic games at Stockholm. Corkey particularly ran a remarkable race when he captured the try-out at Stamford bridge.

"Veteran" of the Sportsman, who is none other than the holder of the world's amateur record for fifty miles, writes thus of the Canuck: "Corkey's judgment was excellent, and his style of running splendidly adapted to the journey. He never unduly raised the knees, and there was no body jump or spring in his running. It was just the typical 'Marathon glide.'"

In the other track and field events England has about given up hope of doing better than a poor second after looking over the records of the American team.

ONE PUNCH KILLS BOXING IN MEXICO.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

MEXICO CITY, June 18.—The inherent politeness of a Mexican referee nearly annulled the effect of a clean knock-out during the recent boxing match in the capital. Incidentally the sow which followed the umpire's decision in favor of the Mexican pugilist, who was pitted against Jim Smith, a negro, has resulted in an official ban on the sport within the Federal District.

Cuauhtemoc Aguilar, the Mexican, went through the ropes in the fourth round. The umpire, carried away by the calamity which had befallen the people's idol, rushed to his aid and was about to try to put him on his feet.

"The count! The count!" yelled half a hundred Americans in the audience.

Several seconds late, the umpire remembered his office and to all appearances Aguilar was down and out. The umpire then declared the blow a foul because it had been struck after the gong sounded. It was pointed out that the gong was broken and could not be heard, but the decision stood. The meeting broke up in a fuss that threatened to result in further fisticuffs

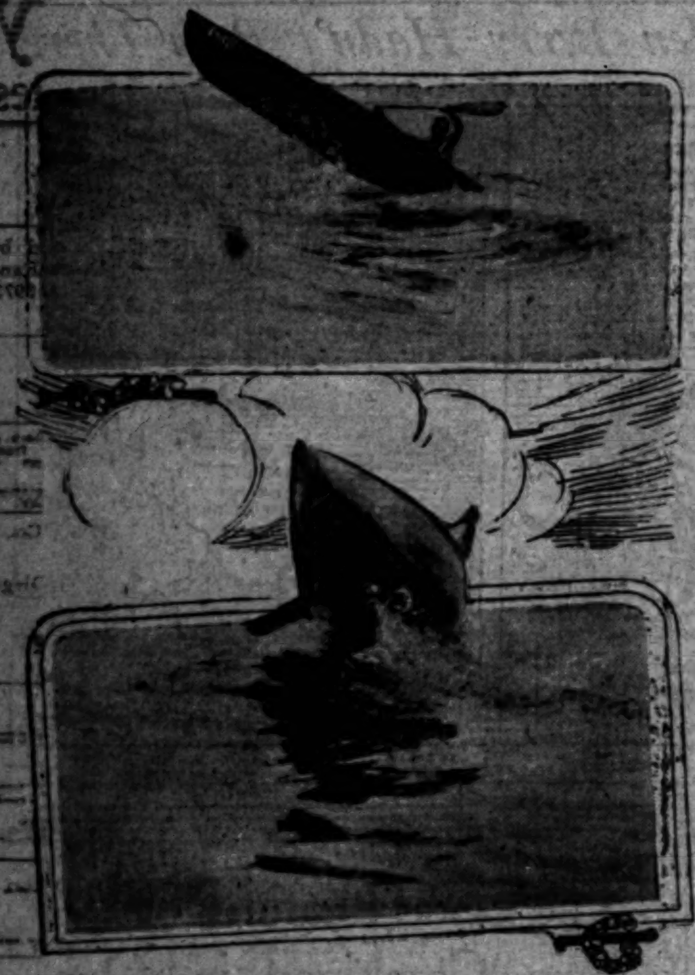
In New South Wales the police department is very strict, and before a car can be registered the brakes are tested on a steep hill and the steering gear is searched for loose connections and any bolts that have not been pinned. The reason for this is because of failure of brakes to act or of steering gear to respond is no excuse in law for accident; also it is a misdemeanor to drive a car with faulty brakes or defective steering gear, and any police officer who suspects any shortcomings in this respect in any car traversing the streets has the power to stop such car and examine the parts, and to take proceedings if necessary.



Riding the Surf in a Canoe.

Raymond Dove of No. 3528 South Park avenue is a wizard in manipulating his craft in the breakers at Anaheim Landnig. His "Imp" performs all kinds of fancy stunts.

Risky Business.

"IMP" PERFORMS IMPISH TRICKS IN BREAKERS.

RAYMOND DOVE of No. 3528 South Park avenue, has been startling the people at Anaheim Landing with daring tricks in his home-made canoe, "Imp." Dove is an expert in riding the breakers. Starting far out where the waves begin to rear their foamy heads he gets the stern of his craft fixed in the swell and rides to shore.

Frequently the bow of the canoe is ten or twelve feet above the water, and as the delicate boat is only thirteen feet long, this means that it often stands almost perpendicularly out of the water.

Surf riding is common among the natives of the Hawaiian Islands, but on the California coast few persons indulge in it. It is dangerous. A person has to be an expert swimmer. Dove is very skillful, but he takes many "spills."

Dove has his little canoe so arranged that he can equip it with a centerboard, and mast and he sails on the quiet waters of Anaheim Bay.

AUSTRALIAN WATER DOGS MAY SWIM HERE.

UNLESS all signs fail, the tournament for the Southern California swimming championship the latter part of August or the first of September, is going to be an affair of international importance. Robb has had the bee in his bonnet for a long time and it looks as though he is going to see fruits of his valiant endeavors to put Los Angeles on the map of the swimming world.

He has just received a letter from Mr. Coffman, trainer of the swimming team of the San Francisco Y.M.C.A., and he says that he will be glad to bring his whole team down here for the meet. As this aggregation has in its numbers Bill O'Malley, Smith, Nixon and Lincoln Johnson, the one-legged wonder, the meet would be an attraction with them alone appearing.

The Olympic Club of San Francisco will also send a team, composed of William McWood, sprinter; Pomeroy and Reseloure, the one-legged sensation from Australia, who defeated Johnson in a match race in which the national record was smashed. The appearance of these two teams in addition to all the local sharks, means that the very best swimmers on the Coast will be on exhibition.

AUSTRALIANS MAY COME.

The crowning feature of the whole meet, however, will be the appearance of the Australian and Hawaiian teams from the Olympic games at Stockholm. Robb and several local men who are acquainted with the members of these two teams are in correspondence with them and there is every chance that they will be seen in action here.

These two foreign attractions will be on their way home and will be able to stop over here for several days en route. The Australians are reputed to have the finest bunch of swimmers that ever represented any country, while the swimmers from Hawaii have a couple of world's records to their credit.

The Coast swimmers have received very little recognition from the eastern authorities and it will be very interesting to compare their showing with that made by the easterners at the Olympic games.

These same local swimmers, by the way, are keeping in fine trim down at the various beaches. Cliff Bowes and Ludy Langer are both working this summer down at the Redondo bathhouse and are getting into great shape. With Langer in form there will be some hot racing between him and the two one-legged wonders from San Francisco, both of whom have recently scored wins over the local lads.

It is expected that definite word will be received from the "foreign invasion" before very long and as soon as it is received the plans and preparations will go merrily on. The northern swimmers are all working hard, according to Coffman's letter in the hopes of being able to run up against the best that the world can offer them.

Out of Style.

CURVES NOT USED BY THE BIG LEAGUE STARS.

IF YOU ask a big league ball player about the curves and benders thrown by the various pitchers he won't give forth a mine of information. In fact, he is likely to tell you that they don't really recognize such things as curves any more. Said Hans Lobert the other day:

"We only figure on what we call a straight ball and a ball with a 'hop on it. All the so-called curves are included in the category of 'balls with a hop on them.' Most of the apparently wonderful curves are just balls slanted at the plate from a different angle. The fade-away is a slow ball that is dropping of its own weight. The in and out curves are simply fast balls with a hop, and outsiders call them in or out curves, mainly as they see a left or right-handed batter facing them.

"Here and there an occasional pitcher tries all sorts of gyrating shoots, usually to the detriment of the base-on-balls record. The veterans and even the wise youngsters, however, just rely on the fast straight ball, thrown from different angles and hence seeming to curve, or on a fast ball with a hop—a ball that takes a little jump as it nears the plate—that's the so-called breaking of the curve, or on slow one's chucked, like the fast, straight balls, from different angles. The big, wide curves that they used to throw don't happen any more.

"Drop curves, so called, used to be thrown with a jerk that wore a man's arm all to pieces. Beyond doubt Huffington and Ramsay threw actual drop curves that had speed on them, but the modern pitcher simply fires a slanting ball from overhead. Joe McGinnity was the best man to throw a genuine curving raised ball.

"Take it from me, there are very few curves now used; a tiny jump of the rotating ball has supplanted them, with the trick of throwing from and to the different angles."

FREDERICKSON ALMOST MAKES NEW RECORD.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

AVALON, June 22.—With a record of twenty-nine for eight holes, Judge W. Frederickson of Los Angeles, lost his golf ball on approaching the ninth hole on the Catalina Golf Club links yesterday, and was compelled to abandon the round and commence again. Two more strikes and the ball would have probably been in the center of the green and the "Judge" would have been holder of the record for the Catalina course.

Other enthusiasts on the green yesterday for the tryouts for the coming two days' tournament, were F. D. Hudson, C. M. Pendleton, J. T. Burkhard and E. H. Bagley.

A national highway, particularly for automobile tourists, and extending from Winnipeg, Canada, to Galveston, Tex., via Ft. Worth and Dallas, may eventually be built, according to Maj. T. H. Jackson, of the War Department Engineers office in Dallas, Tex.

WHIFFS FROM THE OLD SPORT PIPE

BY DE WITT VAN COURT.

What would some of those old-time fighters think if they should happen to come to life today and see what the present day pugs are getting for their work.

John L. Sullivan was one of the first men to get big money for fighting, but during later years his "bit" looked small in comparison to what has been paid many times since. John got $50 for beating Steve Taylor in his early fighting days. Later he fought John Flood with skin gloves, on a barge, for eight rounds, and got $750 for his work, and was glad to get it.

The Great Peter Jackson of Australia fought Jim Corbett sixty rounds. The purse was $10,000. It was called no contest to save some of the gambler's money. But Jackson got his $5000 and Jim Corbett only got $2500.

Jackson in all, made about $250,000, but he let it all slip away. Charlie Mitchell fought Jack Burke for the championship of England. The fight lasted over an hour, and he only got $250 for winning. Joe Gans made over $200,000, but died poor.

Jim Jeffries sent him money enough to go to the Johnson-Jeffries fight at Reno, but Joe was too sick at that time to make the trip. He left nothing when he died.

Jimmie Britt made over $225,000 while he was fighting. He is pretty well fixed today.

Jack Dempsey fought many times and only got $300 for winning. George Dixon, the great little colored fighter, made over $200,000, but died broke.

Sullivan, after he won the championship, made more money than any fighter that ever lived. It has been said his earnings amounted to over $1,000,000, but he gave and blew it away. Later he stopped drinking and has not touched a drop of liquor for six years, and has accumulated about $100,000 by his stage work. John is now living on a farm near Boston, but takes an occasional trip through the winter months doing his monologue stunt. He always draws good houses.

Battling Nelson also made several fortunes, and is well fixed at the present time.

Jim Jeffries made close to $200,000 in his theatrical work and fight with Jack Johnson. Jeff has made a lot of good investments and is probably the righest pugilist in the world today.

Ad Wolgast and Battling Nelson met a few weeks ago in Chicago for the first time since they fought at Point Richmond, several years ago, and shook hands.

Wolgast was doing some training at O'Connell's gymnasium, when in walked the Battler. He watched the champion punch the bag and skip the rope, all the while earnestly taking in every move of Ad's. When Ad went into the rubbing-room, Nelson followed him. The hangers-on followed, expecting to hear some ugly talk, and perhaps see a scrap.

But Bat walked over to where Ad was lying and extended his hand.

"Hello, Ad," said he. "Gee, but you look small."

"How are you?" said Ad. "I guess I am a little low in weight, but you know I have had a few fights lately, and that appendicitis business did not help me any. However, I will be as tough as ever in a few weeks—tough enough to clean up Joe Rivers on the Fourth of July."

"You are as bad a bag puncher as I am," said Bat.

"Yes," said Ad. "We both fight better than we punch the bag."

"Well, I am glad to have seen you," said Bat, as he extended his hand. "I wish you good luck in the Rivers fight. Good-by."

"Good-by, Bat, and good luck to you," replied Ad, as they shook hands.

There was no mention of another fight between the pair and nothing said about the last one. Nelson probably did not care to talk about it and Wolgast was kind enough to respect his feelings.

Such was the meeting between two of the greatest lightweights that ever lived; two lads that fought for forty rounds one of the bitterest battles ever staged in a ring.

That was the worst blow Nelson ever suffered, and his hatred for his conqueror had been great. But time has healed the wound, hence the friendly meeting in the O'Connell dressing-room.

I have seen many bitter and hard contests in the ring, but it is seldom that a fighter carries his feelings outside of it.

Packy McFarland and Matt Wells have made a lot of money, as has Freddy Welsh. Many of the old-time fighters were glad to get a couple hundred dollars for a finish fight with skin gloves. But today, you could almost insult a preliminary fighter by offering him this amount.

A few weeks ago, I was greatly amused when I heard a promoter offer a second rate preliminary fighter $250 for twenty rounds. He nearly had a fit, so indignant was he. Yet this same fighter is chasing all over the country trying to get a fight. When he received this offer he immediately thought he was a "main eventer" and raised his price.

R. L. (Snowy) Baker, who has refereed all the big contests held at the Sydney (Australia) Stadium, has resigned. Langford refused to allow him to referee the contest between him and McVey. Snowy got peeved and quit. Baker has a fine reputation for honesty in Australia, but got in bad lately by giving a couple of decisions that the fighting fans did not like.

Bill Lang, the Australian heavyweight fighter, has decided to "come back," and will meet Jack Lester in Melbourne, where Lang resides. "I am afraid Lang will prove to be another 'Bill' Squires. He took a trip around the world and lost everywhere he went.

Eddy Reddy, manager of Mike Gibbons, recently said of his protege's position before the public:

"Every place we go the fans look for Mike to rush out, hit his man on the jaw and wait for the referee to tick off the seconds. Let me observe that this is no cinch. A fellow that knows anything at all is going to stall when he gets hurt. It's mighty hard to knock a man out that does not want to take the chance of being knocked out.

"Another thing, Mike would sooner win on points than knock some poor fellow out.

"Mike got in wrong down East. He was so intent on making good that he fought his hardest. As a consequence, he stopped Billy Sherman, Willie Lewis, Frank Perron and Young Cashman. After that, everybody expected him to drop everybody he fought. But he can't do it, much as he wants to please the public."

Gibbon's position is an illustration of the whims of fistic fancies, likewise of the advantages and disadvantages of the big punch.

One would think the standing of the St. Paul pugilist was ideal. He is scienced to a degree and has a punch that he often uses. But he is under a drawback, nevertheless, because too much is expected of him.

On the other hand, McFarland and Kilbane are not considered hard punchers, although they have been criticised for lack of a settler. People never expect them to win by a knockout every time they fight. Gibbons, with his unquestioned hitting ability, is handicapped, because the public expects him to do that.

Jinx Chaser.

ATHLETICS' BAT BOY "SURE 'NOUGH" MASCOT.

HOW many boys in this city—in fact, throughout the country—wouldn't give their most cherished objects and desires to be mascot of the world's champion Athletics? There are few who wouldn't delight in the job, but there are few, if any, who could be prouder or more happy with the honor than Louis Van Zandt, the present title-holder.

Louis is now in his fourth year as the mascot of the Athletics. He started in the closing part of the 1909 season, continued on through 1910 and 1911, when Connie Mack's tribe captured the much-coveted world gonfalon, and is here with the team today.

There have been all sorts of yarns spun as to how Louis Van Zandt landed the much-coveted mascot position, but probably the true facts have never been related. The Athletics had always been conspicuous through the fact that they carried no mascots, their victories were won without any attempt to conciliate the jinx god. Then in the closing weeks of 1909 the team hit a snag. In the final Detroit series the Tigers swept them off their feet.

The day of Detroit's last appearance in Philadelphia little Louis Van Zandt for the first time in his life journeyed to Shibe Park to see a big league game. He found the stands jammed and in some way worked his way out onto the field near the Athletic's bench.

CONNIE SPOTS LOUIS.

Things were breaking bad for Connie and his athletes that day, and to add to the misfortunes there was no bat boy around. Connie saw Louis seated on the ground a few feet away. He sent one of the substitute players over to the little fellow and gravely proffered the position of bat boy for the afternoon. Louis as gravely accepted. It was the happiest moment of his life.

Well, from the time Louis first touched a bat the Athletic players started to slug in their old style, and a peep at the records of that game will demonstrate how viciously they acted toward the Detroit sluggers in the closing innings. After the game Louis made a quick getaway.

Several of the players had been chatting with the temporary bat boy and had at once taken a liking to him. That winning game was played on a Saturday, but when Monday came Louis didn't appear and the Athletics were badly beaten. On Tuesday Louis Van Zandt was on hand again, and sure enough the Athletics won. That settled it; the players wanted Louis for a regular mascot and told Connie Mack. And they were more insistent the next day, when Louis didn't appear and they lost again.

HE IS OFFICIALLY ENGAGED.

On Thursday shortly before the game commenced Louis put in an appearance and John Shibe was delegated to see that the boy didn't leave the ball park until he had been officially engaged as mascot. Of course the Athletics won, and Louis was officially installed in his new position.

Twice during the remainder of the year the new mascot missed his job and both times the Athletics lost. That cemented the contract. Louis had some difficulties, too. He was attending school in West Philadelphia and couldn't get to the grounds in time for the game unless he left early. Hence, the teacher was told of the necessities, and being an admirer of the Athletics she readily agreed to let Louis slip away earlier.

The mascot has made many trips with the team, not missing one of the world series games, and appearing at all the home games in 1910 and 1911, and so far in 1912. He is now 17 years old, and is a well-liked, gentlemanly little fellow. Especially is he chummy with Rube Oldring, and this pair are together at all odd moments. Ben Egan, the new catcher, is another contender for strong friendship privileges.

SITS BY MACK.

During the progress of the game Louis usually sits by Connie Mack, who has a great liking for the mascot. While the Athletics are at bat Louis has a certain position in which he crouches beside the bats. He has done it so many times that his footmarks can be easily seen not only at Shibe Park, but at all the parks around the American League circuit. By crouching in the one position Louis says he brings luck to the Athletic batters.

Recently Rube Oldring was in the midst of a batting slump and Louis's grief couldn't be checked. Each time the blonde outfielder came in Louis made him sit down by his side in the hopes of chasing the jinx.

The mascot hasn't lost confidence in the Athletics, and predicts that they'll repeat this year. He has supreme confidence in Connie Mack, and if asked who is the most wonderful man of the present day doesn't hesitate to answer: "Why, Connie Mack, of course."

OLYMPIC LETTER.

BY JAMES H. RANDALL.

NEW YORK, June 22.—The Finland, with her great cargo of athletes, is now nearing Stockholm and in another week or ten days thousands of Americans will be watching the cables anxiously to see which of them take firsts in the various Olympic track and field events. That anybody but an American will finish first in any of these events does not seem possible. There is hardly a standard event on the programme in which we have not at least two men who, on form, cannot beat anything which has shown in Europe, and in more than one event I look to see the Americans come in one, two, three.

The ship stops at Antwerp for two days to give the boys a chance to see the sights, and then steams into Stockholm. A week will be devoted to training in that city before the real fight begins.

Great Britain, with all her stock of champions, will be lucky to finish in second position, for she has a perfect right to fear Sweden, which country within the last year or so has come to the front in leaps and bounds. A great deal of credit belongs to Ernie Tjertberg, former trainer of the Irish-Americans, who has put the Swedish boys in tiptop shape. Ernie has taught them a lot of our tricks.

America in this Olympiad will be represented in a larger number of events which we are inclined to rank as minor sports than ever before, and the American entries in the swimming, bicycle riding, shooting, fencing and riding contests are likely to add many points to the score.

So much has been written about the personnel of the team that it is not possible to say anything new. The only thing now is to await the games.

Whatever may be the opinion as to the college championship in baseball there can be no difference over the standing of Sam White of Princeton. He landed the championship in football for Old Nassau and if, as I think, Princeton also has the best baseball team, it is largely due to the efforts of this splendid young athlete. He will occupy a high place in the athletic pantheon of the university.

All eyes are now turned on Poughkeepsie, where the pick of the college oarsmen are gathered for the great regatta next week.

With the Olympic champions away we can give this great race its due share of attention.

By long odds the most interesting feature of the race this year is the presence of the Leland Stanford team.

It is unfortunate that the Californians were not able to have their new shell when they arrived, but it gave Courtney an opportunity to show the sportsmanlike spirit of Cornell by furnishing the Westerners with a shell.

No crew at Poughkeepsie has been matched more closely than the boys from the other side of the country, and after studying them at work it is admitted that they are dangerous. Handicapped as they are with the long voyage across the continent, with too short a time to learn the course thoroughly and only limited practice in the boat in which they are to row their race, it is hardly possible they will be able to win the race, but if they push the leaders hard it will be a notable performance, and one of which the Californians may well be proud.

Experts who have watched the crews closely are of the opinion that it is going to be a close race between Cornell and Columbia so far as the big race is concerned, with the chances favoring Courtney's men.

Courtney always has had the trick of turning out winning teams for the Ithacans. In his prime he was perhaps the best oarsman who ever handled a pair of sculls and he has the rare faculty of imparting his knowledge to others. It is this which has for years made Cornell supreme on the water, and it will hardly be denied even by Yale or Harvard enthusiasts that in rowing Cornell is ahead of either.

It may be that the Cornellians may trail in next week's race; if they do Jimmy Rice's Columbians seem the most likely crew to win. The New Yorkers are a husky bunch and Rice has whipped them into very pretty pretty shape. However, I hardly think thy are quite good enough to give the Cornell boat their back wash in the last mile.

As I have said, Leland Stanford is the unknown quantity in the race. The Californian lads may furnish the surprise of the day.

LEISURELY TRIP ACROSS CONTINENT.

Frank S. Foskett, accompanied by his wife and daughter, are now making a return trip to their home in Orange, Mass., after spending some time in California. The party left their home a year ago this month in their Overland machine, making a slow tour across the continent. They came by the northern route, which goes by way of the Great Lakes, Wyoming and Utah. They arrived in California in August and spent several months sightseeing along the western coast.

Foskett and his family started on the return trip March 6, leaving Lindsay, Cal. They made the run from there to Dallas, Tex., in twenty-three days, the longest ride for any day being 143 miles. This was between Kent and Buena Vista, by way of Stockton. The machine was driven across the North Imperial Valley, making from ninety to 100 miles daily across the desert.

According to Foskett, this is the only way to come to California. You have a chance to see all there is to see and it is an enjoyable tour. It is getting to be quite a common thing now for tourists to cross the continent in their machines, making short trips each day from one city to the next. Foskett is taking the entire southern route on his return home and is now in Texas. He says the most interesting part of the run is between Phoenix and Roosevelt, Ariz. They were obliged to go over a grade known as Fish Creek Grade, where it was necessary to make frequent stops in order to keep from burning out the brake bands.

NEW WAVERLY ELACTRIC TRUCK IS POWERFUL.

Two of the new five-ton Waverley electric trucks, which is an addition to the Waverly line, have recently been delivered in New York City to two brewery concerns to be used in their delivery work. This addition to the electric line of commercial vehicles is of the size that will best suit the demand for electric trucks. It is seventeen feet eight inches long and has a carrying space of fourteen feet by six feet and six inches wide. It weighs 11,200 pounds, the battery alone weighing 2540 pounds.

The battery consists of forty-two cells, each containing twenty-five plates and has a capacity of 324 ampere hours. One eighty-five volt, sixty ampere motor is located at the extreme rear end, with the motor shaft operating heavy chain drives. In design it is very massive and shows that it was built for service. The car has a rated mileage of thirty-five miles per charge over good roads. The weight of the entire machine when loaded is ten and a half tons. It is supported on solid tires thirty-six by seven inches front, and thirty-six by five inches double tires on the rear.

Job H. Lippincott, the new motor vehicle commissioner of New Jersey, is popular with the motorists, and under the new law his appointment will probably result in more touring than was expected.

HAP WANTS HENDERSON; "MAC," SORE, SAYS "NIX."

BEN HENDERSON, Portland pitcher, a member of the Vernon team? Why, this would not be anything startling in view of the news that leaked out yesterday.

Some weeks abo Hap Hogan made a tentative proposition to McCredie to buy Henderson, but at that time big Mac was pretty sore at his pitcher and refused to consider anything concerning him, except that he be kept on the suspended list for a time as a punishment for running the water wagon into the ditch and falling off.

Hogan got no satisfaction out of McCredie, but intends to bring the matter up again and might be able to do business with Portland today. Henderson can pitch when he is in shape, for he knows how and the chances are that Hap could make a winning one out of him. He took the San Francisco castoff Stewart and the Los Angeles castoffs Castleton and Hosp, and look at them now.

Many of the fans think that these players did not try to show their real form with their former clubs, but in any event, they did show it with Vernon, and Hap naturally gets much of all of the credit for the change. Probably he could [illegible] Henderson.

SPORTING LETTER.

BY WALTER MARCHAND.

NEW YORK, June 17.—It is probable that the baseball season of 1912 will go into the history as the season of the long swat. For some reason the psychology of which is beyond the ordinary fan, home run hits have been so common this year that they have ceased to cause comment, except when they are made with the bases full, and thereby break the games, or when as was the case at the Polo Grounds during the recent visit of the Cubs four homers were bolted in the same game.

We have always had home run artists in the game, men like Baker, Meyers, Zimmerman and the like, but just now these men are merely leaders of a great army of four-base hitters.

Of all these home run records the most remarkable was that made at the Polo Grounds, for game after game, for weeks, with only one exception every game played at Brush stadium was marked by at least one homer.

On other grounds the home run habit is not so firmly fixed, but it is true that "everybody's doing it."

In some parts of the country, more particularly down about the national capital the season has a still higher title to a noted place in the history of the game. The great western trip of the Washington team, in which they gave a close imitation of the Giants, is really a most remarkable, not to say unique, performance for the Senators.

In a baseball way all is not quiet on the Potomac, not by several parasongs. In fact, Washington fandom has gotten to a point of enthusiasm when, if the Democrats should nominate Clark Griffith for the Presidency next week, he could depend upon carrying the District of Columbia solid.

It has been so long since Washington has had a first division team at this stage of the season—come to think it over I don't recall they ever did—that at first the inhabitants were dazed, now they are crazy.

While talking over the remarkable features of the season, it will not do to leave out Rube Marquard. Even Hugh Fullerton is now willing to admit that the Rube is a pretty fair imitation of a pitcher. In his great record, it is true, he has been backed up by the best club now playing, but Marquard's pitching would have brought him victory with almost any club of big league caliber. With Walter Johnson, of the Senators, he is fairly entitled to the proud pitching honors of the season so far.

The Giants still have so long a lead in the National League that nothing short of a train accident which would kill off half of McGraw's players seems likely to be able to stop them. In the American League, however, it is a horse of a different color. Any one of the first six clubs may take a spurt and go to the front at any time. I still have a sneaking suspicion that Connie Mack has the class of the league, and when the final spurt comes, will go to the head, giving McGraw a chance to regain his lost laurels.

Ever stop to consider what the Smiths, Joneses, Sweeneys, Browns, O'Briens, Collinses and a few other players of the same name group have done for baseball? There have been players of these and other familiar names in the game ever since there was any baseball. Memory is no encyclopedia, but recalling names offhand many a famous player comes to mind. Take the Smiths, for instance. There was Charley Smith, the old time Columbus third baseman; Germany Smith, the shortstop, and a cracking good one; George Smith, the second baseman; Charles Smith, the Pirate catcher; C. Smith, the pitcher, and Frank Smith, the pitcher; George A. Smith, pitcher and first baseman for Harrisburg back in '84; Catcher Broadway Alex Smith, Red Smith, the Brooklyn third baseman, and Wally Smith, the Cardinals' infielder.

The Joneses, too, are numerous. They include Charley, Davy, Jimmy, W. D. and Fielder, all out-fielders of bygone or modern times; Tom, the first baseman; Oscar Jones, Jumping Jack Jones, and Bumpus Jones, all pitchers. Collinses, more or less illustrious, have been Jimmy, the king of all third basemen; Eddie, the king of all second baseman; Hub, at one time second baseman for the Brooklyns; Ray, the Boston pitcher, and the Collins now playing the outfield for the White six.

Among the Browns, with or without the final "e," are Bill, old-time catcher; Lew, another old timer; Tom, the fast outfielder; George, another speedy outfielder, and three of four pitchers now in the game, among them the noted Mordecai Brown of the Cubs. The Sweeneys go as far back as Charley, who pitched for Providence when Radbourne was in his heyday, and take in Ed, the New York catcher; Bill, the Boston second baseman; John who caught for Baltimore in 1884; Danny Sweeney, midget outfielder, and a Sweeney, who used to play first base for Kansas City.

Antedating Buck O'Brien, now pitching for the Red Sox, were Darby O'Brien, the Cleveland pitcher; Darby O'Brien, the Brooklyn outfielder; Tom and Johnny, second basemen; Billy, first baseman, and an O'Brien who caught for the Athletics twenty-five years ago. And what of the Clarkes? There have been a string of them—Fred of the Pirates and his brother, Josh; Bill, who caught for the old Orioles; Bill, who played first base for the Giants in the '90's; Dad, the pitcher; Justin, the latter-day catcher, and Tom, now catching for the Cincinnatis.

The Davises include George, star shortstop; Harry, managing the Clevelands; Johnny, a pitcher of long ago; Lefty, the outfielder; Big Jim, the third baseman, and Ira, a first baseman. There were Millers as long ago as '84, and since then at various periods; Foghorn Miller, the catcher; Otto, the Brooklyn catcher; Jack, the Pittsburgh first baseman; Doc, the Boston right fielder, and Ward, the Cubs' utility man. Four Mitchells are at present in the game—Mike, captain of the Reds; Pitcher Mitchell of the Clevelands and Pitcher Mitchell of the Browns; also Mitchell, last year a Highlander catcher, and before that a pitcher for the Phillies.

There were two Tom Burnses of note, and more recent players of that name are Bill, the pitcher, and John, now with the Giants. Jimmy Burns, in his day was a fine outfielder. The Doyles have produced in recent years three fine players—Larry, Jimmy and Jack. The ball family Robinson has turned out Wilbert, the catcher; Yank, the old time second baseman; Sparrow, the second baseman, and the present Pitcher Robinson.

Joe Wood, the crack pitcher, was preceded by Bob Wood and Fred Wood, both catchers, and George Wood, a noted outfielder of the past. The Hugheses, with the two Toms and Jimmy, run to pitchers, as do the Keefes, with Tim and Bobby.

FINAL PLANS MADE FOR VENICE TOURNEY.

Yesterday morning the Tournament Committee of the Venice Country Club met to make final arrangements for the big tournament which is to start June 27, 28, 29. The members present were Wallace Robb, chairman; Walter Nash, M. Stanton, Arthur Osborn, T. C. Rice-Wray and E. P. Murphy.

Two new events were added because of the great demand for them. These two events are the ladies' special singles and the junior doubles. The only ladies' event was the open singles and in order to give the new players a chance, the special event, from which all winners of open tournaments are barred, was decided upon.

The junior doubles event promises as much excitement as the junior singles. The huge number of young players here has given rise to a demand for special events for such players and the junior singles event was not enough. The doubles play among the high school and college players has risen to a very high plane and is always the most interesting to watch.

The tournament will wind up Saturday night with a big open-air dance on the tennis courts of the club. These are lighted by huge incandescent lights and provide a fine place for such a function. The entries are rolling in rapidly and very much interest is being evinced because of the likelihood of hot competition in all the events.

For weeks a motor truck performed valuable duty in the flooded district near Baton Rouge, La., saving many lives that otherwise might have been lost. It has hauled men, women and children to safety out of places from which they otherwise might not have escaped.

Chicago motoring enthusiasts are holding out a hope that Milwaukee will center its energies entirely on the Vanderbilt Cup race and pass the holding of the Grand Prize event.

STAR PLAYERS LINED UP FOR TOURNEY.

The entries for the Pacific Coast tennis doubles tournament, to be held on the courts of the Los Angeles Country Club at Beverly Hills, are coming in by the handful. The preparations for handling the big crowd which is sure to attend are also going merrily on, a large grand stand being practically finished. The courts are being used every day by those who intend competing in the meet, the winner of which is to go East to represent the Coast in the big national championship.

The entries of all of the best players from both the North and the South are assured, among them being the teams of McLoughlin and Bundy, Braly and Duncan, Sinsabaugh and Dawson, Browne and Wayne, Bacon and Young, Eastman and Gorham, and Ketchum and Marshall, while pairs will be formed from among Variel, Holmes, Way, Bell, Hopper, Newell, Weller, Barker, Oxnam and McCormick.

The following well-known players from the North will compete, the teams not having been picked as yet: Sumner Hardy, Melville Long, Carl Gardner, William Johnson, Clarence Griffin, Ella Fottrell, Reuben Hunt, Jim Code, John Strachan, Dr. Knowlton and others.

In addition there will be a ladies' singles event on the programme, which will be full of excitement. The Sutton family will be contesting elsewhere and Miss Browne is still in the East, so that the field will be open to the players who have not had much of a chance to shine with these classy players in the game.

Among those who will be asked to play will be Mrs. Stickred, Mrs. Widowson, Misses Alice Scott, Elizabeth Sherk, Marion Toedt, Marjorie Tufts, Lillie Kingcade, Mary Hughes, Fanny Shoemaker, Claire Cox, Ruth Anderson, Young and Caldwell. These players are all well-known in the local circles and will provide some classy tennis for the onlookers.

SQUASH TOURNEY TO FOLLOW HANDBALL PLAR

The L.A.A.C. handball tournament having almost gone down into history, the ambitious ones among the membership are now interesting themselves in the first squash tournament ever held on the Pacific Coast.

Stan Mitchell got away with the big surprise package when he defeated Louis Aluzet in the finals of the class A handball tournament, 21-14, 21-15. There was class sticking out all over this encounter, which occurred on Wednesday. In the B class Jack Nest, Jay Welton and the winner of the Les Henry-C. Marsh contest will fight it out for the championship with Nest the most likely winner.

In the C class, W. W. Burns, George Golding, E. C. Price and Charley Eyton still remain with Golding and Maguire, the favorites. In the D class the fight has narrowed down to George Hassard and the winner of the Hannen-Tatum struggle, with Hazzard the long shot. All of these matches will be played off within the next three or four days and then everybody will get interested in the squash tournament.

The matches in this tournament must all be the best two out of three and anyone can referee them, but they must all be played off by July 2. F. D. Farquhar, Les Henry, A. S. Halstead and Ed. Dietrich all have a good chance to bring home the bacon.

The entry list is as follows: Leo Bergen, Guy Cockrall, George Cline Ed Dietrich, Bernal Dyas, R. A. Dunnigan, G. H. Ennis, F. D. Farquhar, Les. Henry, Cliff Horne, A. S. Halstead, N. W. Howard, A. J. Howard, T. B. K. Johnson, J. J. Von Kanthoven, T. S. McNab, William T. Reid, Charles Syler, Jr., Russell Taylor and Sam Wood.

FORTUNE IS OFFERED TO FILL PIRATE NEED.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

PITTSBURGH, May 28.—For a first baseman, $25,000. Seven years spent trying to get a first baseman.

The management of the Pittsburgh Pirates makes the offer of $25,000 for a player who can guard the territory around the initial sack a la Ed Koney, Hal Chase or Jake Danbert, and the Pittsburgh Pirates have spent $40,500 trying to get a first baseman of this kind.

This may sound fictitious, and some may believe that one too many ciphers appear in the first line, but Secretary William H. Locke of the Pirates gives the startling information that if any minor league magnate can develop a youth about the equal of Koney, Chase or Danbert, President Dreyfuss will sign a check for $25,000.

So here is the chance for some minor league magnate to acquire a small fortune on one player, as did George Lennon, owner of the St. Paul American Association club, when he sold Marty O'Toole for $22,500.

Of course, there are few first-sackers in the class with Koney, Chase or Danbert, and it is unnecessary that a written guarantee shall accompany the sale and purchase, but the Pittsburgh club stands ready to expend $25,000 for such a player as the Cardinals, Yankees and Superbas own.

The subject of paying this fabulous sum for a first baseman was discussed by Locke and the whys and wherefores were made very plain by the shrewd and smart secretary.

"Did the Pittsburgh club really pay $22,500 for Marty O'Toole? Dreyfuss will pay $22,500 again," replied Locke.

"During the past few years we have paid more than $22,500 for pitching material, and haven't a single twirler out of the lot to show for our money," continued Locke. "Experimenting is costly these days, and to pay a big price for one who is certain to make good is the best policy in the long run.

"Why, since Kitty Bransfield was traded we have spent a fortune trying to get a player to fill his shoes, and not until now do I think we have found him. He is Jack Miller."

An effort is being made by the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory Association to revive speedway racing at Atlanta, Ga. It is announced that the big Atlanta mortordrome track can be resurfaced for about $2000, but whatever action is taken largely depends on the civic interest displayed. It has been estimated that it would take $30,000 to underwrite the meet.

There is no lack of chauffeurs for the ninety-horse-power motor hook and ladder truck in one Detroit station for every member of the company has learned to drive the machine.

WOLGAST SEEMS TO LACK OLD-TIME "PEP."

Champion Returns from Two Weeks' Outing in the Mountains and Will Begin Active Work With Gloves Today — Strenuous Programme Carried Out in Hills, but Ad Did Not Display Zest for Work as of Old.

BY OWEN R. BIRD.

ADOLPHUS WOLGAST, lightweight champion of the world, returned yesterday from the mountain fastnesses of Wheeler's Springs and Harow's ranch, where he had finished a two weeks' battle royal with old Dame Nature in her most rugged mood. The little champ is in far better condition than when he left Los Angeles for his mountain work, but it is yet a big question whether he is the Wolgast of old.

After watching Wolgast during the last five days of his stay we are bound to say that his work seems slightly irksome in its performance, although he religiously went through the regular programme, and did about everything which falls to the lot of a mountain ranger while on duty. There is not a better place in the world for the toughening process than the country about Wheeler's Springs and Harow's ranch. The ranch is practically the roof of Southern California and offers everything from pitching hay to luring the illusive trout from the deepest holes in the bubbling streams.

Wolgast and McVey kept the nine miles of rugged mountain trail between Wheeler's and Harow's hot, making the round trip nearly every day. Most of these journeys were made on foot, with the two boys dressed in a coat of tan and at infrequent intervals a smile. Speaking of tan, both Wolgast and McVey have acquired a rich brown hue which would make the average Indian ashamed to look them in the face, but tan is only skin deep, and let us hope they won't peel within the next ten days.

SOMETIMES A SMILE.

One of the favorite stunts pulled off by the champ and his partner was to climb aboard a pair of broncos, gun in hand and go tearing over the Rose Valley Flat with the winds of nature playing undisturbed upon their manly breasts, the only thing between rider and horse being a pair of kahki trousers. During these expeditions the death rate among the jack-rabbits and cotton-tails far exceeded the birth rate, according to range statistics. Pete McVey developed a great antipathy for rattlesnakes, and no matter what he was doing or where he was going, would stop every time the dreaded whirr sounded, and there would be one less poison-dispenser in that section. Ad became expert in the art of amputating rattles and has enough at present to make a fair-sized portiere. This was the afternoon bill-of-fare.

In the morning it was either a hike to Wheeler's or a run around the flat, and occasionally a fishing trip, but Ad found the latter sport too wearing upon his frazzled nerves and gave it up for more action. When at Wheeler's the champion and his training partner spent a good deal of time in the hot sulphur water, this pastime developing lots of fun, but being very debilitating for a man who is building up his stamina. Another thing that took time in the early morning was milking cows and then herding all the yearlings out of the "spud" patch. In chasing these birds Ad nearly lost his goat several times, for if there is anything in the world more exasperating than a mountain steer I want to know.

HOUND DISAPPEARS.

Last Wednesday morning a disaster befell the camp in that Chief, the big Russian wolf hound, went over to Rose Valley with Ad and Pete and never came back, and has not been heard from since. The chances are that he ran amuck with a lion or stepped on a rattler, when the latter party was not looking. Anyway, Ad and Pete must have covered about fifty imles looking for the dog, but all in vain.

Wolgast is making a determined effort to get his nervous system under control, and with Pete McVey is having a fair share of luck, but at first he was very irritable and liable to fly off the handle at anything. All the people on the ranch at Harow's made it easy for the champion, and took a great personal interest in his condition, and some great arguments were started at the supper table, ranging from municipal matters to prize fights. Ad has a great habit at the meals of beginning with his dessert first, and then getting Pete's while the hard-working trainer is getting ready to look for it. All these meals are broken up by heated discussions between the champion and Jerry Crawft on anatomy, in fact, the table was a veritable conversational chaos.

It is a funny thing to sit beside a champion and watch him go through a meal, not that he eats differently from other folks, but while waiting for something to be passed this champ is always pummeling his face, as he says that he wants to get it hard for the coming fight.

NOT WORRYING.

This was about the only time the affair scheduled for Independence Day was ever mentioned, except one night when half-past 9 o'clock rolled around, just as Ad, Jerry, bill Harow and Pete McVey were in a heated game of hearts, with the game going strong for Ad and Jerry.

As the clock struck, Mrs. Wolgast said, "Better get some sleep, 'cause you are going to need it on the Fourth."

"Say," answered Ad, "I guess you are worrying more about this fight than I am. Who is going to fight, I want to know. Don't bust up this little game when we got old Bill and Pete on the slide."

And the game went on for another half hour and after it was all over Ad looked better than he had at any time during the last part of the trip. He likes to win.

It would be a good thing if Ad could have stayed in the mountains another week, but as it is he will enter the hard part of his work out with a lot of the pure air in his lungs, and if the two weeks in the peaks have settled his nerves for the boxing end of the training, a great deal will have been accomplished.

M'VEY A PRIZE.

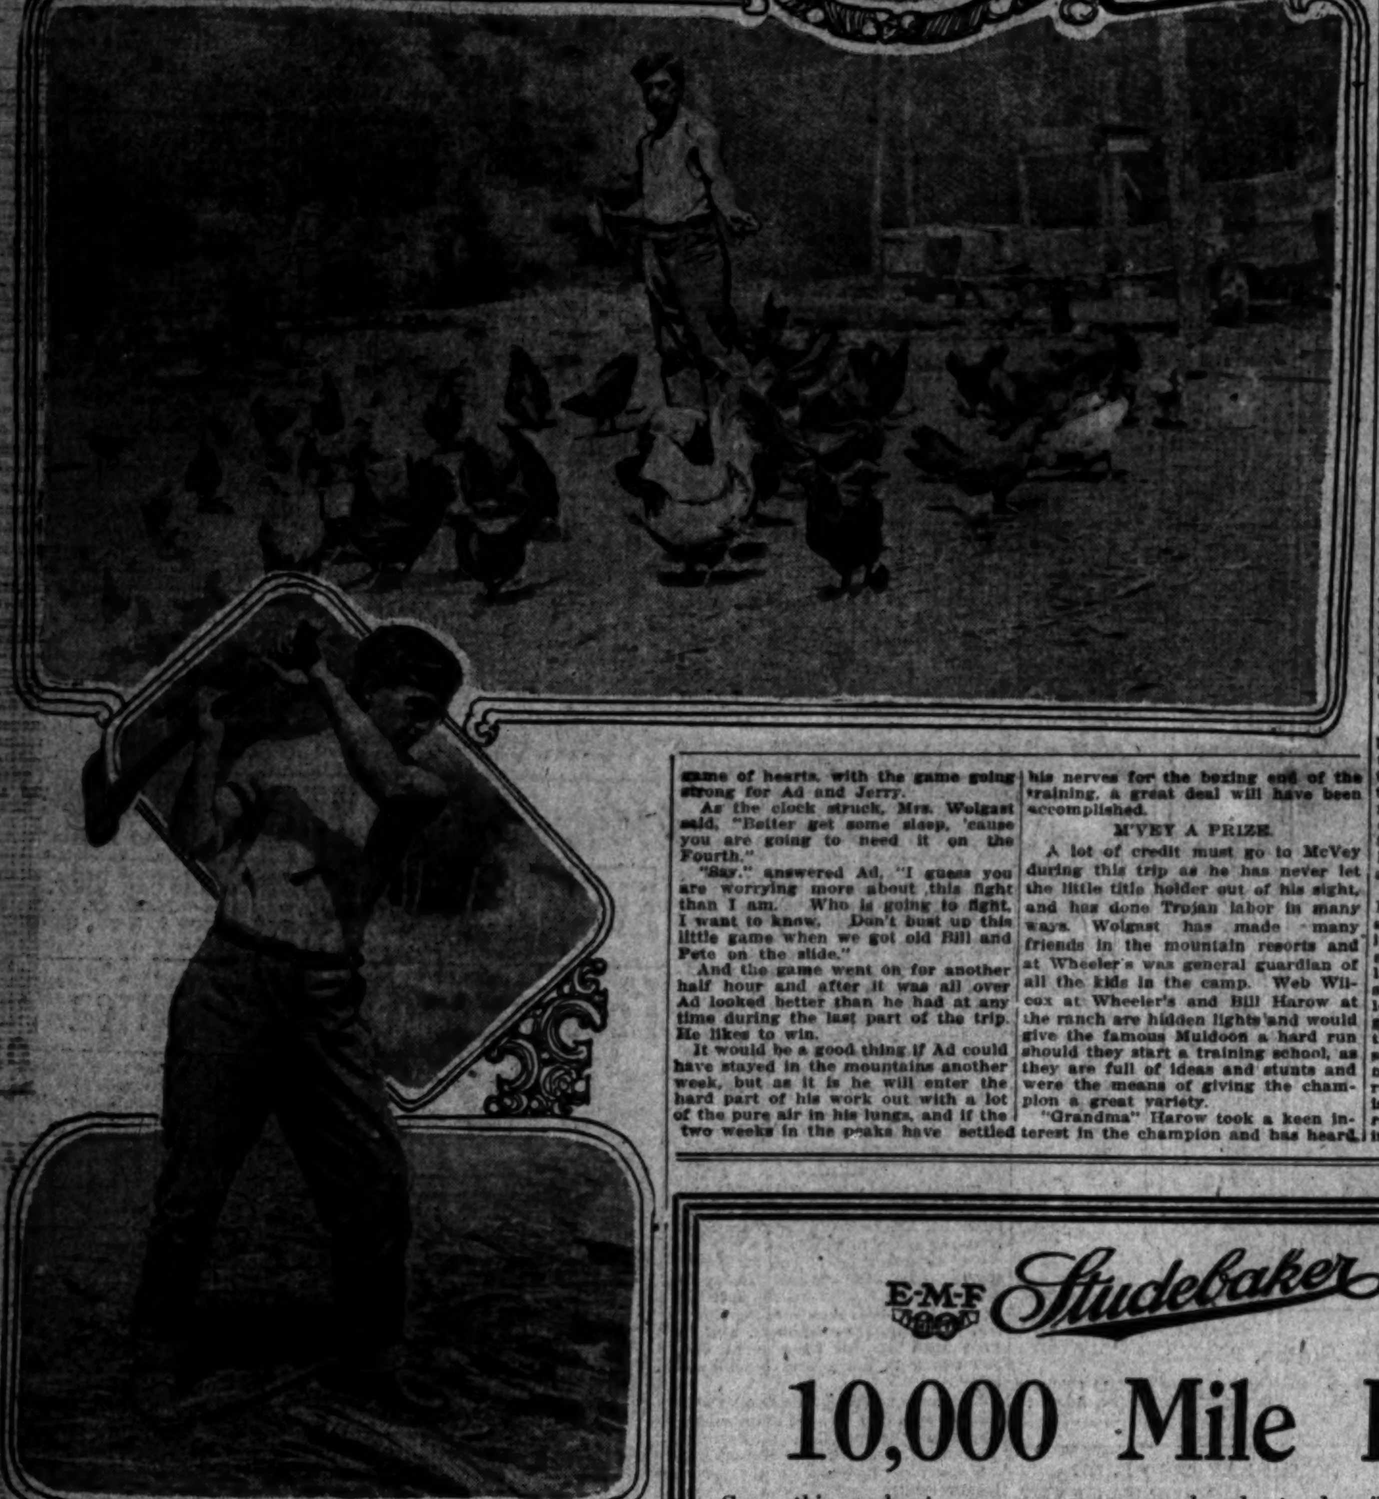
A lot of credit must go to McVey during this trip as he has never let the little title holder out of his sight, and has done Trojan labor in many ways. Wolgast has made many friends in the mountain resorts and at Wheeler's was general guardian of all the kids in the camp. Web Wilcox at Wheeler's and Bill Harow at the ranch are hidden lights and would give the famous Muldoon a hard run should they start a training school, as they are full of ideas and stunts and were the means of giving the champion a great variety.

"Grandma" Harow took a keen interest in the champion and has heard of him winning so many fights that she thinks he cannot possibly lose in the coming engagement. She says that every time Ad comes to see her and allows her to get his meals he is bound to be strong. She bossed the "kink" around like a four-year-old and he likes it at that, and it is not a bad thing for a man to have a woman taking a motherly interest in his welfare, and Grandma surely does it.

TODAY'S WORKOUT.

This afternoon at Doyle's, Ad will don the gloves with several sparring partners, and give the fans a chance to look him over and get a line on his chances with the Mexican panther.

Rivers has been the whole show for the past week and has worked himself into the public confidence by his fast and speedy work. This afternoon will also witness the Contender under a full head of steam at Venice.



Wolgast at Harow's Ranch,

Nine miles from Wheeler's Springs, where he has been roughing it for two weeks. Ad has been doing all the chores at th ranch and lading a strenuous life, in general. He likes ranch life. Jogging about half-dressed, on an old nag, also strikes him just right.

SWIMMING TOURNEY IN L.A.A.C. TANK.

On the evening of July 12 the Los Angeles Athletic Club will hold its first regular-club swimming tournament in the big tank. The meet will be in the nature of an experiment, owing to its being the first, and the racing will not be taken very seriously by the members.

The races will range from thirty-three yards, one length of the tank, to the quarter-mile grind, all of them being handicap affairs with the exception of the four-forty, which will be for the big silver cup and therefore a scratch race.

The club men are training faithfully for the meet and are gradually rounding into form. Lou Mellus, the Beau Brummel of the club, has invested in a beautiful silk costume which has made him the subject of a great deal of envy among his clubmates.

Among the promising contestants are Elt Brown, Stan Mitchell and Jack Watling, of water-polo fame, and many other well-known ducks. Chet Moore will swim although the distances are rather too short for him, his favorite distance being two or three miles. Les Henry looks good in the long swim, because of his staying powers, while Tot Richards is a bear in the sprints.

Pat Higgins is an old-timer who will make the best of them hustle in the sprints, unless he is too heavily handicapped by Prof. Holborrow. Ben Watlington, former Coast champion, and one of the best-known swimmers in the West, will also attempt to "come back" in the long races. There will be several comedy features on the programme.

The plunge for distance is productive of a great deal of practicing on the part of the various contestants. At the present juncture Mel Nordlinger would seem to have it cinched, but Paul Hammond and Don O'Melveny will make him work for the members and lady friends.

NIMRODS PLAN TO INVADE KERN COUNTY.

It begins to look as if there will be an exodus of sportsmen from this city during the course of the next week. A large number of local nimrods have been completing arrangements to spend their vacations up in the northern counties where the deer season opens on July 1 and continues open for two months.

The majority of them will journey to Kern county as the nearest and best place for the chasing of the gentle quadruped. The larger part of the local hunters do their stalking in the San Gabriel, Malibu and San Bernardino districts, but as the season does not open in these parts until the middle of August and then only lasts one month all those who can are going north for the big opening.

The reports from the farmers in Kern county give promise of a big season. The usual reports have come in regarding the large number of deer seen in the locality and it is quite likely that there will be some fine sport. Quite a few large parties have left for Mount Whitney and the region thereabouts, the reports being that the hunting and fishing in that section is all to the good. Judging by the number of parties and the reputation of some of the hunters it is probable that there will be some reports of big shooting on the opening day.

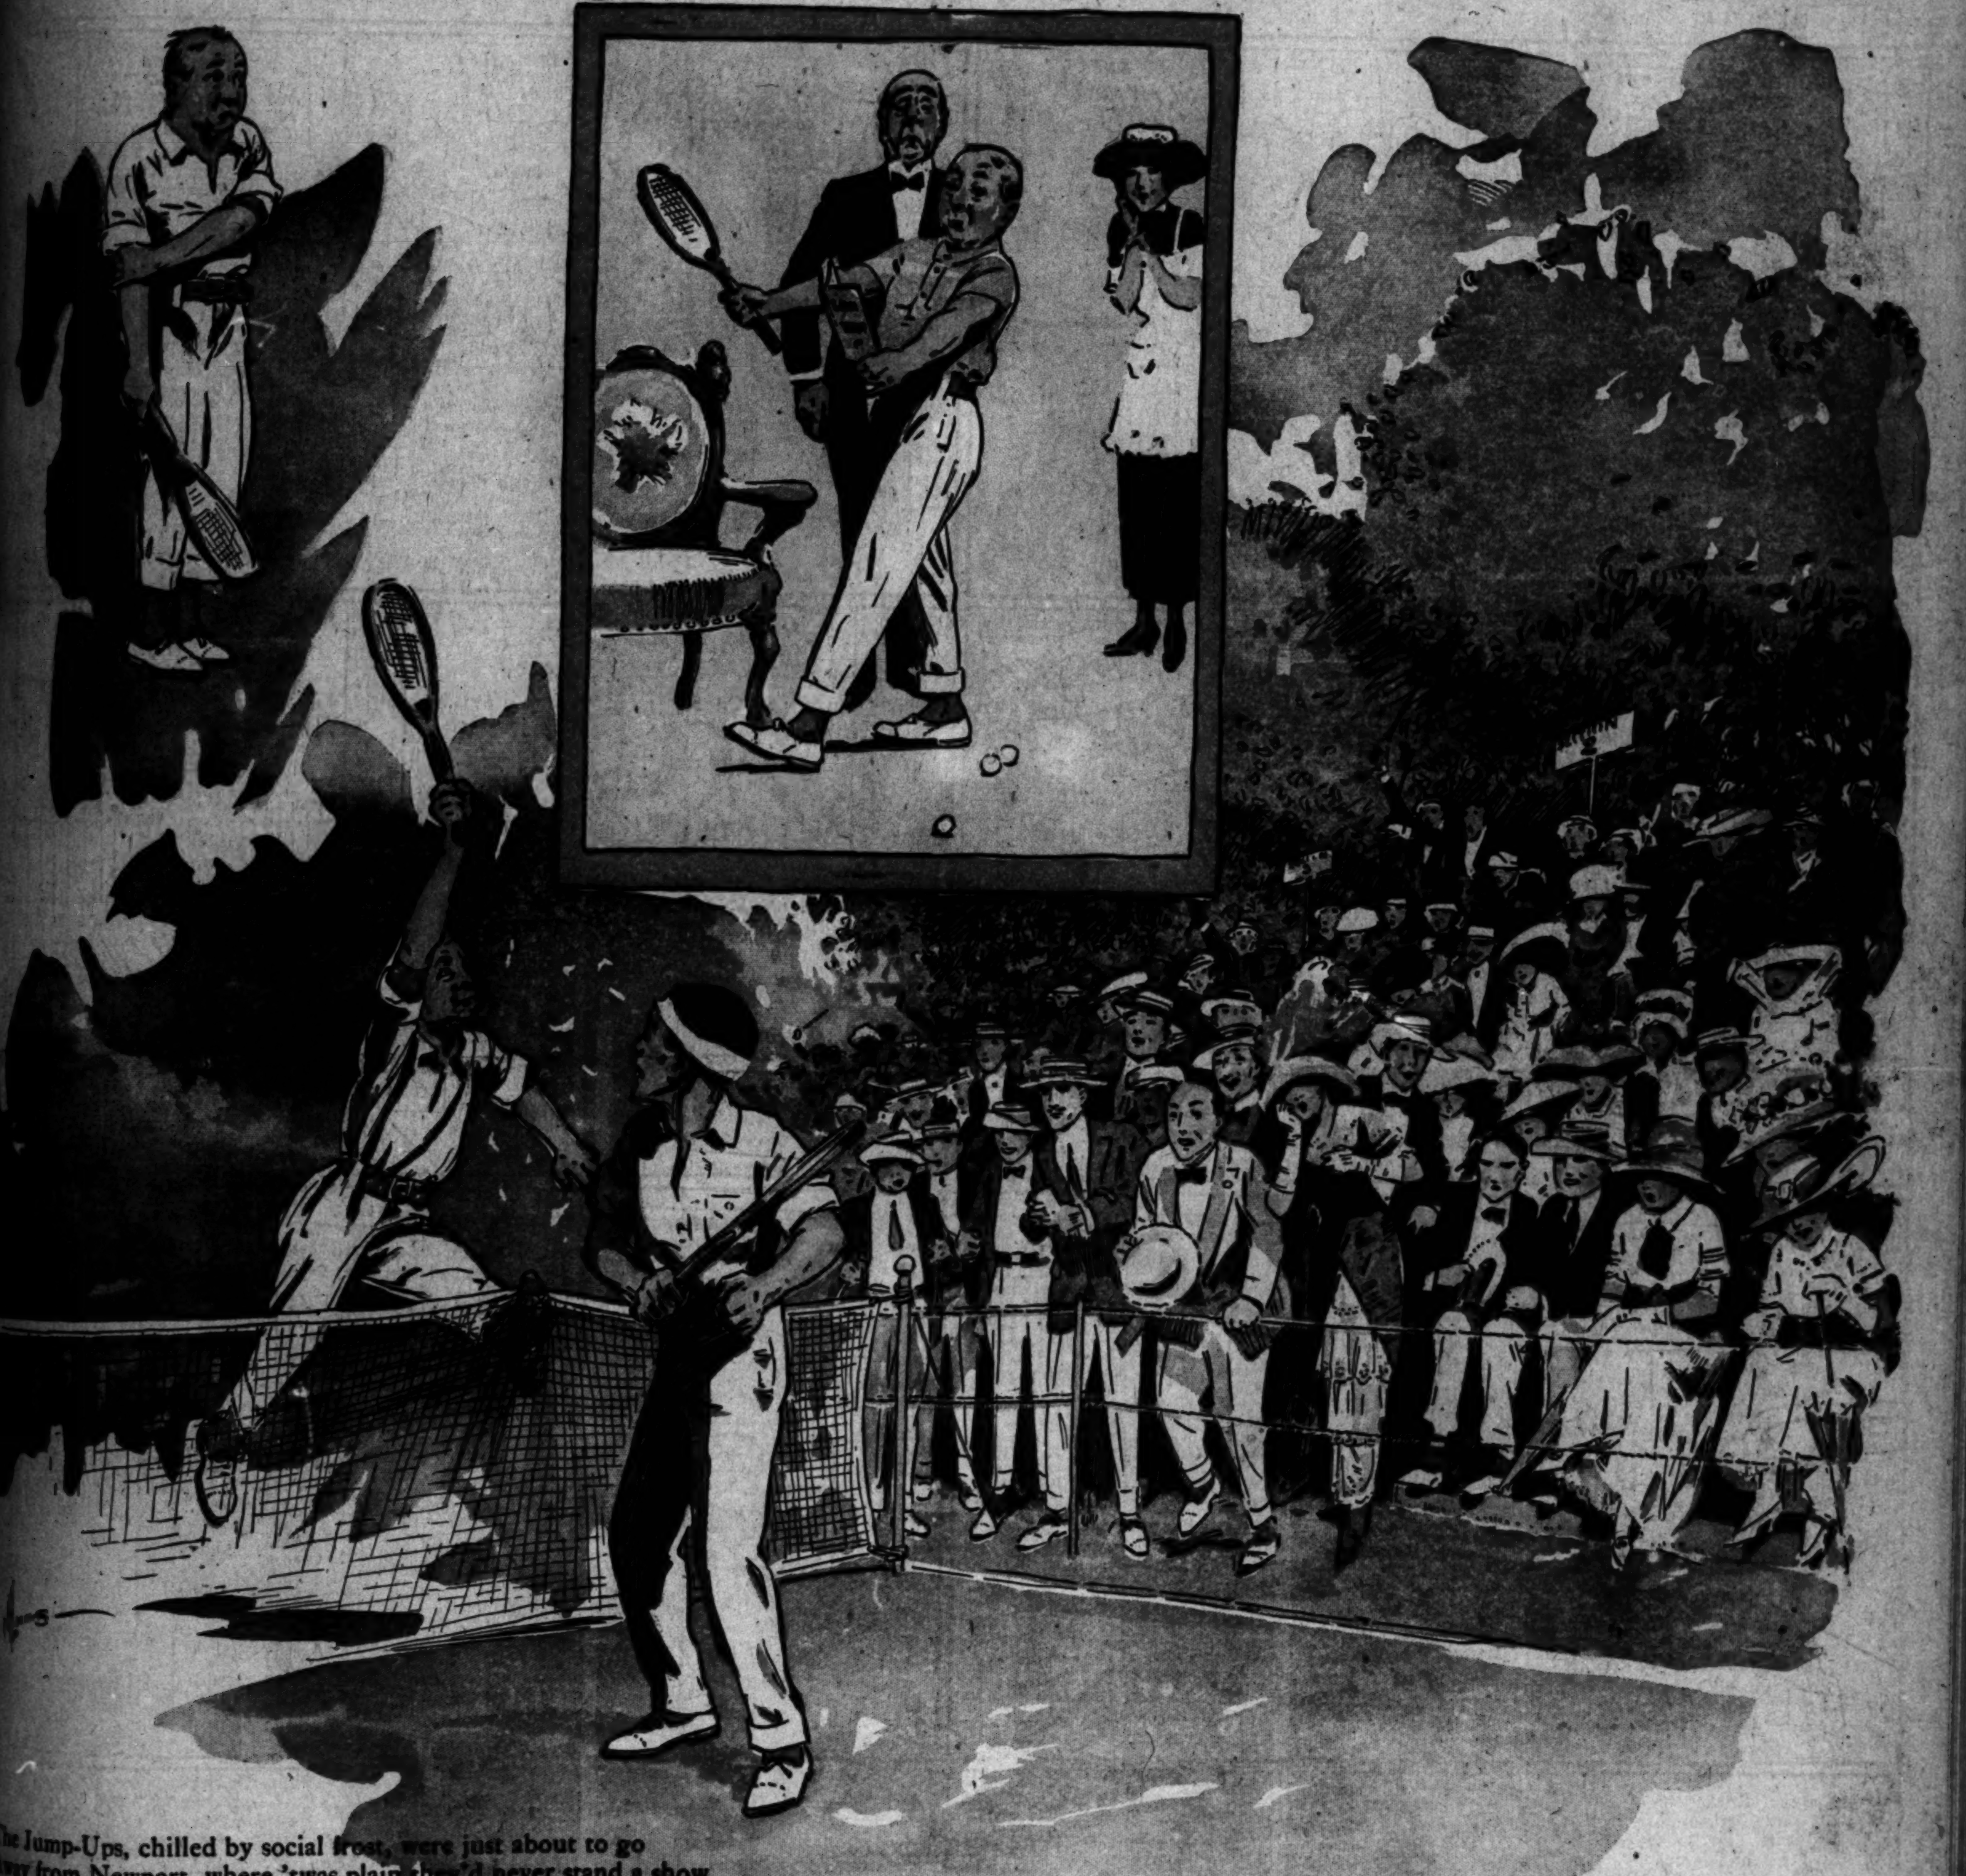
THE JUMP-UPS

VERSES BY PAUL WEST
DRAWINGS BY WM. H. LOOMIS



The Jump-Ups, chilled by social frost, were just about to go
Away from Newport, where 'twas plain they'd never stand a show,
When who should come upon the scene but Mrs. G. Howe Rich,
Who raised the hopes of Genevieve again to concert pitch.

For strictly in the inner set was Mrs. Rich, you know,
And when she took the Jump-Ups 'round it made them quite the go,
Which pleased, of course, fair Genevieve but made Jim shake his head;
"'Cause, gee, I hate society, with all its fluff," he said.

"Ungrateful wretch!" cried Genevieve. "I almost think it's true
'Pigs' ears won't make silk purses' when I hear such talk from you.
Still, I must try to lift you up, and so to-day I went
And entered you, my dearest, in the tennis tournament!"

"Lawn tennis! Gosh!" exclaimed poor Jim. "I never saw the game!"
"What difference?" answered Genevieve. "You'll play it just the same.
I'll buy a book about the rules; you'll study them each day,
And you'll be fit by Saturday—that's when you have to play!"

Well, when the fateful day arrived she sought the tennis court
And thrilled to sit among the crowd, the swells of highest sort;
For everyone was talking of the "Unknown Jump-Up" who,
'Twas said, it was expected some astounding things would do.

Then out came Jim, an abject sight, ashake in every nerve.
His adversary faced him and the balls began to serve;
And Jim—he couldn't see them and he cried: "Hey, not so fast!"
Till finally, by hook or crook, he landed one at last!

His face beamed bright as up it sailed and vanished o'er the wall!
Somehow he thought he ought to run and, spite the shouts of all,
Into the net he dashed pell-mell! It fell and then, alas!
Struggling, entangled in its folds he sprawled upon the grass!

The gay Casino rang with jeers and when they picked him out
He shuffled off, a shame-faced oaf, pursued by such a shout!
"Oh, Jim!" cried Genevieve, that night, "again your worst you've done!"
"Me! Why?" asked Jim, "I hit that ball as fur as any one!"

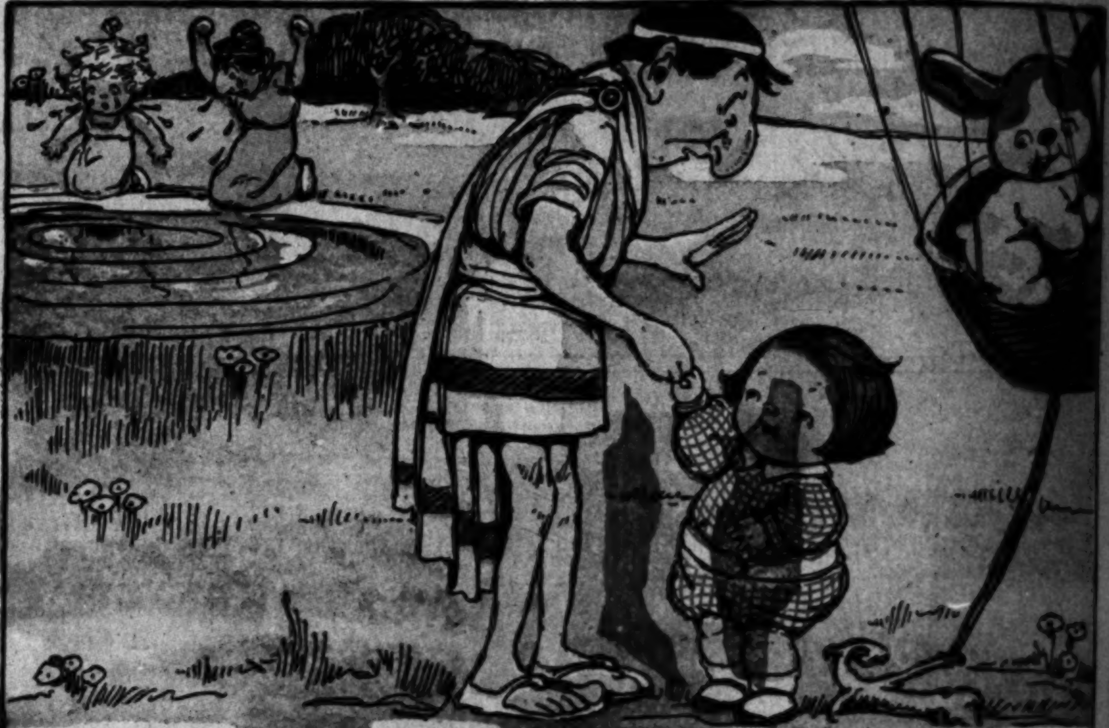
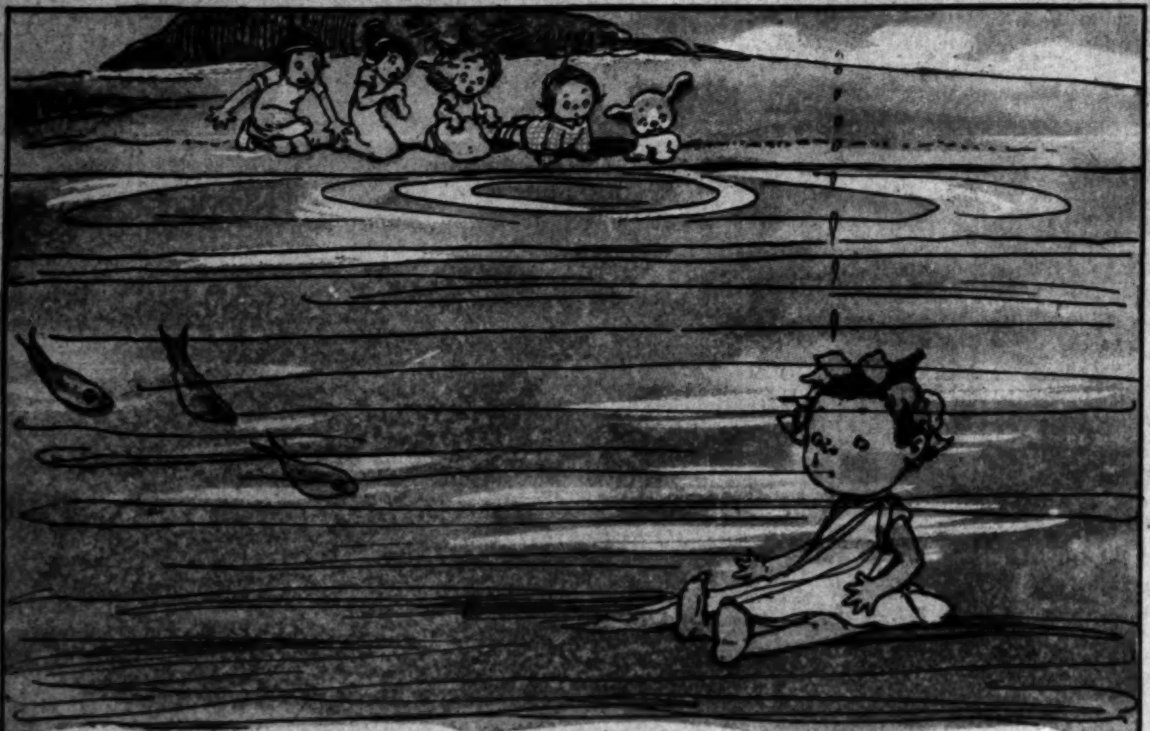
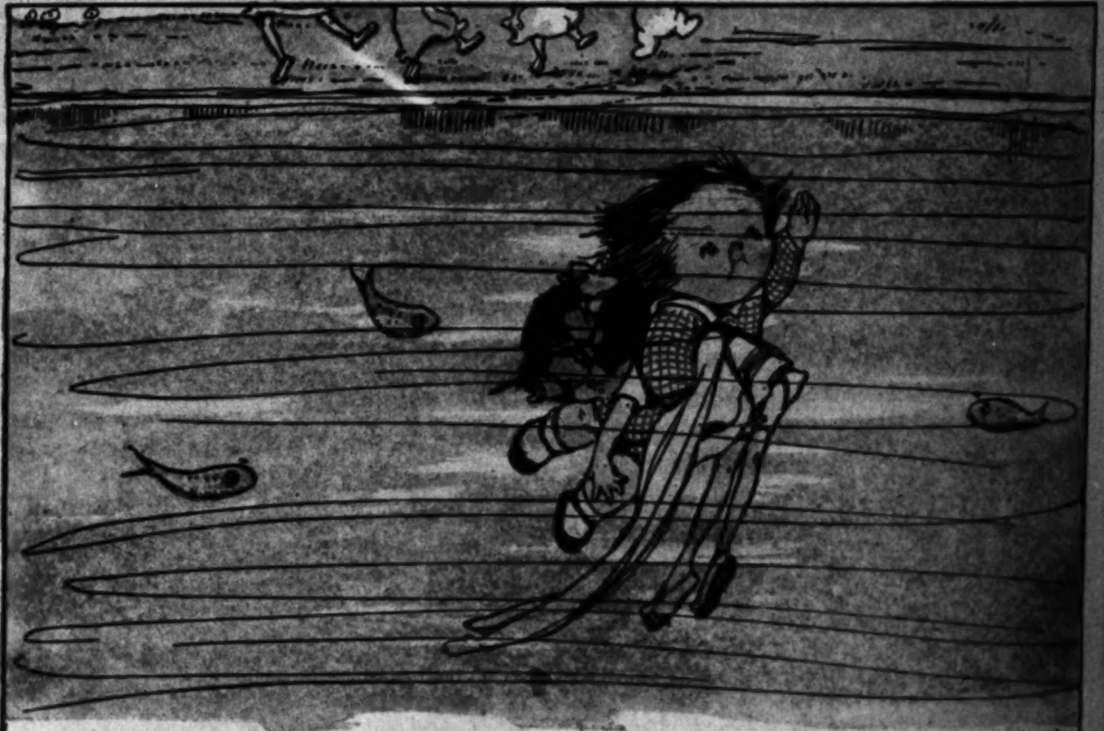
Oncet ther' used to be a place called 'Limpus, an' me'n Puppo we—er—we readed 'bout it, an' mine dee-ar Muvver telled us 'bout it—an' ther' was a gemplum called Jew-Peter was the king o' 'Limpus an' he was married to a lady name o' Jew-nose an' 'ey had lots o' folkses ther'. Ther' was Polly-Oh—soun's like a girl—but Polly-Oh was a boy—an' He-bee—soun's like a boy—but He-bee was a girl.



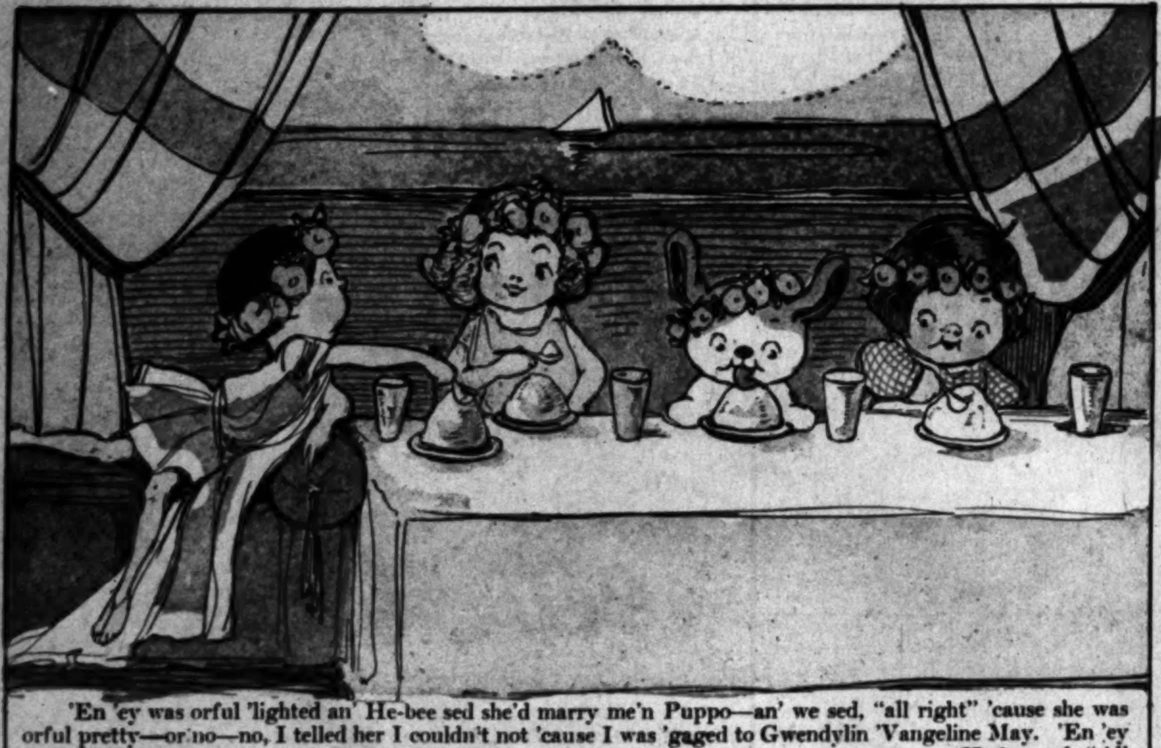
An' one o' those days me'n Puppo gotted two balloons an' we sailed away—'way up to 'Limpus, an' Mr. Jew-Peter said he was orful glad to see us 'cause he sed Polly-Oh had felled into a big deep lake an'—an' he was in it a week or so an' 'ey was 'fraid he'd be all drownded up 'cause poor Mrs. Jew-nose an' He-bee jus' maked the lake deeper cryin' into it ev'ey day—all day long.



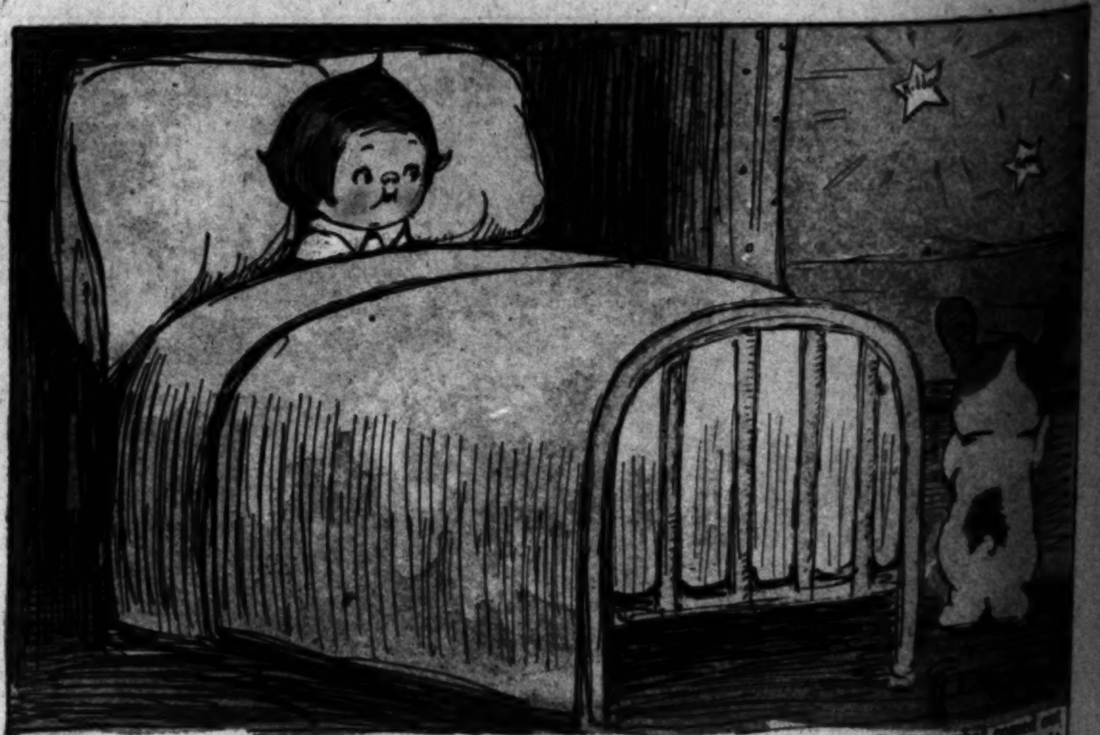
En I sed. "Yes, Mr. Jew-Peter, it's a good fing I comed," I sed, " 'Cause I is Kaptin Kiddo an' I can save Polly-Oh fer you," I sed. 'En I went to the lake an' ther' was poor ol' Polly-Oh 'way down at the deepes' bottom of the lake—an'—an' he was blowin bubbles an'—an' lots o' little bubbles was on top o' the water an' it was a terribliferous sight.



So I—er—putted on a diver's suit what I had in mine pocket—an' Puppo he holded the string o' it an'—an' I dropped down—bang, splash!—into the bottom o' the lake an' I taked poor soppin' wet Polly-Oh under mine arm—he was all flat an' squashy now—an' I swum quickly up to the top o' the lake an' gived him to Mrs. Jew-nose an' He-bee.



'En 'ey was orful 'lighted an' He-bee sed she'd marry me'n Puppo—an' we sed, "all right" 'cause she was orful pretty—or no—no, I telled her I couldn't not 'cause I was 'gaged to Gwendylin 'Vangeline May. 'En 'ey sed 'ey'd marry Puppo—an' Puppo sed "no" he didn't not wanna marry ennyone yet—so He-bee sed, "All right" she didn't care—an' we had a lovely party an' 'ey gived us neck-tar and canned rose bushes to drink—it was hevvingly.



An' we sed we'd go home 'en—an' Mrs. Jew-nose sed she'd call the next two little stars what comed out after me'n Puppo—an' when we goed to bed I looked out o' mine winder an' ther' was two cutes' bright 'ittle stars, an' one o' 'em was marked like 'is, "Puppo"; an' one o' 'em winkled an' twinkled "Oh you Kiddo! TUB FROCKS FOR WARM DAYS

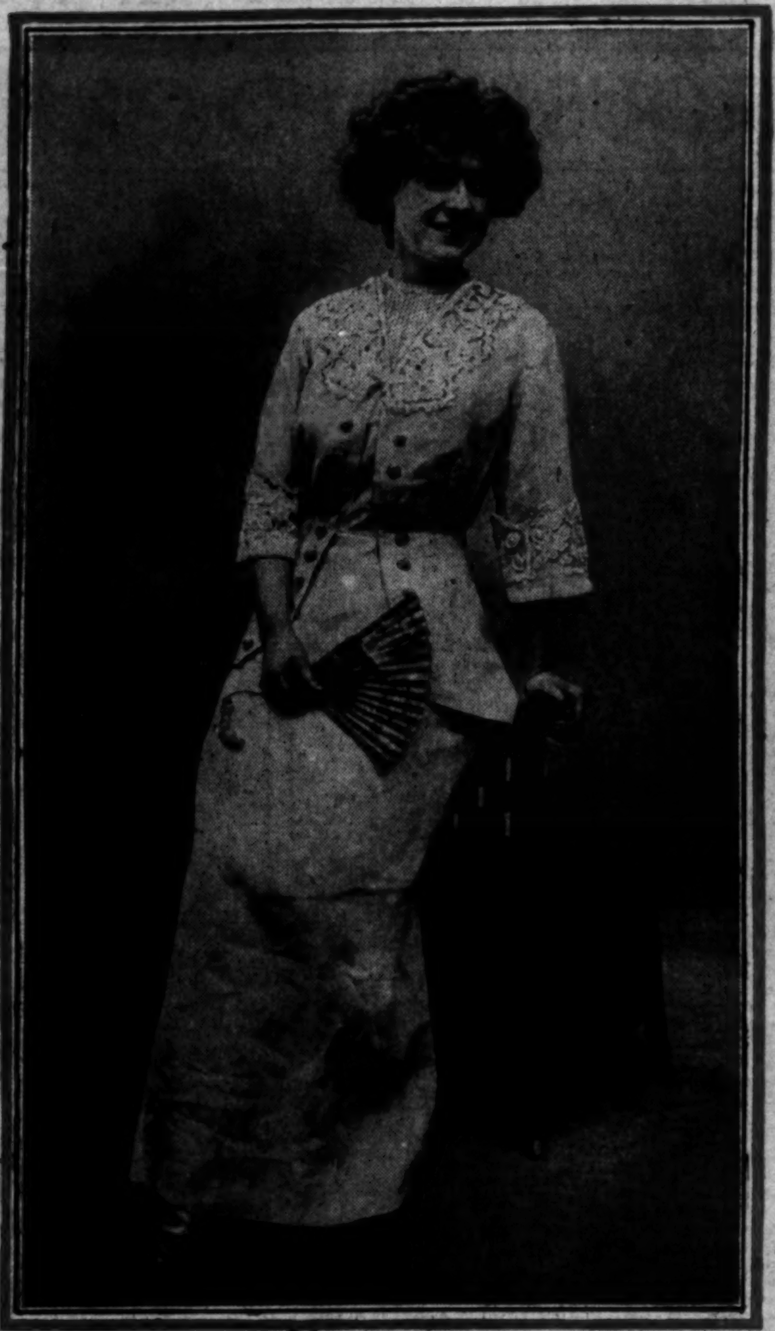
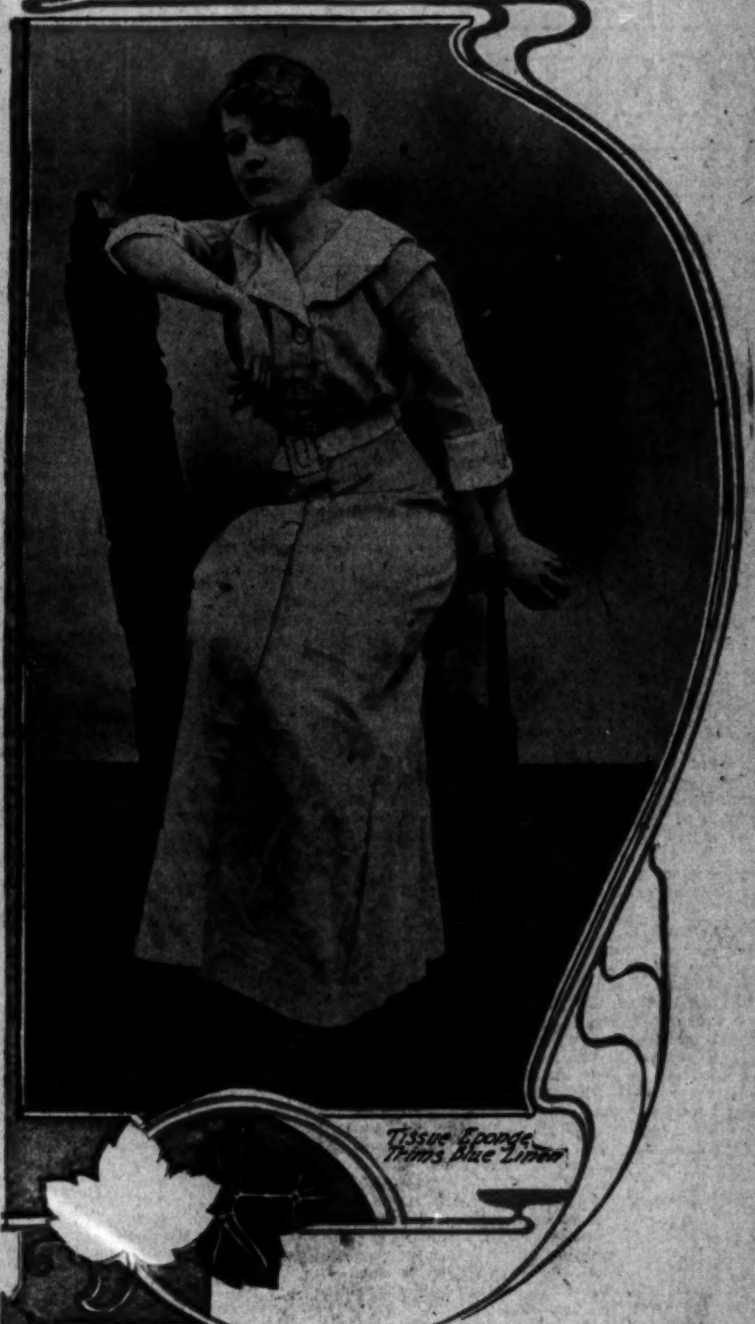
A Coat Effect on Ecru Crash



A Linen Jacket-Dress



Tissue Eponge Trims Blue Linen

W[illegible] more satisfying than a "tub [illegible] on simple, practical [illegible]mbining modishness with a [illegible]hat always appeals to [illegible]

Th[illegible] for warm days cannot be [illegible] in a better way than by washable dresses of cotton or linen, designed to give freedom and needing little or no extra weight and trimming. You will notice that the collarless type predominates in the group before you. Three-quarter sleeves promise comfort for the arms, although long sleeves are in vogue for the woman who prefers to protect hers to the wrist. The inset sleeve and the return of the armhole are features to be noted, while the normal waist line must not be forgotten.

The charming little jacket dress is easily copied. It is a combination of light-blue linen in the jacket over white linen in skirt and vest. A tucked chemisette is used. Wide lace trims the top of the bodice and forms turned-back cuffs on the straight three-quarter-length sleeves. [illegible] of the coat is rounded and buttons [illegible] edges of the jacket. Here is a mod[illegible] linen or cotton remnants.

Crash is combined [illegible] voile in a cool frock that hints of a military style. A broad strip of crash decorated with black braid and white buttons trims the bodice and skirt, extending in a deep hem at the bottom. Taffeta pipings and narrow pleatings are used to give a touch that is decidedly new. The sleeves show decided fullness, with deep cuffs of crash. A pleated lace ruffle heads the bodice.

The new "tissue eponge," resembling turkish toweling, is used for collar and cuffs on the blue linen frock. There are turned-back corners held in place by pearl buttons, and the Gibson pleats over the shoulders give a long shoulder line and fullness. A white leather belt completes the simple and practical style.

The coat effect is exploited in the white frock showing the figured vest of marquisette. The top of the bodice is cut out in a round line, and one side swings over to the left in a curved tab trimmed with buttons. The vest is laid over a chemisette of net trimmed with a double lace ruffle. Subcuffs of the figured marquisette finish the three-quarter sleeves, that are comfortably full.

The popularity of bordered fabrics is apparent in the tub frock. Bordered voile comes to a pretty rescue in the model, that is simple, stylish and inexpensive. A narrow band trims one side of the bodice and skirt. The sleeves have cuffs and pleatings of the border, and a deep band is inset on the skirt at the knees. Buttons in a straight line decorate one side of the frock. A pleated collar finishes the neck line.

Stripes are disposed of in a becoming way in the Russian blouse model. [illegible] tunic is made with vertical stripes, trim[illegible]h white braid in two lines down [illegible] around the lower edge. The und[illegible] lines in the opposite directio[illegible] is of white and is worn u[illegible] The yoke is of embroidery, with a [illegible]eta tie running through a net frill that outlines the rounded top of the bodice.

With clear ideas, a clever hand and inexpensive materials, a frock that will survive the strenuous washing process and emerge in fresh and stylish condition can be fashioned. There is no excuse for a slighting of the tub dress. Fashion has devoted much time and thought to the washable dress. Why not you?

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

POSITION IN THE HOUSEHOLD OF THE ELDER SISTER.

AS is my wont when I can so manage it, I draw the lesson of the day from a correspondent's letter. The subject of which the epistle treats has been much in my mind of late, and was fastened there by a sermon to which I listened last Sunday from an eminent metropolitan clergyman, upon "Martha, the Elder Sister of the Gospels." The picture of the strenuous housemother "distracted" [thus the original runs] about many things, and demanding sharply why the Master did not send Mary to help her instead of encouraging her to sit still and hearken to His teachings, was not pleasing. It was so consistent with what the typical elder daughter of the modern household would do that I could not cavil at the character study.

On Monday morning I found in my mail the communication which is the "motif" of our weekly practical talk.

"I am a widow and have three children—a girl of 20, another of 8, and a boy 11 years of age. These two last came to me to-day in tears, sobbing out their grievance. 'Sister' had just told them that she means to have them study with her during their vacation. They are to recite to her during their vacation. They are to recite to her every day the lessons assigned by her.

"I laughed. 'You must be mistaken,' I said. 'She was only teasing you.'

"'Indeed, no, mamma!' they insisted. 'She meant it! She said that ten weeks is too long a time for us to go without lessons.'

"'Never mind,' I replied, soothingly. 'I will speak to her about it.'

Mother's Power Taken for Granted.

"They ran off, comforted. Like other children, they build much upon 'mamma's speaking about anything.' When I say, 'I'll see about it' thhey take it for granted that the wrong will be righted.

"So, this morning, I went to Margaret's room. She was reading a big learned looking book and her room was as neat as wax. It never gets out of order for the children never play there. I recollected that and was the more certain that she had not thought of using it as a schoolroom. Therefore I began my questions cheerfully.

"'The children came to me with a queer story. It can't be true that you mean to make them study all through vacation?'

"She laughed, pleasantly.

"'So they have told you that already?' she said. 'I didn't say they are to study "all through" their vacation. Sit down, mamma, and I will tell you what I have planned for them. You must acknowledge that ten weeks is too long for children to be left at liberty to run in the streets and to play from morning until night. They will forget what they have learned in term-time. I am going to let them have the whole of the week in which the Fourth of July comes. Then you are going to take them to the country for a fortnight to visit grandmamma. I expect to go to Bar Harbor for ten days with a party of friends in August. After we are settled at home (which will probably be by the middle of the month), they must get to work. Of course, if you want to beg them off for a Saturday now and then to go upon a little excursion, I will excuse them.

Plan All Laid Out.

"'But,' and here she became grave and deliberate, 'I am going to make them study from 9 until 11 in the forenoon—from 2 until 4 in the afternoon. I have thought it all out and I know this will be a wise thing for them. I shall give them review lessons in the morning and advance lessons in the afternoon. You must see what a good thing it will be for the little tikes,' she repeated as I tried to remonstrate. 'Surely, mother'—Margaret never calls me that except when she is determined—'if I am willing to devote so much of my valuable time to them, they ought not to complain. I never did anything more disinterested in all my life.

"'We will have the lessons in the dining room. It is nice and cool there, you know. Of course I shall not expect them to help in the housework, although they might be of use to me in that.'

"You see, she dusts the parlors and looks after other light tasks, such as changing the water in the flower vases, etc. I felt my courage oozing out at my finger ends, but I recollected the sorrowful little faces I had left downstairs.

"'O, Margaret!' I said. 'It is too bad—it seems cruel to take their playtime from them! I told them that I couldn't believe you meant it. I said you were only teasing them, and that I would speak to you about it.'

"A frown came over the pretty face (Margaret is the prettiest and smartest girl I know). 'I am sorry—very sorry you told them that, mother! I was not teasing or fooling with them.' Here she spoke deliberately again. 'Those children have got to study just as I told them! The sooner they make up their minds to submit to the plan the better for all concerned.'

Other Mothers Will Sympathize.

"She turned around to the desk on which the big book was lying and buried her nose in it. I sat for a minute, waiting for her to say something that would make the sentence less severe for the poor little 'tikes,' and as she did not look up from her work I picked up [illegible] and went off to my room. I don't mind saying that I had a good cry before I could quiet myself to tell the children how my mission had failed. Other mothers with clever and determined elder daughters will sympathize with me.

"Now, that I have written out the affair exactly as it happened can you tell me what else I could have done? Do you think that Margaret is in the right? As she says, a large share of the work will fall upon her. She must have the children's good at heart. Yet—ought I to let her overrule my judgment in this case? I seldom oppose her, for she often decides for the best. But, you see, the happiness of the other children is involved. Of course, I understand that when she said, 'the better for all concerned,' she meant me as well as the boy and girl. She is persistent when once she has made up her mind to carry a matter through, and I must confess, conscientious. If it is my duty to oppose her in the present instance how should I go to work to do it? Suppose she will not listen to my pleading and arguments, and insists upon carrying out her 'plan?'

"I am at my wits' end. Can you advise me? PERPLEXED MOTHER."

Name for Petty Tyrant.

I should be more hopeful of helping or comforting you if I did not know already so many houses of households in which "sister's" rule is absolute.

"Sister" is the generic name for the petty tyrant. In some families the word is abhorred by reason of associations with the system which elevates the first born daughter to the rank, not of princess royal but of sovereign.

When I would illustrate the theme by scenes from real life they crowd upon memory so fast and insistently that I am bewildered. With painfully few exceptions the mother lays the corner stone of the hated dynasty. Her girl is by glad anticipation one who is to help her bear the cares and share the responsibilities of domestic life. Her boy may become her lover and her pride. Her daughter is bone of her bone and heart of her heart. The subtle sympathy of sex is intensified by personal vanity in the reproduction of herself. She feels that every throb of the girl's heart is at one with her own longings, joy, and grief.

"Mother's helper," I heard one say as the 8 year old led the 3 year old brother to her mother and told how she had pulled him out of the mud, washed his face and hands, and scolded him into quietude when he screamed and kicked.

"And just see where he bit me, mamma!" was the conclusion of the report. "I really think he ought to be whipped!"

The mother sat the offender down hard upon a chair while she kissed the imprints of the tiny teeth upon the fat arm.

"So do I, my angel! Run out into the yard and bring me a nice big willow switch!"

Enjoyable Scene for Sister.

"Sister" scampered off gleefully to obey the behest, and, I doubt not, stood by as gleefully as it was used upon the howling baby she had dragged to the judgment seat. I did not stay to see sentence executed.

Ten years later I was a little shocked, but not surprised, to hear the father—a mild mannered man in general—remark to a restive girl of 6 who did not hear, or if hearing, did not heed his admonition to stop jumping up and down from a chair to the porch floor:

"Very well, Missy! 'Sister' will be home pretty soon and then you'll catch a jolly whipping!"

"Sister" was by then the omnipotent manager of the house and those that dwelt therein. She was at a fashionable school and the mother was not a "woman of society," whatever might be her ambitions. "Sister" would take the stand her father's wealth and her own accomplishments justified her in claiming.

She changed the church relations of the whole family; she made for herself (not for them) a foothold in the upper circles of her world; she engaged servants, bought furniture, and regulated the going and comings of mother and younger children. In time she married a fresh, good looking fellow, with a long pedigree, and fastened the yoke upon his neck as surely as she had buckled it upon the parents and juniors of her former family.

To this hour she is "Sister," feared by all, adored by the doting mother, detested heartily by the "in-laws," with whom the appellation stands for high handed tyranny that makes womanhood obnoxious.

Temptation Few Resist.

I could multiply the instance by 100 and not exhaust the "waiting list." Much and close observation forced me to the conviction that few mothers rise superior to the temptation to do the flagrant wrong to younger children of setting her whom the accident of birth has sent into the world before their turn came in the seat of the mighty, and commanding them to bow down and worship her. It may be monstrous! It must be natural for her to make the grievous error, or it would not be so common a sight in our eyes.

Our "Perplexed Mother" asks counsel. "If it is my duty to oppose her in the present instance, how shall I go to work to do it?"

The supposition might appall a braver spirit than that of our timorous correspondent. In every line of her letter one reads that she is afraid of the creature she has made. I use the words advisedly. "Made" her as surely as "the Frankenstein" of Mrs. Shelley's wonderful story created the monster that became his tyrant.

"Margaret" did not gain her eminence at a bound, but by graded steps up which she was guided by the mother's hand. In this free republic we claim to have abolished the law of primogeniture. "Sister" gives the lie direct to the assumption, but the law pertains to the female line.

Brother Not Given Superiority.

The elder brother has no superiority to his successors of the same sex. On the contrary, he not infrequently bears the burden and the heat of the earlier days of comparative poverty and struggle upward. He goes to work by the time he has been graduated from a public school—sometimes before—and helps to accumulate the wealth which justifies the parents in sending his brothers to college and abroad. In the event of the father's death before affluence is secured, mother and sisters and "the boys" look to him as the support of the family.

"Sister" is pampered from the cradle. In the case under observation, maternal pride is evident between the lines and speaks out boldly, even exultantly, several times, so It is plain to see how the "prettiest and cleverest girl she knows" is rated by the parent while she winces under the injustice done to her bairns. The princess royal did not come to her queendom with the declaration to the sobbing children of her designs upon their vacation liberties. Twenty years of conscious power were at her back when she met the mother's solicitous smile with one as calm and bright as the June day. She knew her ground, as well she might! She was consistent as well as persistent.

"Mother's helper" has had, with her, joint management of the children until she takes, as her birthright, authority over them—and incidentally over their common parent. As natural as her assumption of this is the touch of indignation and wounded feeling when the mother fails to perceive and appreciate the nobility of her self-sacrifice in behalf of the ungrateful rebels. She would disprove the maternal boast of her cleverness were she not sure of the result of the weak remonstrance.

Matter Settled in Her Mind.

"I am going to do it," falls as serenely and confidently from the cherry lips at the close of the interview as at the beginning. "La reine le veut!" The return to the tome from which the insignificant incident had withdrawn her attention for a few minutes is not affectation. The matter is settled for good and all. Whatever I might advise, and in spite all correspondents might urge against the measure, those children will have a spoiled vacation.

On that head I have little to urge upon the mother. Margaret may be partly in the right in the belief that a few hours of study per diem for three or four weeks out of ten will not harm her recalcitrant subjects.

What I maintain is that violence is done to nature and justice when scepter and crown are passed over by the queen mother to one child at the expense of the others. I assert that it is preposterous to expect from a young girl who has chanced to precede her brothers and sisters into life such stability of judgment and sagacity, knowledge of human nature, and moderation of speech and conduct as would justify any parent in delegating to her the right to control and to correct those who are her inferiors in naught but years.

You, my candid reader, know the type—the generic "sister"—as well as I do. Perhaps you have had more reason than I to objurgate the injustice of setting her over your head when you were powerless to defend your rights. With some I wot of the recollection rankles and burns like the tiny thorns of the prickly pear.

Violence Done to Nature.

I have said that the favoritism on the part of the mother which leads to the result I have but feebly depicted is violence done to nature, which ordains that each child shall have a fair share in the parent's affection and fair treatment at the parent's hands. To set one child over the others with authority hardly, if at all secondary to that vested in father and mother, is surely to act disastrously.

First is the injustice done the younger and often equally deserving child, and the unfortunate influence of a consciousness of that wrong in the heart of the slighted brother or sister. I could cite instances of families divided against themselves into two parties—the mother, who considers herself aggrieved by the defection of her offspring—the other and larger faction leagued against "sister" and her works.

Usually, out of love for the mother, the sedition is inward and partially checked for the sake of conventional decency combined with filial piety. It is there, all the same! A sullen fire that is never quenched. It is a marvel that the mother, whose injudicious infatuation [illegible] ing has wrought the evil, never blames herself for the wreck.

One of the best and most [illegible] I ever saw went down to her grave lamenting that "Julia's brothers and [illegible] never understood the dear girl." To [illegible] the smart caused in the tender heart [illegible] "sister," the mother redoubled her demonstrations of fondness. Julia, who in the parent's estimation had never been guilty of intentional wrongdoing and whose motives were absolutely pure, was [illegible] tenderness that augmented the [illegible] like felt by the defrauded majority of the brood.

If they were not pampered that she might be made rich in all that makes [illegible] worth living, they believed that they were. To this day, when mother and [illegible] daughter have slept in the tomb for a score of years, the survivors are chary of allusions to their early life. Each has hidden memories of childish suffering and youthful conflicts with the usurper that lie too deep for words.

"Sister's" Character Warped.

Second—and scarcely less unfortunate in the long run—is the mischief wrought in the character of the petted "sister." Brought up with an exaggerated sense of her own importance in the family and world, instead of wholesome, if bitter, disillusion, disappointment and chagrin are her inevitable portion when she passes beyond the charmed circle formed by the fairy wand of maternal devotion. Others will not accept her at her own valuation. She is called exacting, ill tempered and overbearing. Unless the groundwork of her character be singularly fine and strong, she comes to merit the reputation. As a rule, the "spoiling of the child" is a job that lasts for a lifetime.

"What can I do?" moans our [illegible] ing mother, borne down into the dust of humiliation by blended devotion for "Margaret," whose only drawback even now in the parent's eyes is her "persistence." If by some odd twist of circumstance "sister" is not quite right in the present case, "how am I to go to work to oppose her?" One could laugh if the query did not tempt one to cry instead. As well hope to dam a millrace in a freshet with a foot rule or think to undo the work of twenty years in an hour or in twelve months.

Nevertheless, so intelligent and well meaning a woman should make a desperate effort to hold fast to the right in the matter of the children's vacation. Or so I think.

I pass the vexed question over into the strong, deft hands of correspondents. Let us hear from "capable" mothers and clear eyed fathers.

What shall be done with "sister"?

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND

I AM happy to present to our members the rest of the homely household hints contributed by "Mrs. G. W. M.," some of which we had last week.

"Try straining starch through a fine colander. It will be lumpless and save washing when you come to the starched clothes.

"TO PREVENT HARDWOOD FLOORS FROM SCRATCHING.—Cut round pieces from any old rubber articles, making sure that they are all of the same size, and fasten upon the chair legs where they touch the floor. Use a small and flat headed tin tack in doing this. Then trim around the edges evenly, that the rubber may not project beyond the wood.

"Get marble dust from a stonecutter's shop and use in place of scouring dust in cleaning metal vessels, steel knives, etc. The effect will be good and the process is inexpensive. If you cannot get the marble dust there are always marble chips lying around the shop. When pounded fine they should be sifted through a cheesecloth, and are excellent as a substitute for scouring powders. I have used this for years, and never buy scouring powder of any patented kind.

"TO REMOVE INK FROM A CARPET.—Cover the spot with salt as soon as the ink is spilled and let the liquid soak up all it will. Leave the salt on for a day, brush off and renew if necessary. A big handful of salt is not too much.

"TO PATCH OVERALLS.—Try stitching the patch firmly on with the sewing machine. This is easily done if the patch be first basted in place. It will last longer and take less time and labor than when stitched by hand.

"Turn your cotton mattresses over at least three times a week. They will last longer and be softer for the change.

"MRS. G. W. M."

Domestic Science Questions.

"I dearly love to talk 'Domestic Science.' So will you please answer a few questions for me?

"Tell me the secret of having good custards (baked), just the plain kind, made with milk and eggs. I find it hard to get them just right. Why will they sometimes turn watery?

"How is one to steam custards, puddings, etc.? Do you set them down in the water, or over it? Do you put a top upon the pudding and also upon the steamers? What kind of mold is best?

"Now, just a word about salt-raising bread! Do you think it unwholesome? And why do my loaves crack upon the top or at the side when I bake them?

"I have quite a fine reputation for that kind of bread in my neighborhood, and, strange to say, I cannot make any other! I do not put either salt or sugar in the yeast—sponge I make overnight—just boiling milk and meal. If kept warm this is as light as a puff by morning. I think this sponge is what makes the bread fine.

"MRS. W. S. L."

The secret of cooking custards is to set the dish in hot water and the outer and inner vessels in a good oven. Put an inverted plate over the dish containing the custard, and leave it there for fifteen minutes. Remove then, and brown delicately. As soon as the custard is fairly set in the middle, and a knife-blade thrust into it perpendicularly comes out clean, it is done. If left longer in the oven it will "break," separating into curds and whey, or, as you say, becoming "watery."

We sometimes say that we steam puddings or bread or dumplings when we put them into a mold with a tightly fitting top, and cook them in boiling water. This is really boiling them. Any mold with a closely fitting top will do. One with a funnel in the middle is perhaps safer, as the heat is diffused more evenly through the mass than if there be no such tube.

In a regular "steamer" the water does not reach the pudding or other substance to be cooked. The steamer is set over a vessel of hard boiling water, into the mouth of which it fits closely. All the rising steam is driven through tiny holes in the bottom of the upper vessel and cooks the contents.

You may improvise a steamer by setting the mold containing the raw materials in a colander and fitting this into the top of the pot of hot water. Cover the colander with a plate or the top of a large saucepan, and this with a thick cloth. The mold should also be fitted with a top. A pudding may be cooked in a floured bag laid in the colander, if you have no mold.

Salt-rising bread is considered wholesome when properly made.

The cause of the cracking of your loaves probably is too rapid or uneven baking. The pans should be turned in the oven when they are half done. Do this quickly, shaking the pans as little as possible, and closing the door again immediately, lest the air may cause the bread to fall.

To Solve Meat Problem.

"I note repeated references in The Helping Hand to the necessity of economy in the preparation of meals and in the purchase of materials.

"The principal meal of the day should include meat. If the others consist of homemade bread, a beverage—milk, tea, or coffee—butter and fruit, you will find the cost of living reduced from 10 to 20 per cent. And the normal healthy appetite will find it delicious and satisfactory.

"When baker's bread is substituted for homemade, there is an unsatisfied sensation and a craving for a more elaborate meal.

"The average cost of each of my meals is but a fraction over 10 cents.

"MRS. H. O. B."

The exigencies of the times if nothing else are forcing sensible economists to reduce the quantity of meat consumed in their homes. We should be healthier and richer at the end of the year were our meat bills cut down to one-half their present size. I wrote an appeal to housemothers a year or so ago, to deny their children the second help of meat every boy thinks he must have, no matter how liberal the first may have been. I know the growing boy is said to be "hollow down to his heels." It is written nowhere by nature or by Providence that the hollow should be stuffed with meat alone, or principally with this. Fill him up with good home made bread, vegetables, and milk with a simple sweet, all of which may be more easily and quickly assimilated and converted into sound flesh, bone, muscle, and blood, and feed the blood far better than fibrous and fat meats, even when they are tender. And this cheap cuts seldom are.

Reducing Cost of Living.

Our semi-vegetarian writes from Iowa. From Missouri we have a story that varies materially in some respects from hers, yet it is worth reading and commands careful consideration.

"I set a good table for five persons (three of them children) for $[illegible] a month. I may not practice the small economies advised by some, but I am saving in every way. I think it is doing pretty well to feed each of my quintet for $[illegible] per week. We run through the whole gamut of vegetables—green and dried. We have good cuts of meat, of which we eat sparingly, and vary these with chicken and fish. Our breakfasts are extremely simple; our luncheons nourishing, and our dinners good. Eggs have fallen from [illegible] to 20 cents—the present price. We use quantities of fruits, fresh and dried, and canned milk. Milk is [illegible] cents for eight pints. We have, in fact, every good thing the market affords.

"MRS. E. K."

A schedule of prices that makes the hearts of some of us burn with desire, if not with envy. With eggs at 20 cents a dozen, the frugal housewife can get no cheaper substitute for meat than an omelette or other variation upon plain boiled eggs. A Spanish omelette, made of six eggs with a filling of a tomato, a green pepper, and seasoning of celery salt, butter, and a dash of sugar to temper the tomato acid, is a good dinner for our Missouri matron's quintet. When eggs fall to 20 cents per dozen it is as a bargain loving woman said of silk when it was "down," "cheaper to buy than to leave them."

Care of Mattings.

"Summer is upon us, with the cooler mattings in place of thick carpets and rugs. It is a blessed relief to some of us in more ways than one. They are not half the trouble to take care of and they harbor no moths or germ breeding dust. Suffer a few words anent these cleanly and comely floor coverings.

"CARE OF MATTING.—All housewives know how matting will ravel when cut to fit corners, door frames, and along bias edges and before fireplaces. To avoid this wet with a sponge or a piece of white cheesecloth which has been dipped into warm—not hot—water. This moistening will make the edges of the matting so pliable that it may be bent into any form and in any direction without breaking, and so make a durable folded edge.

"J. G. S."

A bright idea that should save the edges of tempers and avoid a deal of perplexity and mortification. Our mothers had every raw edge of their Chinese and India matting bound with stout tapes or galloon of a contrasting color. The scarlet and blue borders about doors and hearths were as unsightly while they held their color. When faded they were an eyesore. And the work of binding the stiff mattings was arduous. The simple expedient here advised is a welcome short cut to a desirable end.

Ironing Board Help.

"You ask for contributions of practical information from working housewives. This may not be thrown away upon somebody who has to do her own laundry work.

"THE IRONING BOARD.—I have found a new way of padding the ironing board. First, tack on an old soft blanket about the board. Next put a layer of cotton batting, and over this sew tightly unbleached muslin. Lastly, put on the cover and the work is done.

"ELLA B."

When I was a girl I used to see the old colored laundresses iron our fine and embroidered muslin gowns upon a board covered with flannel. The process made the figures stand out and smooth, with a "new" effect, and [illegible] "moire," like that they had when new and sheer. I fancy that your blanket and padded board will produce the same to some extent. Clothes pressed upon it will not wear out so soon in the washing as when ironed upon a hard, uncovered surface.

Recipe for Boiled Coffee.

"As one who still prefers the good old boiled coffee to the French 'drip,' may I send in my recipe?

"CLARIFIED COFFEE.—Break a fresh egg into a large bowl and beat light. Empty into this a pound of freshly roasted whole bean coffee. Mix until each bean is thoroughly coated with the egg. Spread upon a large pan and set in the oven to dry. Stir occasionally to prevent burning, and when all is dry set in the air to cool before putting into the canister.

"Coffee prepared thus will retain its aroma and flavor and be thoroughly clarified.

"MRS. J. E. W."

Another good old fashioned method that should always hold its own by reason of intrinsic merit. [illegible] coffee is the stronger and more fragrant for the egg coating, no matter how it is made. The beans are hermetically sealed [illegible] until they are ground, [illegible] ing in flavor.

FOR THE SERVING PLATTER

designed by Anna J. Loos

If you could only see this design [illegible] in its entire beauty! Half of it is attractive enough, but twice that is positively convincing. I showed it to one of my friends yesterday, and she resolved to join the ranks of the [illegible]. You see what a pretty thing it will be.

It is a large oval centerpiece, to be placed under the serving platter on the dining table. If worked in colors on tan or gray linen, it will decorate the oval library table or the long hall table.

There are so many ways of working it that I know you are eager to begin.

Mercerized cotton or silk may be used with success. The lovely design can be worked in either solid or eyelet, and if you like a combination, why, you can easily use both.

The basket is worked in outline stitch, then cut the outlining and whip the [illegible] threads together. This will give the work a heavy, cord-like appearance that is very good looking.

Now for the flowers. If you are going to work them solid, you will pad the length of the petals with darning cotton. The [illegible] stitch fills the oval space very quickly. The solid petals and eyelet centers make an effective showing.

Outline the stems and work the leaves in either solid or eyelet stitch.

Stem stitch should fill in the handle of the basket. Another effective way is to outline each side and fill in with seed stitching, which is nothing but fine back stitches.

When you work the bow, you can use one of the following methods:

Solid Kensington stitch, which runs parallel with the edge of the ribbon and fills in the place in smooth beauty, takes some time. It gives a satiny finish, though, that resembles a bow of ribbon. No padding is required.

Another way is to outline the edges, whip them and then fill in the space with seed stitching running the length of the ribbon. This is very effective.

Some women like the bow worked crosswise after padding. This gives an entirely different effect, and if raised work be to your liking, it is to be recommended.

The wreaths at the side of the centerpiece give excellent opportunity for eyelet work. Your own preference will determine how you will work it.

Pad the scallops with darning cotton and work with buttonhole stitches, giving a second treatment, so that no fraying will result.

There! You have the design, the main points in working, and I know you have the enthusiasm. Begin on this lovely centerpiece, for I have a store of other beautiful designs coming.

Summer Pajamas for Boys

THE mother of boys will find the problem of expense greatly simplified if she will make their pajamas and shirts at home.

A really well-made set of pajamas, ready made, costs from $1 to $1.50, and as it takes but four yards of single-width material to make a set for a 14-year-old boy, counting the cost of material at 15 cents a yard; buttons, 3 cents; a spool of cotton, 5 cents, and tape enough for several sets, 5 cents, you can readily see how by making them yourself your boy can have two sets for the price of one ready made.

If your boy already has pajamas that have been bought ready made, you can take the pattern of them to cut the new ones by; if not, a paper pattern can be bought at any first-class shop.

For durable wear select the softest, [illegible] material you can find that has body enough to stand the wear and tear of frequent laundering. The very best material for this purpose is silk pongee, a cotton [illegible] with a silk thread woven through it. The cotton pongees also make cool, comfortable garments of this kind. Either of these materials can be bought at 15 cents, or less, per yard.

The best way to cut the material for pajamas is to lay it doubled on a table, and then lay the pattern on with the [illegible] of coat, sleeve portions, collar and pocket on the straight of the material and the back of the coat having its center on a lengthwise fold.

Stitch up the side and shoulder seams of the coat first with a French or lapped seam, join the sleeves with a plain seam and whip the raw edges. The sleeves are sewed into the coat with [illegible] seams; the coat's front is hemmed; buttonholes are worked on the [illegible] side and buttons sewed on the other side; the collar is then attached to the coat with a felled seam. The bottoms of the coat and sleeves are finished with a plain hem. You may add a small pocket to the upper left-hand side of the coat if you wish.

Remember that the trousers legs must not be fitted too tight, and if the boy is [illegible], it is best to allow extra width when you are cutting them. Sew up the legs with a French or felled seam when joining the crotch and leave an opening about four inches long in the front. [illegible] this on one side, and on the other side under stitch a two-inch wide [illegible]. The top is finished with a two-inch casing, through which runs a piece of [illegible], which ties around the waist. Each leg is finished with a hem around the bottom.

Pajamas are really very easy to make, once you get started. Those of silk or pongee are a delight to any boy or man, and, if made at home, will cost little compared with the price of those ready made.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you [illegible] to any material before working. [illegible] the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, [illegible], etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the [illegible] the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the [illegible] and turn the other side to the [illegible]; the strong light behind will [illegible].

[illegible] carbon paper, you should [illegible] between your fabric and [illegible]. This latter is on top. [illegible] pencil go over the outline [illegible]. The impression will be [illegible] will last until [illegible]. The method is successful on [illegible].

[illegible] way is also easy. On wax [illegible] paper trace [illegible] when the design [illegible] over the paper [illegible] the pattern with a heavy [illegible]. Then place the design [illegible] and redraw the [illegible] pressing hard with the pencil. [illegible] will be transferred without [illegible]. [illegible] way is easy.

A Bead Necklace

MOST girls love to wear a pretty string of beads, especially with their frocks and blouses that are cut a bit low in the neck. But every girl cannot afford to buy the beautiful and curious bead necklaces that are now so fashionable.

Sometimes these cost many dollars and are considered to be very valuable possessions; and, indeed, the curiously wrought oriental-looking beads make a charming finish to the neck of any gown.

Do not despair if you cannot afford to buy; make a bead chain for yourself, and be happy.

Very lovely are those made of large round or elongated Venetian beads alternating with strings of fine gold beads.

At the antique shops you can purchase the Venetian beads (get eighteen of them for a fifteen-inch necklace), and a bunch of the small gold beads that can be purchased at any art needlework department at the larger stores, and a little gold-filled clasp for the back.

String twelve beads and then a Venetian bead, and repeat this until you have used up all of the eighteen large beads. Use strong linen thread that has been waxed for the work; thread this into as fine a needle as it will take, or if the needle is too coarse, wax the end of the thread until it is stiff, then push this through the hole in the beads. Attach the clasp by tying the thread in a small tight knot at the end and covering it with a small bead.

Oriental beads of porcelain or glass are beautiful when combined with the small gold or silver beads. Beads of opalescent crystal are also very beautiful, and can be worn with any colored dress.

If you want a long chain of beads, make the thread when finished fifty-four inches long. This will do either to wind several times around the neck or to fasten the watch to and wear tucked into the belt of your blouse.

Since these bead chains are so generally favored, why not make yourself one or two to add charm to your summer frocks?

Filling for Summer Cushions

ANY woman can make herself a number of inexpensive cushions for the summer bungalow or the porch of the little house in the country by cutting a roll of cotton batting into small squares and heating it in a baking pan in the oven for half an hour. Each little square of cotton will fluff up to twice its natural size, and will be as light as a feather; but you must take care not to have the oven too hot or it will scorch.

Use half a roll of cotton for each pillow, filling a muslin slip eighteen inches square. Cover this with a dainty slip of some material that will wash well—silkoline, flowered chintzes and cretonne or a gayly stamped cover that can be bought for the purpose—and your summer cushions will be a joy for the entire season.

For Home Dressmakers

WHEN a seam becomes wrinkled in sewing on the machine, dampen it slightly and press it on the right side with a warm iron, laying a piece of the same material over it and pulling the seam gently as you run the iron over it. This will shrink the material and the seam will become quite smooth.

When putting a hem in a skirt, loosen the stitch on the machine and stitch around the edge of the material. This will draw in any fullness and it will be unnecessary to lay darts or pleats in the goods when the hem is sewed in.

Helpful Hints

IN ORDER to keep the correct width in drawn work it is best to always draw the threads by measurement, rather than by counting them, as the threads in even the best linen are sometimes of uneven thickness.

One of the most useful things to keep in the sewing basket is a small pair of tweezers to pull out stubborn threads left in the basting, especially those that the sewing machine stitching has gone over.

A labor saver when basting straight seams is to use the little wire paper clips to hold the material together, instead of sewing the seam the full length. They will hold it perfectly even and will not fall out, as is the danger with pins.

A satisfactory way to prevent hand-buttonholed scallops from fraying is carefully to cut away the material from the edge of the finished scallop and overcast, bringing the needle up inside the purled edge, making very small stitches.

When Yokes Shrink

FEW of us have escaped the horror of finding, after our summer frocks or guimpes have been returned from the laundry for the first time, that the yoke has shrunk and the collar is entirely too tight for comfort. It is the experience of almost every woman before the season of thin, cool frocks is over, and one that few know how to remedy.

Should the yoke of your frock require to be enlarged, add the width at the center of the back and the shape of the yoke will not be spoiled.

This can be done either by letting out the hem in the back and facing the raw edges or by inserting a narrow lace insertion on the inside of the hem each side of the opening.

The fact that almost every lace or embroidery yoke opens in the back makes this a simple task, and as a yoke rarely requires more than an inch of additional width, simplifies the matter greatly.

Don't despair if you are confronted with a too tight yoke; make it comfortably large in this manner.

Summer Hatpins

SMALL handmade lace medallions of Irish crochet are delightful little covers for pins worn in the summer hat.

Select smooth-topped hatpins, any size you like best, although it is best not to have them over one inch and a half in diameter, and cover their tops with pieces of dark-colored silk or satin. Have white satin for the all-white hat, and crochet dainty lace covers, placing a little lace flower in the center of each. The pintop is covered with silk first and then the lace cover is sewed on underneath the pin's head. These can be easily taken off and washed if they become soiled.

USES FOR OLD KID GLOVES

THERE are many uses for the tops of your old kid gloves. Do not consign them to the scrapbasket before you have tried at least some of the useful and dainty ways to utilize them.

A very lovely little handbag is made from the tops of both gloves; if they are sixteen-button length, so much the better; but the bag can be made from twelve-button length gloves.

Cut the glove tops off as close to the wrist opening as possible, then cut the seam off very close. This will give two pieces about six inches wide at the bottom and eight inches wide at the top. Lay them together and cut them eight inches long, or, if that is not possible, as near to that length as you can.

Keeping the widest part for the top, lay the pieces with the right sides together and stitch them on the sewing machine, rounding off the corners at the bottom. One inch and a half from the top cut slits one-half inch long as you would for a buttonhole, placing them one inch apart. These you may outline with the buttonhole stitch if you wish, although they do just as well if left with a raw edge, and through them run half-inch-wide ribbon matching the color of the kid, or a silken cord of the same color, to draw the mouth of the bag together.

Have your monogram stamped on one side of the bag, or, if you are clever with a pencil, you may mark it yourself. This is to be embroidered with silk floss or outlined with small crystal beads and filled in with gold or silver beads. The decoration can be in a conventional design and carried out in any way you like best; but the beaded designs are most effective.

These little bags can be lined with silk or satin, as you wish, or can be left unlined if the kid is of a good, thick quality.

Unusual and very attractive are flowers for the hat that are made from the tops of suede gloves. The tops of a pair of white or colored gloves (not black), a spool of fine milliner's wire, a steel knitting needle and an awl or very large needle for punching holes and you are ready for work.

In a wreath encircling a natural-colored straw hat white kid was used for the flowers and golden brown for the leaves and calyx. A paper pattern having five flower-shaped petals and a simple leaf design having five sections, also a five-pointed star a little smaller than the flower pattern, were cut out. The flowers were 2½ inches in diameter and the other portions cut accordingly; but you may suit yourself in size.

Lay the pattern on the kid and mark the outline with the knitting needle; do not use a pencil or the marks will show; then cut out very carefully and toss them into a basin of cold water.

When they have become thoroughly wet through, take out and absorb the superfluous water with a towel or by laying them between blotting paper. While they dry cut a little cut thin strips of the kid four inches long and wind around the wire for the stems, securing each end with a drop of glue. Make stamens of a strip of kid one-half inch wide and 1½ inches long, cut in quarter-inch slits on one side. Roll this around the end of the stem wire and, punching a hole through the center of the flower portion and the calyx, run the stem first through the former, then through the latter and put a drop of glue in the hole to secure them to the stem.

Veins on the flower cup are marked with the point of the knitting needle and then the petals are rolled up at the edges over the needle and the round head of the awl is pressed into each petal to give it the cuplike appearance. Lay them aside to dry and the flower is ready to use. A piece of wire is glued to the center of each leaf on the under side so that it can be bent in shape and the leaf veins are marked with the knitting needle.

If you like, after the flowers are dry, they can be tinted with watercolor paint, and if you make the leaves of white kid they also can be tinted green.

Make the flowers and leaves up into a cluster or wreath for your hat. Beads can be introduced to represent berries, and you can make a variety of flowers by using different colored kid or tinting white in any shade you like best.

The work is not difficult, but forms delightful amusement for the woman who loves to make dainty things with her fingers.

Fastening Skirts and Yokes

SKIRTS and dresses have an unpleasant way of splitting down below the limit allowed for the placket hole, no matter how firmly they are stitched, and some thin fabrics require very careful handling, or the stitches show and look unsightly on the right side.

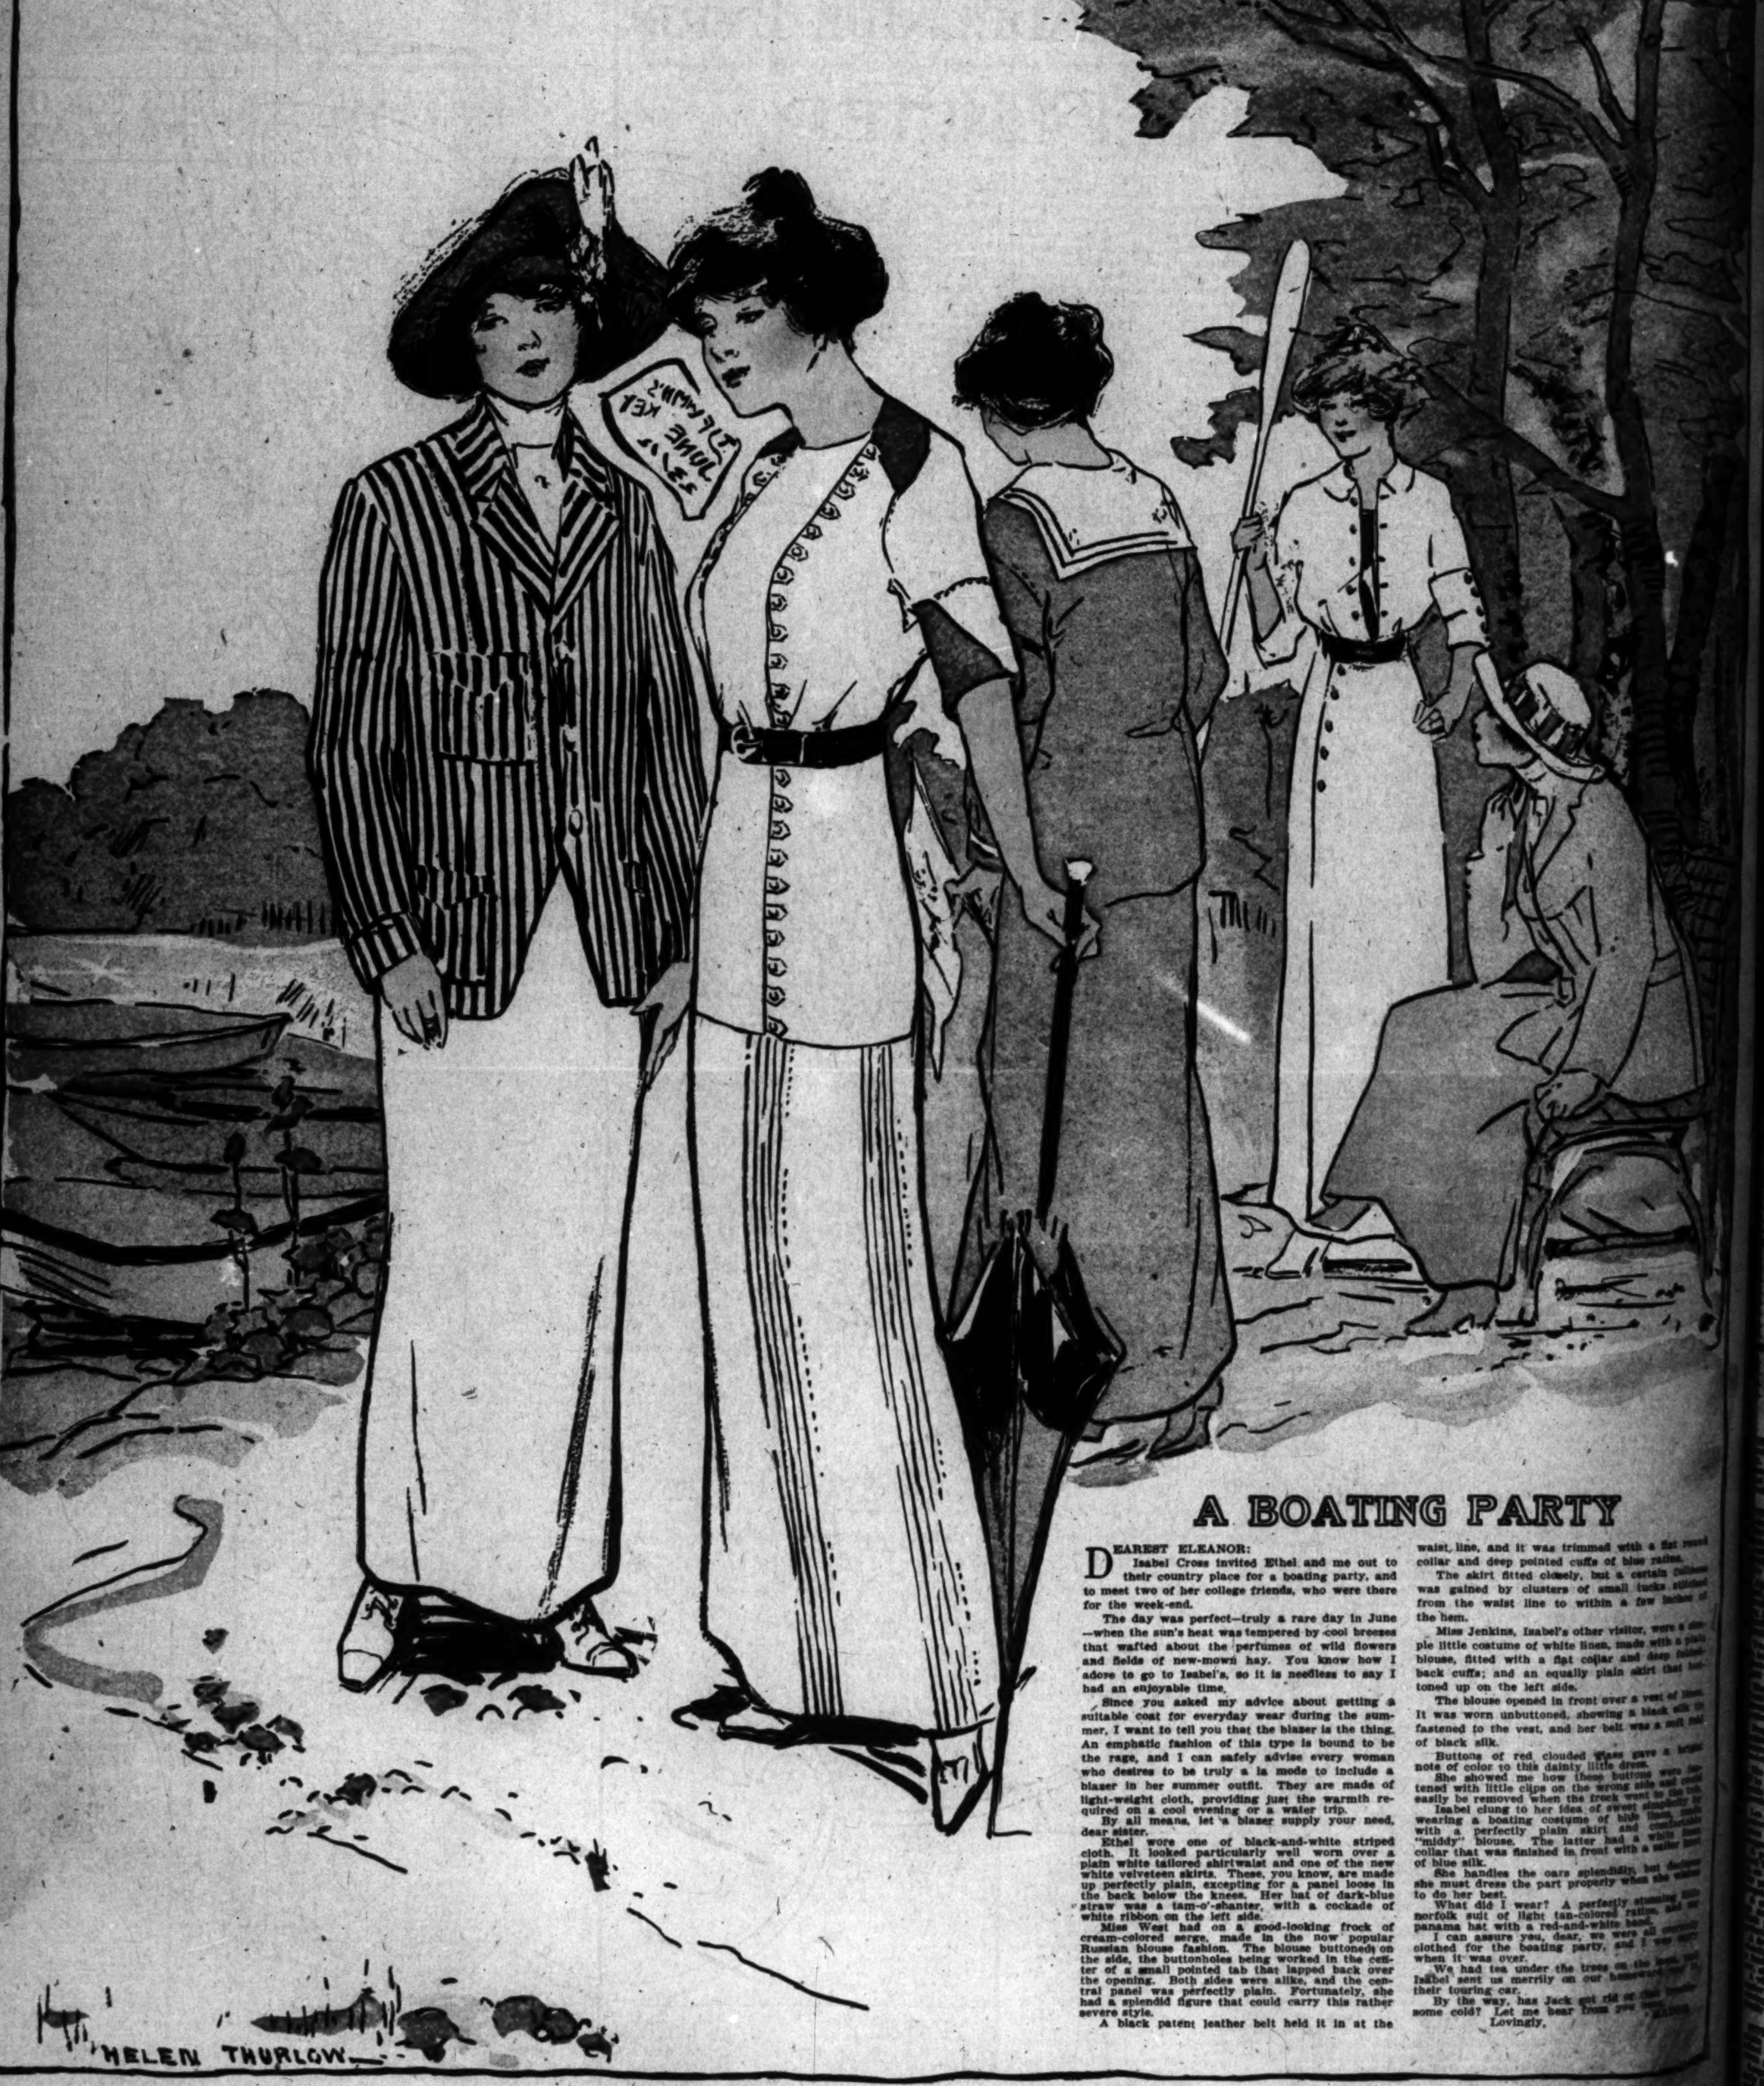
An excellent plan, and one by which all such trouble is avoided, is to sew a hook and eye at the extreme end of the placket, hook it together and pinch the hook tight so it cannot come undone. This will keep neat and prevent the opening from tearing down when the dress is slipped off and on.

When making a bodice with a lace yoke, a good plan instead of sewing it in is to sew snap fasteners on; then it can be removed and washed when it becomes soiled, without the trouble of ripping out stitches and sewing the yoke in again.

To keep the blouse in position around the waist line, get five patent fasteners and sew the pointed part to the waist line of the blouse and the eyelets to a piece of wide elastic, making them correspond in position to those on the blouse. Fasten the elastic with a hook and eye at the ends.

This is an excellent plan for a blouse that is not lined, as it allows it to rise and slip down again in position when the arms are raised or lowered.

The Smartest Fashions of Well-Dressed Folk



A BOATING PARTY

DEAREST ELEANOR:

Isabel Cross invited Ethel and me out to their country place for a boating party, and to meet two of her college friends, who were there for the week-end.

The day was perfect—truly a rare day in June—when the sun's heat was tempered by cool breezes that wafted about the perfumes of wild flowers and fields of new-mown hay. You know how I adore to go to Isabel's, so it is needless to say I had an enjoyable time.

Since you asked my advice about getting a suitable coat for everyday wear during the summer, I want to tell you that the blazer is the thing. An emphatic fashion of this type is bound to be the rage, and I can safely advise every woman who desires to be truly a la mode to include a blazer in her summer outfit. They are made of light-weight cloth, providing just the warmth required on a cool evening or a water trip.

By all means, let a blazer supply your need, dear sister.

Ethel wore one of black-and-white striped cloth. It looked particularly well worn over a plain white tailored shirtwaist and one of the new white velveteen skirts. These, you know, are made up perfectly plain, excepting for a panel loose in the back below the knees. Her hat of dark-blue straw was a tam-o'-shanter, with a cockade of white ribbon on the left side.

Miss West had on a good-looking frock of cream-colored serge, made in the now popular Russian blouse fashion. The blouse buttoned on the side, the buttonholes being worked in the center of a small pointed tab that lapped back over the opening. Both sides were alike, and the central panel was perfectly plain. Fortunately, she had a splendid figure that could carry this rather severe style.

A black patent leather belt held it in at the waist line, and it was trimmed with a flat round collar and deep pointed cuffs of blue ratine.

The skirt fitted closely, but a certain fullness was gained by clusters of small tucks stitched from the waist line to within a few inches of the hem.

Miss Jenkins, Isabel's other visitor, wore a simple little costume of white linen, made with a plain blouse, fitted with a flat collar and deep folded-back cuffs; and an equally plain skirt that buttoned up on the left side.

The blouse opened in front over a vest of linen. It was worn unbuttoned, showing a black silk tie fastened to the vest, and her belt was a soft fold of black silk.

Buttons of red clouded glass gave a bright note of color to this dainty little dress.

She showed me how these buttons were fastened with little clips on the wrong side and could easily be removed when the frock went to the tub.

Isabel clung to her idea of sweet simplicity by wearing a boating costume of blue linen, made with a perfectly plain skirt and comfortable "middy" blouse. The latter had a white linen collar that was finished in front with a sailor knot of blue silk.

She handles the oars splendidly, but declares she must dress the part properly when she wishes to do her best.

What did I wear? A perfectly stunning little norfolk suit of light tan-colored ratine, and my panama hat with a red-and-white band.

I can assure you, dear, we were all correctly clothed for the boating party, and I was sorry when it was over.

We had tea under the trees on the lawn, and Isabel sent us merrily on our homeward way in their touring car.

By the way, has Jack got rid of that troublesome cold? Let me hear from you soon.

Lovingly,

[illegible]
